THE WORKING-MAN'S IDEAL HOBBY: "CAGE BIRDS" TELLS YOU ALL ABOUT IT. 1D.

CAGE BIRDS

& BIRD WORLD. The LEADING JOURNAL

Devoted to CANARIES, HYBRIDS, British & Foreign Cage & Wild Birds.

Telegrams—AVICULTURE, London. Telephone—5229 Holborn. Registered at the G.P.O.

VOL. XXII. No. 555 For week ending August 31st, 1912. Price 1d. Subscription 6/6 per ann. post free.

A NOTED LINNET MULE.

This bird, the property of Mr. W. H. Pickles, of Morcambe, did well on the show-bench, being high in the honours list at Liverpool, Carlisle, the Horticultural Hall and other shows.

A SOUTH COUNTRY LINNET.

This typical specimen won many prizes for Mr. C. Botting, of Billericay, including 1st and cup at the City and Suburban Show, 1st at Dulwich and Peckham, 2nd at the London Federation Show, etc.

F. CARL, Publisher, 154, Fleet Street, London E.C.

DEPOSIT SYSTEM.

We are not responsible for the statements made in advertisements, nor of the bona-fides of either buyers or sellers In all transactions the adoption of our Deposit System should be insisted upon

IMPORTANT.

SEND THE FULL COMMISSION.—If the full commission does not accompany the deposit, the vendor will not be notified of its receipt until the amount deficient, plus the extra postage incurred, has been paid to us.

HOW TO REMIT.—Under no circumstances will Cheques or Post-dated Money Orders be accepted as deposits. Uncrossed Postal Orders must be sent and the numbers taken for safety.

RULES.

1.—PROCEDURE.—The intending purchaser should send to this office the amount of the purchase (our deposit fee included), and at the same time he should communicate with the seller, stating what it is he requires sent on approval. We acknowledge receipt of the deposit to both parties. In all cases the depositor should give his name and address, and also that of the vendor, and must write same clearly and distinctly.

2.—END OF TRANSACTION.—The deposit is retained by us until we hear from both parties that the transaction has been completed. If a sale has been effected, we hand the amount deposited to the seller. If a sale has not been effected, we return the amount to the depositor. The transaction must be conducted by the parties themselves. We merely hold the deposit.

3.—AMOUNT OF COMMISSION.—The fee is 6d. for each £1, or fraction of £1, and it must be sent at same time as the deposit.

4.—IMPORTANT POINTS.—The depositor must decide within forty-eight hours of the receipt of the goods whether he will keep or return the same, unless, that is, some other period of approval (of which we must be advised) is agreed upon by both parties. The depositor must at the same time notify us of the fact that he has returned the goods. If the goods are not returned within the said forty-eight hours, we reserve the right to send the deposit to the seller after the expiration of that period. And should the seller fail within three days to notify us of the receipt of his goods back again, the transaction will be treated as ended, and the deposit will be returned to the depositor.

5.—A SATISFACTORY PURCHASE.—When a transaction has been completed to the satisfaction of both depositor and seller, both parties must at once return the deposit receipts as a guarantee of its completion. The depositor must at the same time instruct us to pay over the deposit to the seller.

6.—GOODS ALREADY SOLD.—If the goods are sold before our deposit note reaches the seller, or if for any other reason he declines to do business, he must at once return the deposit note to us. Failing its receipt, we reserve the right to return the deposit to the sender after the expiration of three days.

7.—FRESH TRANSACTION.—In case no sale be effected, a deposit is available for purposes of a fresh transaction, provided another deposit fee be paid.

8.—GOODS IN TRANSIT.—Goods in transit are at the seller's risk, and any damage or loss sustained on the journey must be borne by the seller. But goods not approved of must be properly packed and returned by the same means as were used in sending the same.

9.—PAYMENT OF CARRIAGE.—The payment of carriage must be a matter for arrangement between the seller and depositor. We do not undertake to [illegible] affecting question of carriage. But [illegible] of other arrangements the purchaser [illegible] carriage of the goods, and if the [illegible] approval and returned, each party [illegible] way.

[illegible] case of a dispute, the de[illegible] final.

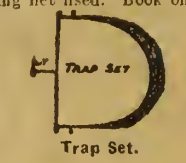
AS YOU KNOW



low prices do not always mean cheapness, but when you get lowest prices and highest quality combined you have the essence of cheapness. So confident am I of the superior quality of my goods over that of other makers that I invite every intending purchaser to have any of my goods on approval, and if in their opinion the goods are not of highest value obtainable to smash them up and I will willingly refund their money. Clap nets made from specially knitted ¾-mesh fine thread netting, 3 yards long, 5½ feet deep, and 4 feet fly, 4/- pair; ditto 4 yards long, 5/-; 5 yards, 6/-; 6 yards, 7/-; 7 yards, 8/-; 8 yards, 9/-; 9 yards, 10/-; 10 yards, 11/- per pair. All clap nets have two nets to the pair, each guaranteed of above stated size and all fitted complete with all pegs, poles, and lines ready for immediate use. These are the only nets on the market that are properly armed or geared all round. Loose netting specially knit from 60's 3-ply thread ¾-inch mesh, 7 feet deep, 8d. yard; ditto, 9 feet deep, 4d. yard; ditto, 12 feet deep, 5d. yard; extra stout netting for use on rough ground, ¾-mesh, 10 feet deep, 5d. yard. Lark netting, 1½-inch mesh, 12 feet deep, 4d. yard; all netting post free. My netting is the only netting on the market having a plain single selvedge, thus doing away with all cut edges. Sparrow nets, fitted on 17 feet bamboo poles, 5/6; ditto on 19 feet poles, 6/6 complete; self acting spring net traps, 24 by 18 inches, 1/2 each; three 3/-; ditto, 18 by 14 inches, 10d. each; three, 2/3 carriage paid. These net traps can be used with call bird inside if desired, and can be baited for hardbills and softbills at same time. Genuine Japanese bird lime, guaranteed strongest lime made, will stand all weathers and hold birds in pouring rain; ¼lb. 6d., ½lb. 10d., 1lb. 1/6, sample 3d.; all post free. This lime must not be confused with that sold by others as Japanese. If you do not buy from me, rest assured that you are not getting the real thing, as I have no agents. Single trap cages 6d. each, 5/- dozen; double ditto 1/- each, 9/- dozen; treble ditto 1/3 each, 12/- dozen; all with separate compartment for call bird, in addition to traps stated. Patent self-setting and self-acting trap cages (Reg. No. 23927), guaranteed to automatically reset immediately each bird is caught, 1/6 each. Real Italian hemp pull lines, specially spun, free from snarl and strong as boat lines, 1/4 each post free. Bird calls for imitating call and song of any bird, 2d. each; twelve 1/- post free. Flirt pegs and lines, stave poles, and everything required by catchers in stock; send stamp for full descriptive list, which also gives hints on net making. Remember, all the leading professional catchers purchase their appliances from me, so follow their lead and get yours from the man who knows exactly what is required for successful catching. All on approval, and if not satisfactory, you smash them up and I refund money in full. (Imitators, please copy.)

Real German Rollers, the best in England, singing grand, a treat to hear, with quality notes, 4/6 each, taught by the winner of 50 first prizes; everybody delighted. Linnets from the same place as the champion Linnet of the world, they make the gamest Linnets ever carried to contest. For length of turns, and form they stand alone, and for voice have no equal; this class of bird has won the English Derby and all the English championships, and the world's greatest contest; all the recognised judges say they are equal to the finest German Rollers; they are at working-men's prices, 1/-, 1/6, and real toppers 2/-; Linnets taught by the world's champion, with new cage, 3/6; a few extra specials, right for catching, 4/6. Exhibitors, try my A1 specials for the bench; these are the largest Linnets in England, without a doubt, 2/- each; real English pear-tree cock Goldfinches, the largest in England, 2/-, real gems, 3/-; beautiful cock Larks, singing daylight and gaslight, steady as rocks, 1/6 and 2/-; a few with quality notes, cannot be beaten, 3/- Larks, real winners for the bench, 2/6; testimonials every post; all kinds of British and Foreign birds in stock. P.C. before birds, only honest dealings done with me, so write to your old friend: Harry Allen, Bird Specialist and Judge, City Aviaries, 40, Beckett-st., Leeds.

DO YOU WANT

thoroughly healthy, reliable birds that are guaranteed properly on hard seed before being sent? If so, give me a trial. I send all on approval at my risk on receipt of cash or deposit system of this paper, and return money in full if entire satisfaction not given. Genuine Worcestershire cock Goldfinches, in perfect condition, 1/6 each, three 4/-, six 6/6, twelve 12/-; specially selected large cocks, for moulting for show, muling, or song, 2/- each, three 5/-, six 8/6. Two-year-old cock Goldfinch, call bird, 2/6; hen Goldfinches, 1/- each, three 2/-, six 3/6, twelve 6/-. Splendid lot cock Bullfinches, 1/6 and 2/- each; hen Bullfinches, 1/- each; handsome lot cock Brown Linnets, 8d. each, three 1/6, six 2/6, twelve 3/6. Specially selected cocks for show or singing, 1/- each, three 2/-, six 3/6. Goldfinch, Linnet, and Bullfinch cages, 6d. each, 5/- dozen. Lark Runner cages, 4/-, 5/- dozen. Please note: All birds are guaranteed properly netted in county of Worcester by catchers employed solely by myself and are not sent out until feeding thoroughly well on the usual seed mixture. This latter is a very important item during this wet season, as it takes weeks to wean birds from the rain-sodden seeds they are now feeding on in wild state. This also explains why I have not previously advertised birds for sale, as they were not then on hard seed. To avoid disappointment, patronise the man who has 21 years' reputation to uphold. No connection whatever with any other advertiser.

A VITAL point in the successful keeping of Softbills (and particularly the smaller and more delicate species), is proper feeding. For that reason keepers of Softbills should not be without "Nutshell No. 25." If you study the hints given therein by H. J. Fulljames you simply cannot have feeding troubles. All the best-known of the smaller insectivorous birds are dealt with in this booklet, which also tells you how to collect ants' eggs and discusses the various cages and hand rearing, 2d. from agents (list frequently published), or 2½d. post free from "Cage Birds," 154, Fleet-st., London, E.C.

SOFTBILL keepers, take expert advice before proceeding to buy and keep the larger species of insectivorous birds. You will then have no trouble in keeping your pets in the best of health. This advice is offered in "Nutshell No. 26," by H. J. Fulljames. It is a wonderful little work, dealing with most varieties in a highly interesting and instructive manner. Foods and their preparation, and the various styles of cages also receive full attention. Can you breed Mealworms? This booklet tells you how. Post free, 2½d., from "Cage Birds," 154, Fleet-st., London, E.C. Look at our list of agents; call on the nearest and get it for 2d.

PARROT PROBLEM

solved. For full proofs send postcard at once for my large book, "Parrot Prattle." This is the most wonderful book ever offered free of all charge to all Parrot fanciers. (This "Parrot Prattle" is registered copyright, and all infringers and imitators will be proceeded against). It contains hundreds of testimonials from all parts with full names and addresses, many interesting facts, and gives valuable advice and hints to all Parrot buyers. Full details of our original system of selling Parrots on four weeks' trial, at our risk, which we were the first to introduce. We sell Parrots of all descriptions on four weeks' trial, at our risk, before settlement. Cheapest and best in the Kingdom, and any Parrot sold by us and not giving full satisfaction, will be exchanged any time within twelve months. Remember we lead and others try to follow. Write to other dealers as well as us, and judge for yourselves. Lists of Parrots for sale and above book post free on receipt of postcard. Telephone No. 40 Morecambe.

PARROT AVIARIES, MORECAMBE

BOOKLET FREE.

Finest Talking Parrots. I only deal in Parrots that will make first-class talkers; no rubbish. I am willing at all time to send my Parrots on four week's trial and three months' talking guarantee. Why? Because all my Parrots are young, strong, and reliable. My lifetime has been spent among Grey Parrots, both at home and abroad. I guarantee every customer every satisfaction. Grey Parrots are my special fancy. I have trained them, know their wants, and can give every purchaser a bird that will please him in every way. I can supply grey talkers, not thinkers, that will say almost anything, at reasonable prices. Before you purchase a grey or green Parrot, send for my Booklet, entitled "Talking Parrots." All my birds are sent on four week's trial, at my risk. Send postcard for catalogue.—Mrs. Forster, Princes Park Aviaries, Violet Street, Liverpool.

Practical Handbooks for Bird Lovers.

Brief particulars of some of "Cage Birds" SPECIAL PUBLICATIONS for keepers of birds, with post free prices.

AVIARIES, BIRD-ROOMS, AND CAGES, 2/3 (cloth gilt).—By H. Norman. Contains ten lovely full-page photographic plates. A practical guide which deals thoroughly with the proper Building, Fitting, and Management of Aviaries and Bird-rooms, and the making of Cages.

YORKSHIRE CANARIES, 1/1½.—By H. W. Battye (Past President of the Yorkshire Union). Absolutely the very best Handbook dealing with the Yorkshire and its sub-varieties. Contains complete instructions upon Pairing, Breeding, Moulting, and successful Exhibiting, also how to treat in both health and disease.

NORWICH CANARIES, 1/1.—By C. A. House. Tells the fancier all that he needs to know to enable him to become successful as a breeder and exhibitor of the Norwich Plainhead. The chapters on "Forming a Stud," and "How to Produce the Ideal" are worth the cost of the whole book many times over.

THE SECRETS OF HYBRID BREEDING REVEALED AND EXPLAINED.—By many notable Mule and Hybrid Breeders. Among the contributors are such well-known breeders as Messrs. R. Colton, W. H. Vale, C. Houlton, C. J. Ward, J. Beswick, G. Lander, T. H. Kinch, T. Smith, etc. This Handbook, which contains 212 pages, 7 inches by 5, is brimful of the most practical information on the highly interesting subject of Hybrid Breeding. Price 1/-, post free 1/2.

PARROTS FOR PLEASURE AND PROFIT, 7d.—By C. P. Arthur. A practical handbook, dealing with the keeping, feeding, and general treatment of the Grey, the Amazon, etc. It explains how to sex these birds, the treatment of newly imported specimens, and cures for their various ills.

SEEDS, FOODS, AND WILD PLANTS FOR CAGE BIRDS, 1/2. — By various leading authors. Full information on the seeds suitable for all cage birds, their food values, uses, etc., with descriptions and illustrations of the wild plants indispensable to the successful keeping of British and other birds.

HOUSE'S CANARY MANUAL, 1/2.—By C. A. House. A thorough, practical guide to the general management and breeding of Canaries, dealing fully with the breeding, etc., of every member of the Canary family, including the Roller (or Singing) Canary. An illustration of each bird, by the master Canary artist, Mr. H. Norman; exhaustive chapters on aviaries and cages, breeding procedure, moulting, exhibiting, diseases, and seeds—a compendium of knowledge.

BUDGERIGARS AND COCKATEELS, 6d.—By C. P. Arthur. The breeding of Budgerigars and Cockatecls is recognised as one of the most profitable and pleasure-giving sides of foreign bird-keeping. This eminent authority gives very full details upon how to keep, feed, breed, tame, and teach them to talk.

FOREIGN BIRDS FOR BEGINNERS, 1/1½.—By W. T. Page, F.Z.S., etc., Foreign Bird Expert to "Cage Birds." A highly instructive Manual. It contains a magnificent coloured plate and a number of black and white illustrations. Indispensable to all keepers of Foreign Birds. Replete with useful hints.

BRITISH BIRD MANUAL, 2/3 (cloth bound).—By H. Norman; or may be had in two parts. Part 1: "Hardbills," and Part 2: "Softbills." Either Part, price 1/1, post free. Each part contains a beautiful and life-like coloured plate and numerous illustrations of birds and cages. Up-to-date information on the keeping of British Birds; full of extremely valuable hints.

THE STOCK BOOK, 7d.—By G. E. Weston. Of our invaluable "Breeding Room Register" a well known fancier has said:—"It makes bird-breeding easy." No breeder of birds can possibly afford to be without it. It simplifies the operations in the bird-room and makes it possible for everyone, even the veriest novice, to breed his birds as they should be bred. Contains both Pedigree, Breeding, Young Bird, and Show Registers of simple and unique character, in addition to useful account pages, and many invaluable "Hints for Emergencies."

Some Favourite British Seed-eaters.

A Lecture delivered by Mr. H. J. Chittenden, a well-known fancier and judge, before the Leeds C.B.S.

A Tale of a Twite.

I remember many years ago being invited to a Linnet-singing contest at York. My brother, who is also a bird fancier, and a resident in York, informed me that at this contest a bird that had caused rather a sensation among the fanciers in that city, stated to be a Hybrid between Twite and Linnet, and which had changed hands for £2 10s. was going to sing. Well, after there had been such controversy about it, and also a law case, I was rather anxious to see it. Directly we got in the meeting I was shown a Linnet. After commenting on it, another was handed over with the remark: "That's a fine Linnet." I knew this must be the bird, for it was a Twite. Somebody remarked: "Well, what do you think to it?" I replied: "Not much; I will sell you a score at sixpence each." What the owner thought I cannot say.

The Charming Siskin.

A charming bird is the Siskin. There are two colours, yellow and buff, but I much prefer a yellow, one that is laced right down the flanks, with a neat round head and full neck (avoid those which have the least tendency to be scraggy in neck). It must have good quality feather and be clean cut away behind, also a good sound colour. To get the extra bit of colour, I put just a pinch of pepper in a glass with maw seed.

You will find a great difficulty in getting a Siskin with a clean defined bib; I prefer one similar in shape to a thumbnail. In any case the bib must be of good shape for the bird to have any chance in the keen competition that exists at the majority of our open shows. But you will have great difficulty in getting such a bird; very good Siskins are very hard to find.

Does the Siberian Score?

My favourite British bird is the Goldfinch, and I consider nothing looks better than a good show Goldie. He generally manages to take precedence over the Bullie if competing in the same class, especially if he be a good Siberian. I will describe to you how to pick out the foreigner. The whites are pure, much clearer than in the Britisher, which seem to be more of a smoky white. The Siberian is also much larger mooned than the Britisher and a bigger bird altogether.

Now, if I were going to pick out a Goldfinch for moulting, I should get a small Siberian, and take care he was not too long in the beak, with a good big head, wings well braced, neat pipe tail, with a square blaze extending well beyond the eyes, unbroken, and a good rich colour, wing bars large and of a deep yellow, buttons distinct and regular, and of the Norwich type. Such a bird would be a first-class specimen, if of good sound feather, nice and clean at thighs, and possessing that hard condition that is needed so to stand the travelling about to and from shows. It is a common thing for a good bird to do as many as nine shows in one season.

Getting Goldfinches into Condition.

To get my Goldfinches into this condition I feed them on Spanish canary, teasel, and occasionally a few sunflower seeds. I give very little hemp, as I find this seed is more or less inclined to be rancid. Early on a morning I get out into the country lanes and gather insects, placing these in a tin. A good plan is to take an umbrella and place it directly under a thorn or bramble bush. You will find the bramble is generally covered with green fly. Just give the bush a shake and you will have a good supply of insect life to meet your requirements in the upturned umbrella. I also take a paper bag along with me to hold the wild seeds which our Goldies are so partial to; shepherd's purse and charlock are quite easy to gather. The fancier who will take the trouble to do as I have stated will be amply rewarded by seeing his birds in the pink of condition. It is also the surest way to get your hen Bullfinches into rank breeding condition.

Getting Ready for Show.

When preparing for the show bench, spray him, and after allowing him to get dry, groom well with a soft silk handkerchief; repeat the process as necessary. To keep them in that good condition, I give a mealworm now and again. If you find any difficulty in getting any of your British birds to tackle the mealworm, just hold him in your hand, and he will at once commence to peck your finger. So hold a mealworm within reach, and if he succeeds in bursting it and tastes the juicy morsel, your difficulty is over in that direction. The show cage I prefer is much narrower from back to front than the ordinary. By having them so, you will find they come up to wires much better, and keep more on the go.

Success with an Outdoor Aviary.

By H. L. Brown (Exmouth).

How to House and Cater for Canaries, British & Foreign Birds Outdoors

Let me warn you against one or two pitfalls in buying your birds for muling. The Britishers should be cocks, Canaries taking the part of the hens. One British hen in an aviary will spoil your chance of breeding from cocks of the same species. Next, don't buy rubbish; buy good healthy picked birds.

One or two more "don'ts" before I say anything about what to obtain:—Don't have a cock Chaffinch unless specially desired, as they are sometimes very quarrelsome; the same, only more so, may be said of the Robin.

If you Hanker after Mules.

For muling and hybridising, the following list is a useful one:—Two Goldfinches, two Linnets, two Greenfinches, two Siskins, one Twite, one Lesser Redpoll, one Mealy Redpoll, and, if you wish to be sporting, try one cock Bullfinch, but I do not expect you to have much success with the latter.

House-moulted specimens are, of course, much superior to fresh caught birds. For this dozen cocks, twenty-four hen Canaries would be sufficient.

If you wish to try your hand at obtaining Hybrids, substitute hen Greenfinches for the cocks of that species, discard the cock Bullfinch in favour of four hen Bullies, decrease the hen Canaries accordingly, and there you are. A good Bramblefinch and two hen Chaffinches might also be added.

In selecting your hen Canaries, approach a good Norwich fancier, and buy some good young hens, size being the most important point. Personally I favour Greens for dark muling; next, buy some good pink-eyed Sib. hens for light muling; you may have to pay more for the latter, but it increases the interest if one has the chance of breeding a light mule or two. Besides the foregoing list there are other birds which may be added without extra trouble, but they must be regarded as non-breeders. A nice Bramblefinch, Yellow Bunting, Cirl Bunting, Reed Bunting, Corn Bunting, etc.; these will all eat canary seed and it is surprising what a number of insects they will catch for themselves in so small an area. A few mealworms may be added to their diet, but I do not find it absolutely necessary in an outdoor aviary, although it improves condition.

Insectivorous birds may, of course, also be kept, but I must warn the beginner that if he attempts it he must be very diligent. Egg and biscuit, crushed hemp, mealworms, and a good insectile mixture will, it is quite true, usually satisfy the most fastidious feeder, but, remember, it must be mixed fresh for each feed.

Sweet and Interesting.

Try a few of the commoner species first, say a pair of Wagtails. The egg and biscuit, crushed hemp, and two mealworms a day will be found quite sufficient for them. I have kept Wheatears on a similar diet.

Many varieties of foreigners may be kept out of doors, although the aviary may be slightly heated with great advantage during the colder weather.

Foreigners, especially the smallest ones, are very sweet and interesting little things. The following, amongst others:—Cutthroats (otherwise Ribbon Finches), Silver-bills, Weavers, Zebra Finches, Saffron Finches, Avadavats, Java Sparrows, both grey and white, Budgerigars, green and yellow; all these may be successfully kept out of doors, although the two latter species are inclined to be murderous, especially when breeding.

Foreigners will usually rear their young on millet, etc., their usual diet, without additional assistance, but it is always better and safer to supply live ants' eggs whenever possible.

In the Depth of Winter.

I have seen Java Sparrows and Budgies breeding in an outdoor aviary in Devonshire in the depth of winter. I cannot say from recollection whether they had young or merely eggs, but I believe both were in evidence.

I think I had now better pass on to the management of the various species touched upon, and I think it will be seen that if one were merely wishing to keep all or any of the foregoing together it could be done, but I do not consider that breeding would be carried on with much degree of success.

For example, Mules cannot be bred if there are Canaries breeding in the aviary. Like naturally breeds with like; crosses can only be obtained where there is not another of the opposite sex of the same species in the aviary.

I think it is better, and likely to be more successful, if the young fancier confines himself to one branch of the hobby.

I intend dealing with the management in the same order as the stock.

A Very Useful Seed Mixture.

Firstly, Canaries. Let us take the following diet as a staple one:—Two parts canary, one part hemp, and one part rape; it keeps the birds warm in winter, brings them into breeding condition in spring, is the best mixture during the breeding season, and only requires an addition of linseed and maw to turn it into a good moulting mixture. Niger seed may be given as a titbit. Of course, before and during breeding egg food must be supplied; one egg to four or five Osborne biscuits is about right for outdoor birds.

When I have young hatching, I put a small tin of egg food near the hen, not near enough for her to eat it without coming off, as that might make her sweat her young. I seldom find other birds interfere with her, as they seem to have a certain amount of respect for each other's breeding quarters.

Do not be afraid to supply plenty of fresh green food in bottles every morning; change the water in the bottles every morning; birds outdoors can take more and a greater variety of green food without harm than those in cages. See it is quite dry and free from frost. I find young tender dandelion and chickweed in flower the most appreciated by Canaries.

CAGE BIRDS LEAGUE

THE HARD CASE OF R.S.P.C.A. VICTIMS.

League Medals for the Shows.

NOTES BY THE SECRETARY.

Patrons: Mrs. TINNISWOOD MILLER, London; The Hon. MARY HAWKE, Tadcaster; Sir R. J. CORBET, Bart., Shrewsbury; E. J. BROOK, Esq., Ecclefechan; The Rev. G. H. RAYNOR, M.A., Maldon; A. EZRA, Esq., London; HAROLD BLACKETT, Esq., Sunninghill; Vice-Presidents: Mrs. M. B. PARTRIDGE, Worthing; Miss C. M. E. HILL, Exeter; H. D. ASTLEY, Esq., M.A., F.Z.S., M.B.O.U., Newbury; G. E. RATTIGAN, Esq., London; C. Cushny, Esq., London; J. MACE, Esq., Sheffield; W. H. RAVEN, Esq., Nottingham; LACY RUMSEY, Esq., Oporto; MAURICE AMSLER, Esq., M.B., Eton; MALCOLM ROBERTS, Esq., M.A., Baron's Court; E. BAKER, Esq., Cowes; M. THOMSON, Esq., Dunedin, New Zealand.

Another New Hon. Sec.

I am pleased to hear from Mr. R. Mannion, 5, Wheat Street, Padiham, Lancs., that he is willing to act as hon. sec. to CAGE BIRDS LEAGUE for his district, and am glad to add his name to our already long list. Readers in Padiham may get from Mr. Mannion our leaflets setting forth our aims and objects, and I hope that many among the local fanciers will join us.

The R.S.P.C.A. Gets Another Rebuff.

In another column appears a report of a case brought by the Royal Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals against a bird dealer for having in his possession two Owls that appeared to be "recently taken." Mr. Barnes was prepared with evidence that not only had the birds not been "recently taken," but that they had not been taken in this country at all. He had them for sale for a customer who had imported them from Germany. But, although the magistrate dismissed the summons, after hearing the case for the prosecution, without even calling on the defence, yet Mr. Barnes has had to pay his own costs, besides having the worry and trouble of appearing to the summons. The costs of the prosecution come, of course, out of the money of subscribers to the R.S.P.C.A., and in cases which are so abortive as to call for no defence, it seems hard that the society should not also have to pay the costs of its victims up to the time of the hearing. If the case is proved, the defendant is liable to a heavy fine, with or without imprisonment with hard labour, and if he is prepared to prove his innocence up to the hilt, and that guiltlessness is so apparent to the magistrate after hearing only one side of the case that he does not wish to hear the other, the defendant has still to pay his own costs. This would not be so in a civil action, and it is difficult to understand why it should be so in a criminal one.

The Show Season and Our Medals.

The show season will soon be upon us, and most societies are already preparing their schedules. Most societies, also, have members who are members of CAGE BIRDS LEAGUE, and are, therefore, entitled to one or more of our gold, silver, or bronze medals. If the secretaries of societies do not take the trouble to discover, before they publish their schedule, how many of these medals they are entitled to, they will only have themselves to blame. Obviously, I cannot find this out for myself, for members of the LEAGUE in any town may be members of their local society without my knowing it, and this information can only come through the secretaries themselves. Members may help by letting their secretaries know of their membership, so that application may be made.

The Signing of the Coupons.

Notwithstanding the very clearly expressed and simple conditions set forth in the coupon to be found in every issue of our journal, many readers are still sending them improperly filled up. In one day, recently, I received half-a-dozen parcels of coupons, all in the senders' own handwriting. Some are sending one coupon only, others two, three, or four, instead of the six. All readers are heartily welcome to take advantage of the offer made, but they must at least fulfil the conditions mentioned on the coupon.

TERMS OF MEMBERSHIP.

PATRONS.—A donation of not less than Ten Guineas in one amount, or an annual subscription of not less than Two Guineas, shall constitute the donor or subscriber a Patron.

LIFE MEMBERS.—A donation of not less than Five Guineas in one amount shall constitute the donor a Life Member.

VICE PRESIDENTS.—An annual subscription of not less than Half-a-Guinea shall constitute the subscriber a Vice President.

HONORARY LIFE MEMBERS.—The payment to CAGE BIRDS LEAGUE of a legacy of £20 and upwards shall constitute the administrator or executor making the payment an Honorary Life Member. A form of bequest will be sent, post free, on application.

ORDINARY MEMBERS shall pay an annual subscription of Two Shillings and Sixpence.

JUNIOR MEMBERS.—Members under the age of fourteen years at the date of joining shall pay an annual subscription of One Shilling.

BADGES.

Neat and unobtrusive badges are supplied to members, without any charge beyond their subscriptions as above. The badges may be had either in button form, or mounted in rolled gold in two forms, one as a brooch for ladies or for cycling caps or coat lapel, and the other as a pendant for bracelet or watch-chain. The kind required should be specified clearly.

MEDALS.

Gold, Silver, and Bronze Medals are offered for competition among CAGE BIRDS LEAGUE members at Open Shows. The terms under which these will be given may be had upon application.

CAGE BIRDS FREE TO PATRONS.

SEALS AND HEADED NOTEPAPER.

GUMMED SEALS printed in gold and colours in facsimile of the LEAGUE BADGE are supplied for affixing to note paper, postcards, or envelopes. Price eightpence per hundred, fivepence for fifty, post free.

The L. and P.O.S. autumn show, to be held on Oct. 23 and 24 at the Holborn Hall (late Town Hall), writes Mr. C. W. Law, hon. sec., will have exactly the same classification for novices as for champions. It will be open to all, and Messrs. T. Heath, J. Robson, and Allan Silver will judge. Full particulars in CAGE BIRDS shortly.

The number of unsolicited testimonials that have appeared in the columns of CAGE BIRDS bear witness to the fact that the policy of Mr. W. Rudd, the noted bird specialist, of Norwich, is to give the best possible value for money. He does not rely on high-flown statements, which are commonly called "claptrap"; this is what was emphasised in the heading to his appliance advertisement in last week's issue.

In sending the report of the show held by the Auckland (New Zealand) Canary and C.B.C., which appears in another column, Mr. Jansen writes:—Our season out here is exactly opposite to yours: we start to pair up in August and September. Thus our shows are just over, bar the nest feather in November and January. The Fancy has taken a great leap here lately, and I believe is going to further increase. CAGE BIRDS is eagerly looked for here, and I am sure your readers out here will heartily appreciate seeing that news from this side of the world is being published in England. Wishing your paper every success.

OBITUARY.

Mr. H. A. Smith.

We are sorry indeed to receive the following sad news from Mr. H. Smith, hon. sec., Wimbledon C.B.S. To Mr. Smith in his affliction we tender our sincere sympathies:—

I regret to inform you that my dear son, H. A. Smith (who has in the past assisted me as show secretary) passed away at 6.45 this evening (Aug. 2) in the West London Hospital. He was conveyed there on Friday last suffering from septic poisoning through having teeth extracted, and notwithstanding all that medical skill and careful nursing could do, passed away, as stated, after three operations. The blow is indeed too terrible to contemplate. He was twenty-two years of age, and the only child.

Mr. Smith asks us to thank those fanciers who have sent him letters of condolence.

Will all members and intending members of the Cinnamon Marked Y.C.C. note, writes Mr. R. Garnett, hon. sec., that I have now got our year book and lists of members in the printer's hands, and he will print same in a few days. I can still add new members' names and addresses if they will let me have the matter at once. We are running three competitions, with a number of really good prizes in each, with novice competition for Y.C.C. shows. The show season will soon be here. I want as many members as possible, so that we shall have competition for our prizes. We have only seven competition shows, but if patronage is applied for within the next few days, and all is in order, I can grant patronage to one or two more good shows, but not after our books are printed.

Told By, Not To, a Marine.

A story is going the rounds that a gunner of the Royal Marines witnessed the rescue by a Seagull of a Linnet that had fallen exhausted into the sea. The benevolent Gull picked the Linnet out of the water, soared over the ship, and dropped the nearly drowned bird into the rigging of the vessel. It settled on one of the yards, and soon recovered from the effects of its immersion.

CANARY CITY FLOODED.

It is with the deepest regret that we learn of the grave disaster which has befallen the city of Norwich, a disaster which we fear may have involved the stock of many breeders of the Canaries for which it is world famous. The havoc worked by the unprecedented floods in the city and its vicinity will already have been made known to our readers in the columns of the daily press. Owing to the dislocation of both telegraphic and telephonic means of communication, we have been unable before going to press with this issue to obtain any direct information as to losses sustained by the bird-keepers and breeders. We note, however, that the Exchange Telegraph Coy.'s correspondent says:—"It is estimated that thousands of rare and valuable Canaries for which Norwich is renowned have already perished." This news will be received with the greatest regret by bird-lovers the world over and we are sure fellow fanciers join us in conveying a message of heartfelt sympathy to those who have suffered at the hands of Dame Nature. We sincerely hope that the estimate of losses may prove to be vastly over-stated.

A Neat Green Food Holder.

Sent by H. S. Taylor, 13, White Hart Yard, Worksop.

A green-food holder which is easy to make and costs very little may be contrived with a short length of punched bar and some wire. Cut a piece of punched bar six holes long, one long piece of wire, and four pieces cut to any length required. With pliers, bend the long piece of wire as shown in Fig. 1 and solder it on to the piece of bar. Then solder the four short pieces to the punched bar, and to the long wire, and the rack is made. Fig. 1 shows it complete ready for fixing, and Fig. 2 the rack in position. The bottom edge of the rack is soldered to the cross bar of the cage, and the ends of the long wire are soldered to the cage wires where marked with a cross.

A Cheap Sprayer.

Sent by C. Warner, 168, Glenarm Road, Clapton Park.

Get a large cork and cut it half way down the middle and half way across, removing the portion thus cut out. Bore two holes at right angles to each other through the cork. Next take two goose quills (or anything else that will serve the same purpose), and insert them through the holes till they meet. In this way an excellent and cheap sprayer can be made. A, A, quills; B, cork.—C. Warner.

Aviary Observations

By W. SPILLMAN (Devonport).

An old hand talks about things in general, and gives some valuable advice to the younger generation.

IT must be just about a decade since I penned my last contribution under the above title. I sat then on the self-same rocks as I sit now, facing the sad sea waves. How things have changed in such a short period. Golf links are everywhere around here; houses have displaced the humble cottages; and, last, but not least, there is the hugo Whitsand Bay Hotel, which reminds one very much of the fancier who has a successful start, and comes a cropper in a year or two. Let this advice be taken in earnest, that its no use trying to run before you can walk. The fact of doing a bit of winning early in your career must not lead you to believe you are made. Some cannot stand success any more than they can failure. They buy hither and thither, and in a short space of time are conspicuous by their absence. Far better make a start in a modest way, and at the same time make a determined effort to hold your own in the near future. Always be ready to listen and learn. Quite recently I was glad to fall back on friends that knew more about the ills of the birdy frame than I do, and the result was all that could be desired. It is just at this time of the year that troubles are to be expected, so all the scribes warn you against the dreads of the moulting season. Personally, I believe that many of these arise from insufficient or improper food. I favour giving the young birds, directly they are taken away from their parents, water to which has been added a little Parrish's chemical food, and I never take them off soft food until the moult is over. The great mischief, in my opinion, is done when you try to get them on colour food too suddenly. They refuse to eat it, and, being unable to crack seed and digest hard seed, they die. Take at least a fortnight or three weeks to get them to full strength of colour feed, the maximum quantity to be three teaspoonfuls to one egg and biscuits. Such strength, providing it is used on the right material, will prove hot enough for the most fastidious.

Do not Blame the Judges.

The letters that appeared quite recently on "The Type of the Norwich Plainhead" have been very interesting. As regards judging, I contend it is as even as ever we may expect it to be, in spite of the fact that our Cornish friend says that one bird suits Mr. H., another Mr. R., and yet another Mr. P. Really, this is the height of imagination, for if you fit names to these initials, and tack Mr. G. to the three aforenamed gentlemen, I think you will have the finest quartette that England can produce. If they were to judge, say, eight classes of Norwich to-day, I am sure their awards would compare favourably one with the other. Doesn't our friend generally find the same names appear in the money at the shows in his own county?

Even marks have also been praised, and I quite agree with the writer, they are about the handsomest of any variety of Canary. I was reading "Our Canaries" early in the year, and I was so forcibly struck with the remarks on this beautiful bird that I decided there and then to have a good try. Perhaps it has landed me with pretty much marked stock, but the result may be termed generally satisfactory. In conversation with an old friend about the season's doings, he jocularly asked "If you get them, where can you show them?" Most schedules read "unevenly marked." I have seen four fairly even marks in one nest, and have had two decent specimens myself, but my then fortunate friend in the 'nineties has given up cage birds and taken up non-sitters.

Staging not Everything.

The novice may say it is of no use having a good bird, unless one is an expert in staging. True, that always holds good, but I trust it may be a sort of a consolation when I say I did not wash a bird for show the whole of last season, and so far as the winning I did, it was about a record.

Yellows seem to be rather scarce, for if you take the sample of last year you could count the good ones on your finger tips. Are breeders double-buffing to that extent to make such a marked difference? I hope they won't carry it too far and regret it.

Visiting one another's rooms, as a source of education and pleasure, I would favour more than seems usual, for what is better than an ocular demonstration on the past season's doings, especially when the birds are fining down? It is easier to judge other people's birds than your own. You can also see whence the good ones come, and, if necessary, make notes of how they are bred. By the bye, I was passing a neighbour's house quite recently, and the good lady asked me if I would look at her bird as it had stopped singing. To my agreeable surprise, there was to be seen something really good; in fact, had I known such an aristocrat lived so handy, his services may have been in demand. I made inquiries as to from whom she had bought it, and she said her husband had won it in a draw. Here is a striking case of good stuff lying idle. Probably its parents were bought at a high figure, but for some unknown reason the owner was compelled to sell.

A Hope for the Future.

In another couple of months the show season will be at hand, and let us hope we shall see a marked improvement in type, coupled with size, for one without the other is not wanted. Don't stage the great long-sided ones and expect them to get in the money, and then say "I thought Mr. —— liked a big 'un." That may be so, but he likes a bit of shape and quality besides.

As a concluding remark, I may say I prefer citrate of iron to sulphate of iron for assisting and fixing the colour, as it has the same effect without bringing about constipation, and the late Mr. North always thought the same.

Moulting & Exhibiting British Finches.

Some views on various phases by those well-known fanciers, Messrs. A. and F. Hartley, of Haworth, Yorks.

WE think that the British Finches moult better in the open air. If they are moulted in the open, the cages should be covered so as to keep off rain. The birds should be out of reach of cats, and in such a position that cats cannot look at them. If they can be under a shed with a wire-netting front it will be best, as this keeps off cats and is also useful in case a bird escapes from its cage. There should be some means of keeping off strong sunlight, which spoils the colour. An arrangement of light cloths is best, as you then get a fairly good, but diffused light, which is just what is wanted.

Exercise and the Moult.

With regard to moulting cages, we prefer the large ones, as these give the birds plenty of room to exercise. Having got the birds into their moulting quarters, we must see about the food. Their ordinary seeds should be given, and in addition to this a large quantity of wild foods. The Goldie should have plenty of hard heads, thistle, and groundsel. Give berries, such as black, privet, elder, and bilberry, in plenty to Bullies. These will produce more colour than red feed. Docken and other wild seeds should be given freely. In every case the screenings from the threshing machine should be given, as the birds enjoy picking them over. The bath should be given, but care must be taken to keep the birds out of a draught, as they easily take cold during the moult. If there is any dust about, the cages may be covered with a light cloth. The foods which have been given during the moult must be continued for some time after the birds have finished moulting.

With regard to show cages (if you have not already got any) any good cage-maker will make standard British show cages. These should be black outside, and a nice shamrock green for the wires and interior. The best perches are turned ones, which are usually screwed to the back of the cage, and reach to within half-an-inch of the wires. Have a strong, but light, travelling case made to hold as many cages as you will want to send away. If the birds have been kept clean it will not be necessary to wash them, but if they require washing it is best to watch an expert perform this operation before trying to do so oneself. Have the show cages nice and clean, put in plenty of seed, and pack the birds carefully, putting in a drinker for each cage. Send the birds the night before the show, if possible, as they will then have time to steady down before judging commences.

When Patronising the Exhibitions.

Look through CAGE BIRDS' list of shows, and decide which you think will be suitable, and then write to the secretaries for schedules of these shows. From these we can see which gives the best classification. Always make your entries early, and so save the show officials much trouble. Always make a note of shows whose secretaries see that your birds are well packed and dispatched early; these are the shows you should support in the future.

If your bird does not suit a particular judge, do not trouble him again with that bird. If, however, he likes the shape, quality, etc., of your bird, follow him wherever he is judging, as far as possible. By reading CAGE BIRDS' excellent reports, it is possible to see which type any particular judge likes. In conclusion, don't on any account in your wish to succeed, allow yourself to stoop to dishonest practices, but do everything above board, and take both wins and losses in a sportsmanlike way.

The Queen Whydah.

(Vidua Regis).

MR. R. J. WATTS, whose charming Queen Whydah is here pourtrayed, kindly sends us the following notes on this beautiful bird, which he has now had in his possession for nearly five years. Early in the winter of 1907, a well-known importer of Foreign birds informed me he had a "pair" of Queen Whydahs, and taking the first opportunity, I went to see them. The usual thing happened—the birds accompanied me home. They were in very fair condition, and one was undoubtedly a male, as it was just showing colour. The other I was not certain about, but it, also, eventually turned out to be a male. Not needing two, I parted with this, and at the time of writing, I believe it is still in good health.

As mentioned, this bird came into my possession early in the winter, viz., November. He was in full plumage soon after Christmas, and was exhibited at the Crystal Palace in February, 1903. As so often happens with Foreign birds, he began to accommodate himself to our seasons. On March 22nd, the tail feathers were discarded, and the winter plumage of brown was assumed, but within a few weeks he began again to assume his summer outfit, retaining this until November. The changes have since been quite regular; the long tail commences to grow during April and May, and falls out about the first week in November, which very closely corresponds with the autumn moult of our native birds. The length of the tail varies just a little, ten feathers taken at different moults measured from 9⅛in. to 9⅞in.

Feeding is a very simple matter. the staple diet of my bird is white millet, Indian millet, and canary seed, a little green food, and a small piece of cuttle fish bone to peck. Insectivorous food or live insects he will not touch, but a piece of sweet apple is much appreciated.

It is somewhat unfortunate that this species is very seldom imported, as, in the opinion of many, it is the most desirable of this group of birds. I have found some of the Whydahs very pugnacious, the Pintail particularly so, but the Queen Whydah is most inoffensive. As an exhibition bird, it is a very beautiful, and usually commands a large number of admirers. Unfortunately, it is never long in colour during the show season.

It has a pleasant little song, not unlike the Green Singing Finch, but with a few often repeated scolding-like notes. It would seem worth while always, when frequenting the bird markets, to give a glance through the numbers of small African Finches, as the Queen Whydah out of colour is very easy to distinguish by the beautiful red beak and legs.

Amongst the numerous prizes won by the bird you have so excellently reproduced in your valuable paper (by the way, it may be of interest to you to know that I have taken every issue of CAGE BIRDS since 1905) are 1908, 1st Palace, 1st Watford; 1910, 1st Wellingborough, 1st Clapham, 2nd Manchester; 1911, 2nd Clapham, 2nd Manchester.

CANARY QUERIES.

Answered by CLAUDE ST. JOHN.

A SCOTS FANCY'S FOOT (Clydebank).—The only treatment likely to reduce the growth on the foot is painting the same twice daily (morning and evening) for a time with tincture of iodine. Apply it with a small camel-hair brush (or a stiff feather) and allow it to dry on. Before painting the foot, however, on each occasion soak it for a few moments in comfortably hot water and then dab it dry.

BEAK CRACKING AWAY (Crest).—If there is any exposed soreness when you catch the bird to examine it closely, brush it over a few times with a lukewarm solution of wych hazel, which dry off in a minute or two with a small pledget of wool, or the camel-hair brush, squeezed dry, and then slightly smear the place with Lanocylin. Repeat this every second day for a week, and then, if necessary, go on repeating every third or fourth day, as long as may seem necessary. Glad to learn the contracted toes are much better.

FEEDING DURING MOULT (Advice).—I have not a copy of "Canary Breeding for Beginners" by me at the moment, so cannot say positively whether the dietary you refer to is intended for the moulting season. Did not you see my article in this paper on August 3rd? which gives full details for moulting. If you are not colour-feeding you need only add a little extra egg food, mixed seed, and a variety of wild seeds and greed food (which are very useful), to the ordinary seed diet used for the young when quite weaned on to a diet of dry seeds. Say, half a teaspoonful of egg food thrice a week, mixed seeds twice, and wild seeds or green foods thrice or four times. In short, make the diet more generous to meet the extra drain on the system; allow free bathing; keep birds comfortably warm; and strictly avoid cold draughts.

BIRD HOUSE AND BREAD (A.B.C.).—You should have given more particulars about the structure, position (whether sheltered or fully exposed), and aspect of your "wooden hut," and if you could have managed a rough sketch showing its general plan, and position of door and windows, it would have been of great help in advising you. If fairly well sheltered, ventilated and free from draughts and damp, there is no reason why such a place should not make an admirable bird-house where Canaries would thrive all the year round. If you wish for more definite advice please send me such particulars as indicated above. As regards the most suitable hardy breeds, Norwich, Borders, Common Rollers, or Yorkshires would be about "equal firsts." Either of these breeds would be very suitable for you to begin with in such a place.

VARIOUS (S. E. Avery).—(1) You omit to say whether you want the birds to fly at liberty, or to keep them in cages, but in either case, if cost is not a very vital matter, it is much wiser to build a house which will be comfortable for you to move about in and attend to the birds properly, than to limit the accommodation to the actual requirements of a dozen birds. Quite a small place would well accommodate this number, say, 8ft by 4ft. by 6 to 7½ft. high for lean-to roof. You should get "Aviaries, Birdrooms and Cages," 2s. 3d., from our Manager, and the first three parts of "Our Canaries" for details about these matters. (2) If flying loose, three cocks to nine hens would be quite sufficient. If kept in cages, six hens would be plenty, each cock being run with two hens alternately for breeding. (3) Providing the weather is tolerable, and the house easily built and free from draughts, you might put the birds out at the end of September if they are quite through the moult. Otherwise it would be better to keep them indoors in a cold room until next April—or middle of March if it is a mild and promising spring. (4) If flying loose, as this query suggests is your intention, it is certainly best to have all clear yellow cocks and ticked or variegated buff hens, and perhaps a green hen, or if all hens are only lightly ticked or variegated, have one slightly ticked cock. In short, select them so that any cock might make a tolerable mate for any of the hens. The colour may be reversed if desired, having buff cocks and yellow hens. In this way you retain a certain amount of control over the breeding. (6) If a non-feeding hen is put in, its progeny will most likely meet with the same fate as if the birds were caged. There is, of course, just a possibility that some of the other birds might play the role of good Samaritans, but such possibilities should not be relied upon.

OUTDOOR BIRDROOM (W. L. G.).—It depends so much upon the locality, position (whether more or less sheltered or fully exposed), and aspect, as well as the breeding of the stock concerned, that it is really most unsatisfactory for an absentee to sit in judgment upon the necessity or otherwise of artificial heat for your birds. But in any case a lamp is just about the least satisfactory means of heating you could adopt. If your birds come of a hardy, robust stock, and have been bred and reared under quite normal conditions of temperature, there should be no necessity at all to experiment with lamp-heating. If, however, you wish to try it, see reply to "Pony Driver" in this issue. You would, doubtless, glean some very useful information on the subject from the literature advised in that reply.

DIARRHŒA (Miss J. C. Marsh).—Keep cage and perches as clean as possible, and also water vessel. Strew cage floor well with clean coarse sawdust, and renew it daily until diarrhœa has ceased. As staple food give a mixture of two parts canary to one part summer rape. Every second day give half a teaspoonful of crushed sponge cake, with two drops of cod liver oil emulsion mixed in it and well sprinkled with maw seed, and on the alternate days a pinch of good sound hemp and a morsel of banana. You may give a half ripe plantain stalk three times a week, but no other green food at present. Limit the diet solely to this for two or three weeks. In the water give six drops of syrup of rhubarb, and as much sulphate of soda as will cover a threepenny-piece for one day. After this dissolve in the water a crystal of sulphate of soda the size of a small pea, a crystal of sulphate of iron half as big, and add six drops of dilute sulphuric acid. Give this every second day for a week, and on the alternate days substitute four drops each of tincture of gentian and tincture of calumba.

FIXING UP BIRD-HOUSE (J.N.M.).—You should have enclosed a sketch, no matter how rough, showing the general design of the house, with door, windows, and area of glass marked in, and you should also have said whether you mean to allow the birds to fly at liberty or keep them in cages. Being of a very fair size, and good aspect, there can be no reason whatever why the house could not be made quite suitable for keeping Canaries in all through the year. The over-heating is undoubtedly due to the glass roof, which probably is not provided with hinged "lights" to lift up in summer when the sun shines directly upon the roof, and it could also be largely prevented by ample top ventilation. The best thing, however, is to substitute a solid roof, of wood, for the glass one. If two layers of boards are put on for the roof, with a half-inch or so of air space between the two layers, with free communication for air at top and bottom you will find it a most cool roof in summer, and to equalise the temperature of the house enormously. For query as to number of birds, please write again, and give me the above particulars, when I shall be pleased to help you.

BUILDING A BIRD-HOUSE (Pony Driver.)—I do not see much, if any, real advantage in making the outer walls of the house of zinc, unless it so happens that you are able to procure this material much cheaper than wood. If this is not the case, I should certainly give preference to good, well-creosoted match boards, tongued and grooved. A house so built and lined, and the space between the boards filled with sawdust or wool waste, will be as free from draught as walls built of bricks and mortar, and is both cool in summer and very durable. I cannot venture to estimate the cost of such a house as you propose, either if built entirely of wood or partly of zinc, as the cost of materials, workmanship, carriage, haulage, etc., must vary a good deal in different districts. The outside should, of course, be kept well painted as a protection against the weather, and the inside painted or distempered with sanitary distemper in preference to whitewash to give it a more cosy and warm appearance. If you must have a heating apparatus, by all means instal a system of hot-water pipes, with a brickwork cover for the boiler and furnace outside the house. This need not very greatly increase the cost. As regards the window, if you have a choice of aspect, make it face south-east instead of due south. The size you propose should be ample to accommodate twenty birds, or rather more if necessary. Finally, before starting to build, you would do well to consult "Aviaries, Bird-rooms, and Cages," which our Manager would send you for 2/3, post free, and Parts I. and III. of "Our Canaries," wherein you will find designs for a nice out-door house with heating apparatus.

SONG, COLOUR AND HEAT (Miss M. St. C. M.).—(1) The bird will not resume singing until the moult is quite finished. Your remarks give me no idea how far it has progressed, but I do not think it is nearly finished yet. Keep him rather warm, and cover his cage rather closely for a time, but keep a sharp look-out that mites do not get a footing in it. For full details of feeding, etc., see my article on August 3rd. Give a morsel of bread and milk, slightly dusted with flowers of sulphur, and sprinkle with soft sugar, every second day for a fortnight, and on the alternate days a pinch of maw seed. In the water add 20 drops of whisky, five of syrup of saffron, and as much chlorate of potash as will cover a threepenny-piece every second day for a week. (2) You are too late to preserve the colour of the bird this year. It is obtained by adding a small proportion of a vegetable substance popularly called tasteless pepper to egg food, which must be given regularly from a short time before any feathers are shed right on through the moult, until it is quite finished. If you commenced now the new feathers already grown would be unaffected by the colour, and the bird would consequently have a very patchy appearance. (3) A temperature which does not fall below 50 degrees in winter cannot really be termed cold. It is quite warm enough for any kind of Canary that has not been brought up under unreasonably pampered conditions. It would be more important to avoid sudden extremes of heat and cold and draught.

NORTH-EAST BIRD-ROOM (Percy Hunt).—Yes, the room you describe would be quite suitable for a bird-room. If it is free from damp and cold, cutting draughts, the absence of direct sunlight will not necessarily be detrimental to the health of the birds. Indeed, many successful and flourishing bird rooms are in no better position than this one. Your colour scheme may be improved, I think, by having a white ceiling, light pea green or electric-green walls, with a light oak or stone-colour dado, and a moderately light, but not white, lino on the floor—say, dark oak, brown or chestnut.

QUANTITY OF FOOD (J. U., Dulwich).—Unless some special object is in view, such as limiting the food supply when birds are over-fed, it is usual to keep up an unlimited supply of good, sound canary in the seed hoppers. But if you wish to control the food supply generally, a daily allowance of one teaspoonful per bird will be ample for a dozen birds. Some of them may not quite consume their quantity, and others will probably exceed it, but if doled out regularly there will be no danger whatever of any of the birds starving. If convenient to do so it would be an advantage to give half the quantity in the morning and the other half in the afternoon. A small quantity of soft food and mixed seed may be given in addition at intervals twice a week each, and green at mid-day three or four times a week.

NOT STARTED MOULTING (F. C.).—Move the bird that has not begun to moult to a distinctly warmer room and keep in a slightly darkened corner, or keep a cover over the cage. Let the temperature be on the warm side, but quite free from cold draughts and as equable as possible. Give half-a-teaspoonful of egg food to which a little colour food has been added daily, well sprinkle it with maw seed, and every second day dust it lightly with flowers of sulphur. In the drinking water add 20 drops of whisky, five of syrup of saffron, and as much chlorate of potash as will cover a threepenny-piece, every second day—giving this on the alternate days between giving the sulphur. After a week of this treatment, if bird has not commenced to cast feathers, return it to its usual place in the cold room, when the desired effect will probably quickly come about.

EXTERMINATING RED MITES (J.C.B.).—Any half measures, and also dusting bird with powder, is of very little use to achieve this object. If size of cage will allow of it plunge it bodily in a copper of boiling water and keep it quite immersed for a few minutes. Then treat all the cage fittings in the same way, and give the wall, hook, etc., where cage has hung a thorough good rub down. If this plan is not feasible, place bird in temporary cage for a few days, and give it a bath with a little quassia extract in it each day. Then well clean the infested cage and burn refuse at once. Saturate cage inside and out with paraffin, in a teacupful of which you have dissolved a cube of camphor. Use a small paint brush to work it well into any joints or crevices. Place in open air to dry, and thoroughly cleanse and disinfect the fittings and place where cage has hung. Repeat all operations next day, and again on the third day to be doubly sure of completing the extermination. When dry re-paint, varnish, etc., if necessary, and when quite dry bird may be returned. Each time cage is overhauled attend scrupulously to all the fittings and place where it has hung. Give bird a morsel of bread and milk with two drops of cod liver oil emulsion on it and dusted with soft sugar every second day for a fortnight, and add 20 drops of chemical food to its water in the meantime.

BRITISH BIRDS, MULES AND HYBRIDS.

Answered, this week, by H. J. FULLJAMES.

ABOUT A GOLDFINCH'S BLAZE (Jack Bash).—You can do nothing to alter the shape of the blaze of your bird. For the feeding you could not improve upon your present method, especially as you say that the bird is in perfect health. It is quite possible that the under-blaze may with another moult become more even at the corners, but nothing you can do would influence it.

A GOLDFINCH MULE (A. Bennett).—If the Mule seems to be at all constipated, stir half a teaspoonful of syrup of buckthorn into two tablespoonfuls of drinking water, and leave in the cage for one day. Afterwards give the following medicine fresh daily over a period of from ten to fourteen days, as may seem necessary (any chemist will dispense it for you): glycerine, oxymel of squills, and ipecacuanha wine, one ounce of each. Dose, a small teaspoonful in two tablespoonfuls of water. A little good teazle seed would benefit the bird; also an occasional pinch of maw seed. Don't give the egg-food, but continue with the milk-sop.

SONG OF HAND-REARED BIRDS, ETC. (O.J.S.).—(1) It is quite true that hand-reared birds do not generally sing as well as those naturally reared unless they have the opportunity of hearing the song of adult birds of their species. They are apt scholars, however, and soon pick up the proper song if given the opportunity, or they will incorporate into their own song that of other birds with which they may be kept in company. Birds of the year taken in autumn will, of course, have heard the wild notes of others of their kind, and should make good singers. (2) In an outdoor aviary of mixed birds, it is better to have each kind of seed in a separate vessel. If the various kinds are mixed in one hopper, the different birds will each waste a great deal searching for some particular kind. (3) You can scarcely expect a Blackcap to do well on any ready prepared food sold at a less price than that which you name. You might make up a stock food yourself, comprised of equal parts, by weight, of best ants' cocoons, dried flies, silkworm pupæ, desiccated yolk of egg, and a little very fine meat meal (crissel). Then add powdered sweet biscuit to the weight of the whole lot. Such a mixture will keep indefinitely if kept dry, and a small portion daily should be slightly moistened (to a "crumbly" consistency) by the addition either of boiled potato or grated carrot. The Blackcap is a fruit-eater by nature, and if supplied with ripe fruit in season, or grocers' currants, which have previously been soaked until they are plump, will eat but little of the prepared food. You will, of course, supply it with small insects and grubs—house flies, gentles, small green caterpillars, meal-worms, spiders, green-fly; in fact, anything that may come handy. Nutshell No. 25, "The Smaller Insectivorous Birds" (2½d. post free, from our publisher), will help you in the feeding of any of the many birds with which it deals.

JACKDAW WITH INSECTS (Lisley).—Your bird is probably troubled with the tiny itch mite, Sarcoptes laevis. This mite generally appears at first on the hinder parts of any bird which it attacks, and the irritation it sets up causes the bird to pluck its feathers. Afterwards, it spreads to the head and neck, which appears to have been the case with your bird. Insect powder would have little or no effect on this parasite. Much more drastic measures are necessary. Ask your chemist to make up an ointment of one part refined creosote to twenty parts lanoline, and rub a little of this on the skin and the feather shafts, but not enough to make the feathers messy. Also paint the crevices of its sleeping place, ends of perches, etc., with crude creosote.

WILL JACKDAW AGREE WITH MAGPIE AND JAY (A.H.).—Your aviary is large enough to accommodate one each of these birds, but whether they would agree is a doubtful proposition. The present tenant, the Jackdaw, would most probably resent the introduction of any new lodgers, and rows between birds such as these are not small matters. Much depends, however, upon the disposition of individual birds, and it is possible, if not probable, that you may get them to agree, especially if you give an eye to them for a while. Personally, I have never tried the experiment.

TURTLE DOVES (K. E. D.).—These birds should certainly do well throughout the winter here without artificial heat. They may be kept quite successfully in a sheltered outdoor aviary. They are granivorous birds, and will eat almost any kind of grain, small peas, etc. Some will take small worms, snails, grubs, and fruit, and any of these may be offered them. The Turtle Dove is a nesting species in England, favouring, mostly, the eastern and southern counties. It extends sometimes to Scotland, but does not breed there. To Ireland it is an infrequent visitor, and is said to have bred two or three times. They arrive on our coasts about the end of April, and leave us in September for North Africa, reaching sometimes as far as Abyssinia during the winter.

LINNET QUEER (J. F. M.).—Your feeding is insufficient. The sample you send is nearly all canary, with just a dash of small and inferior rape. Linnets in nature feed upon a great variety of wild seeds, and they will not thrive in captivity upon plain canary seed. You were doing better when you fed your bird upon "Linnet mixture," but you would do better still if you gathered some wild seeds for it yourself. Dandelion, groundsel, thistles of any kind, plantain, shepherd's-purse—there is no end to the seeds you could provide for it. During the moult, add some linseed. As your bird seems to have stopped in the moult you should keep it for a time in a warm room, free from draughts or changes of temperature; feed it more generously, and for the stomach trouble treat as recommended to "Carapato" in another reply.

A VARIETY (A Novice, Wigan).—If you cannot obtain a cock bird bred from the same parents as the hen you mention (get a clear, if possible), then buy a pink-eyed cock, for preference one which is clear and bred from clear parents. Or better still, buy both cock birds, let the hens have young from each, and then mate up the progeny to the best advantage, discarding any that possess much marking, and utilising the yellows wherever possible. In the place you mention I think two cock Goldies would get along together—it is a good size. The rarest cross would be the Greenfinch-Chaffinch; but I hear the Siskin-Bullfinch Hybrid has been bred this season, and, if so, this becomes entitled to be termed the rarest. I hope this answers your last question, which is not quite clear to me. The Bullfinch-Hawfinch cross, of course, would put any other quite in the shade. Why not try to obtain it?

GREYPATE "HUDDLED UP" (Carapato).—It is very early indeed to attempt the keeping of Greypates unless you are certain that they are of the first brood of the year, and as two out of your three are doing well you must consider yourself fortunate. Your feeding seems to be fairly all right, and you cannot do better than continue the advice given in the Goldfinch "Nutshell," which you say you have. You will see that the seeds of many weeds are therein recommended in addition to the mixture you are using. The bird probably finds some little difficulty in digesting the hard seed, and you should try soaking the seed overnight, and rubbing dry in a cloth in the morning. I don't know what "salts" you are using, but if these are Epsom salts you might use, instead, the same quantity of Glauber's salts (sulphate of soda). These act more directly on the liver and help the digestion. Give the medicated water at first every other day, with plain water between, and when any improvement is noticed then give every third day; afterwards, once a week. An occasional dose of sulphate of soda is good for all birds.

FOREIGN BIRDS.

Answered by WESLEY T. PAGE, F.Z.S.,

HOW MANY? (D. H. P.).—In this cage, with frequent changing, you could keep a dozen small Waxbills, or half-a-dozen birds the size of a Norwich Canary. The Pekin Robin or Nightingale is quite amiable as a rule, but very energetic, and I fear within the limits of a cage this would keep Waxbills and the small ornamental Finches in a more or less continual state of unrest. I have heard of individuals that were fond of holding small Waxbills, etc., by the leg or wing, and so playing with them, but such is not the rule; however, if your desire is towards Pekins, I advise you to let them enjoy the cage to themselves.

IS IT AN ARCHBISHOP? (Tanager).—Yes, but probably a young bird, whose plumage will assume a deeper line as it matures; it might possibly be a Palm Tanager, but I think it is as above. Diet, soft food, ripe fruit (any kind it will eat), and two or three live insects daily. Superb, Tri-colour, Blue, from 15/- to 25/- each, according to condition and time they have been over. A little milk-sop containing Mellin's Food, often helps newly-imported specimens over the critical period.

AILING BUDGERIGARS (A.L.H.) Try fomenting the legs and feet with hot water daily; dry with a cloth, and then, while moist, paint with neat whisky, also gently exercise the joints a little daily. Keep the bowels moving freely, not watery loose, by giving two drops of Dinneford's Magnesia direct to the beak as required. Also put a little byno-phosphates in the drinking water daily. I much fear this is constitutional weakness and incurable, but treat as above for say two months, and then if there is no improvement have it painlessly destroyed.

GREY PARROT WITH DIARRHŒA (G. H. Nuttall)). Do not give any more aperients at present. Dissolve two drops of tincture of opium in two tablespoonfuls of slightly sweetened water (chilled), and offer this to the bird at intervals during the day, for two days, prepare fresh for each day, then after a couple of days' interval repeat as above, and then follow with a course of byno-phosphates to tone the bird up. The bird should get some ripe fruit daily. The peas are quite wholesome and are not, in my opinion, responsible for the diarrhœa; very probably something in the seed or water set this up.

FINCHES AND MANNIKINS (C. Hunt).—Your birds are as follows: Cutthroats or Ribbon Finches, Grey Java Sparrows, and Black-headed Maunikins or Nuns; the two latter are shy breeders in captivity, but the former go to the nest readily enough either in cage or aviary, but the young are not always reared. Diet: Canary, white and spray millet seed, greenfood (lettuce, chickweed, groundsel, and flowering or seeding grass are all good), grit, cuttlebone and water. Oats and paddy rice may be offered in small quantity, and will be appreciated by the Java Sparrow. A little soft food must be given, and ants' eggs when they are feeding young. For breeding Foreign birds in cages, a roomy box-breeding cage should be the domicile of each pair.

TOUCAN, ETC. (Leslie).—(1) A Toucan should be taken indoors during the winter months, as the character of their plumage ill fits them to stand the wet and damp of an English winter. (2) All birds must have a changeful dietary, and the Toucan should have some good, soft food mixture, which can be moistened with boiled potato and beef dripping. They must also get some live insects, cut up fruit, grocer's currants, sultanas, grapes, and the like. Sweetened boiled rice is also acceptable and wholesome, while if a small mouse finds its way into the cage, the bird will soon make short work of it. (3) The Red-faced or Red-headed and the Peach-faced Lovebirds are quite distinct, the latter is much the larger, and while the former has the head fiery scarlet, the latter has this portion rose-colour, overlaid with a peach-like bloom; both are African species.

ROSE-BREASTED COCKATOOS (B.K.).—These birds are as hard as nails, and I have never yet come across a case of a specimen being harmed by English weather. In speaking of the demeanour of birds out of doors, you must be comparative; for instance, such weather as we have been experiencing lately; out of its season, too! has made most of our indigenous wild creatures very uncomfortable, and if your Cockatoos are not showing more discomfort than our native birds, they will not be likely to take much hurt. Please send me a rough diagram of the aviary, showing its size, aspect, position of shelter-shed, and stating whether the flight is wire-netting all round, or if back or ends are closely boarded or walls. I could then give you a definite answer. I should, however, have no hesitation in leaving them out myself, but should provide a dry, sheltered corner for them in the flight, where they could be dry, yet in the open.

ASPECT OF AVIARY (Kappa).—(1) An easterly aspect is, of course, the worst that you can have, but from what I know of Chiswick the situation is not likely to be an exposed one; but I shall consider it solely on its E. aspect. The end A. should be either all wood or wood and glass; the front of covered flight should be a combination of wood and glass, the latter predominating. All glass must be covered with wire netting on the inside. The glass cat-guard along front of aviary would be a wise precaution in your district, and would also give some protection against a strong east wind. (2) I really cannot answer this query, as the Indian Buntings are quite numerous; which one do you refer to—the two you name would be distinct, though you may have a pair.

BUDGERIGARS (A. Meyers).—Heat, or rather a sudden transit from cool to quite warm quarters often forces a moult out of season, and Budgies do not need heat, but must not be subjected to draught. I should say your birds do not get enough shelter from the sun; arrange them a sheltered corner in the cage to which they can retire at will. Large is a comparative word, and conveys such different meanings, but in the absence of definite size of cage I assume from your remarks that it is large enough for two pairs, and I should procure mates for them, but from quite a different source to that from which your present birds came. I am, of course, assuming that in addition to seed, your birds have access to grit, cuttle-bone and green food—all are necessary to their well-being. Either put one tea-spoonful of Dinneford's Magnesia in the drinking water every other day for a week, or give each bird one drop direct to the beak under similar conditions.

WAXBILLS AND MANNIKINS (Selby).—The bulk of birds offered by the various dealers are new arrivals, and are more or less affected by the long journey they have undergone; the weather has recently been very inclement, probably your cage stands in a window, and the birds are being subjected to some draught. Stand your cage where its occupants will get light and air, but be quite free from draught. Re food, your diet is quite in order, there is no given quantity, refill hopper as depleted. The birds must have access to grit, cuttle-bone and greenfood (lettuce, chickweed, groundsel and flowering grass are all good). Separate the ailing birds, and keep them quiet and restful to themselves, putting one teaspoonful of Dinneford's magnesia into the usual supply of drinking water every fourth day for a month, and on the intervening days half a teaspoonful of Byno-phosphates in the daily supply of drinking water (you must not use a metal drinker while giving drugs). The whole of the birds will be the better for a course of the above treatment, but the ailing ones must be kept in a cage to themselves—I fear you will lose some of them. Some will use the night shelters and others will perch. The eye wash was quite right, and should be continued if necessary. The bird you describe is a Grey Waxbill. The Nutshell Booklet "Waxbills," 2½d. from our Manager, would help you, as also would "Foreign Birds for Beginners," 1·1½, post free. Also keep a hopper of Canary seed in the cage, and leave the birds to take which they prefer.

GLOSSY STARLING (Beginner). Add to your dietary some good soft food mixture, which can be moistened with boiled potato, also the supply of ripe fruit should be ad lib, and live-food should be liberally supplied. If you have a garden offer anything you can capture in the shape of beetles, smooth larvæ, small earthworms, etc., that the bird will eat; the pest of most kitchens ("black-beetles") may be offered. A show cage 18in. long, 11 inches deep, and 15 inches high, should be sufficient, while a cage double that size would make a good living cage for it. It would either have to be entered as a "Large Softbill" or in the "Any other Species" class, according to classification of the respective shows. The moult is either just over or very near at hand. In a roomy cage, if it is an active bird, it should do well in an unheated room, but judge by its demeanour, if it appears unhappy bring it into your living room.

INDIAN PARROT (W.H.).—Give this bird a seed mixture of one quart each canary and white millet seeds, one pint each oats, paddy rice, and hemp, half a pint each shelled nuts, sunflower seed, dari and small maize, one gill grit (not sand); well mix and keep a supply in the cage. Also supply ripe fruit, greenfood, and plain biscuit; keep a piece of clean cuttlebone in the cage, also water continuously. Spray this bird twice weekly with quassia solution at present, but only once a week when the weather really becomes cold, and guard against draught, especially while plumage is damp. Twice a week put one teaspoonful of Dinneford's Magnesia, and on other days a little byno-phosphates or Parrish's Chemical Food, in the drinking water, and continue this for some time. Confine its diet to items given above, and continue this treatment for two months at least. Also give it rotten wood, cotton reels, etc., to cut up and play with.

YOUNG GREY PARROT (E.B.W.).—It is a young Grey, and young birds are much darker in their plumage than adult birds. You must continue to feed it as you are doing at present, but keep a tin of the seed mixture given in the Booklet; also offer fruit, shelled nuts, and dry plain biscuit—keep a piece of cuttlebone in the cage, and add a pinch of grit (not sand) to the daily supply of seed. Dissolve one drop laudanum in a tablespoonful of water, and give this as drinking water for two days, but prepare it fresh each day; then after two days' interval repeat this. Follow this by putting ten drops byno-phosphates into its daily supply of drinking water, or soak the phosphates into the maize. Colour of plumage has nothing to do with talking capacity. The age at which they begin to talk is very variable, when it has quite become accustomed to its new home and is quite tame, it will observe and listen, and soon prove responsive; follow directions in booklet.

YOUNG GREY PARROT (J. Thomas).—While it will not take anything else, continue to give a little chilled bread and milk at intervals, adding one drop of brandy to each table-spoonful of sop. Keep the food it has been accustomed to in the cage, and gradually discontinue the milk-sop as it takes the other food again—the milk-sop is to be strictly treated as a medicine, and not indefinitely continued as an article of diet. Do not give the bird ordinary "Parrot Mixture," keep in its cage a supply of the following: 3 parts each (by measure) canary and white millet seed, 2 parts crushed oats and 1 part each hemp and sunflower seeds, and 1 gill grit (not sand)—well mix the whole. Also supply ripe fruit, shelled nuts, and plain arrowroot biscuit; the latter can be soaked, or, rather, moistened, in chemical food and chilled water. Keep a piece of clean cuttlebone hanging in the cage. On receipt of this give 2 drops of tasteless castor oil direct to the beak, and repeat same a week hence. Give it a few sips at intervals during the day of chilled water to which has been added 5 drops of Byno-phosphates to each tablespoonful of water. The boiled maize must be prepared fresh daily, and should be lightly dusted with flowers of sulphur. Get a box of honey and borax from your chemist and put a little on its tongue twice daily. Keep warm and out of draught, yet where it will get light and air. Write again, a week hence, fully describing its condition, also stating how long it has been in your possession.

POST MORTEMS.

Mr. G. Yates, M.R.C.V.S., 1, College Road, Harrow, Middlesex, will examine and report upon dead cage birds for a fee of 1s. 6d. each bird; for reply direct, 2s. 6d.; analysis, 21s. Subjects for post mortem examination must be sent packed in a box direct to Mr. Yates, with the fee, this and any accompanying letter being kept from contact with the dead bird. Send by letter-post; it is cheaper and quicker than parcel post. Any bodies sent to the office of this paper will be thrown away, and if a fee is enclosed the loss will be the sender's.

M. Waddington.—Septic fever; there is no treatment.

Gould.—Egg-binding, the egg was a shell-less one, and death occurred from peritonitis.

W.H.G.—The bird was emaciated, thin on the breast, and dropsical. The liver was cirrhotic, a condition implying formation in the liver substance of white fibrous tissue, acting deleteriously by causing pressure on the liver cells. It is a common disease of these birds, and originates primarily from the ingestion of irritants in the food.

GENERAL.

Answered by THE EDITOR.

A Suspended Exhibitor (Justice).—If the facts were as you state, you should have lodged a protest with the show secretary. In any case, we could not enter into the merits of the matter upon the authority of a communication bearing neither the proper signature nor the address of the writer.

Bernard Smith.—We have written to you direct, to Oak Bay Post Office, concerning the matter.

CAGE BIRDS LEAGUE.

How to become an Associate.

Many readers of CAGE BIRDS have written to say that they would like to join CAGE BIRDS' LEAGUE, but cannot afford the subscription. To meet their wishes we have decided to form, in connection with the LEAGUE, a body of Associates. All we ask of these Associates is that they will promise to give every possible attention to the wants of their birds. And they must induce others to see that their birds are kept happy and contented.

All that the intending Associate has to do is to sign the coupon herewith, get five of his or her friends to sign each a similar coupon, and send the six, together with a penny stamp, to the Secretary of CAGE BIRDS' LEAGUE, who will forward by return an enamelled Button Badge of the LEAGUE. There will be no other charge. NOW, THEN, BIRD LOVERS!—USE YOUR BEST EFFORTS IN THIS SPLENDID CAUSE.

THE BIRD LOVER'S PLEDGE.

I hereby promise to take every care of my feathered pets and to induce others to do the same.

Wanted, a Metal Cage Maker.

Sir,—I want a metal aviary made about 4ft. by 3ft. 6in. to my pattern. I should be greatly obliged if any of your readers could recommend a good quick man who would work here and be capable of estimating cost and carrying through the job alone.

How Linnets Sing in Contests.

Sir,—May I, through your correspondence column, ask secretaries of Linnet clubs how they sing on time and quality? I will start by giving you ours:—1 minute spring, 3 bluff, 5 seconds a break. I think we might be able to help one another by getting the different styles.

Old Secretary Again to the Front.

Sir,—Would you kindly make it known through your valuable paper that our late Secretary has left us and gone to Canada, and that I have now taken over the duties again after having a rest for three years. I should like to make it known all round, and there is no better medium than Cage Birds for that purpose.

Initials of Exhibitors in Show Reports.

Sir,—Re report of Bethel show and many others about North Wales in your valuable paper, Cage Birds, which takes the lead, may I ask your reporter to give me my initials, as well as he does for himself?

R. E. Griffith.

[Initials of exhibitors are not given in reports unless there are more than one of the same name. In Bethel report there were more than one with the names of Parry, Williams, and Jones, hence the initials. Mr. Griffith's initials appeared in the introduction but not in the list of awards, there being no other winner with the same surname.—Editor.]

How to Catch Hawfinches.

Sir,—Your correspondent who writes asking how Hawfinches may be caught will find the following method efficacious. Make a bottomless box of wire netting, with a metal frame, about 3ft. 6ins. square and 1ft. 6ins. high. Hinge two of the sides which are at right angles to one another. The sides should be made fairly heavy so as to fall quickly, so that it is possible to prop them up level with the top of the box. Use a T-shaped prop and place it at the corner so that one arm supports each of the hinged sides. Tie a long string to the prop, and bait the ground inside the trap with a plentiful supply of hemp and sunflower. As soon as the birds enter, a sharp pull at the string will jerk away the prop and the sides will fall downwards and inwards. A small door in the top, fastened by a catch and made large enough to admit the arm freely, will enable the birds thus secured to be taken in the hand without further trouble. Since Hawfinches are by nature very wary birds, it is often some little time before they will enter the box freely, but once they begin to do so, particularly if a few of the first-comers are left for some days to act as decoys, a number may be secured during a season by the device I recommend.

Should We Make More Use of the Hen Britisher?

Some Light on this Important Question.

Sir,—With your permission I should like to answer the enquiry of "One of the Old Ones" as to whether we should make more use of the hen Britisher. Judging from my own experience, I should say that much advantage would be gained by doing so. If fanciers would only give her a fair trial I am convinced that they would find it worth the trouble. I stocked an aviary, twelve feet by five feet, by 5ft. 6in. high, last April, with six hens, Chaffinch, Bullfinch, Yellowhammer, and three Greenfinches, and four cocks, Goldfinch, Greenfinch, and two Linnets; all fresh-caught birds. By the first week in June two of the hen Greenfinches were sitting on five eggs each. By way of an experiment, I transferred one egg under a good feeding Canary. The Greenies hatched seven splendid youngsters between them, which left the nest at fourteen days and were feeding themselves long before the Canary-reared one was half fledged, in spite of the hen having egg and biscuit to rear it on. I might say here that the Greenfinches had nothing but mixed seed and green food to keep house on, so you see insects or substitutes are not necessary. About the same time that the Greenfinches nested, the hen Bullfinch laid five eggs, and I let her sit six days, but I was a bit timid, so I transferred the eggs to a Canary. Result, three nice Linnet-Bullfinch Hybrids. The Yellowhammer paired to the Goldfinch and laid two eggs, but owing to a Greenfinch taking a liking to her nest she gave up housekeeping, much to my regret. The Chaffinch paired to a Linnet, and after trying three times to find a suitable place to build in, away from the tormenting young Greenfinches, also gave up. If I am spared until next season I mean to try on a larger scale with the hen Britisher as my foundation, as I feel convinced that she will rear her young stronger and larger than the Canary hen. Trusting I have not taken up too much of your valuable space and time.

Creosote.

Sir,—Seeing in your valuable paper some time ago about creosote for red mites, and knowing it is the wish of Cage Birds readers to help one another along, perhaps some one will be good enough to tell me where it can be obtained.

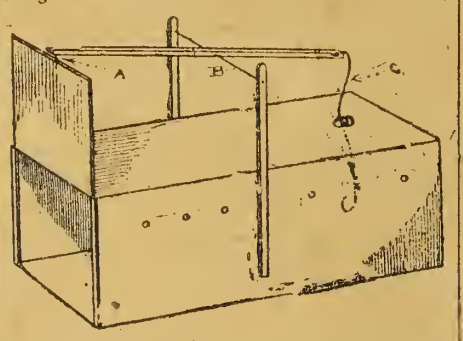
Great Houghton Linnet Club Changes Quarters.



Sir,—The Great Houghton Linnet Club has removed its quarters to the High Street Working Men's Club and Institute, where we held a general meeting on Saturday, Aug. 24. We had a splendid meeting, and everything pointed in the right direction of making the club a success. We are singing under Yorkshire Club rules, and the first contest will be held on Oct. 12, when we hope to see new members join in. At our first meeting we drank to the health of Cage Birds and wished it every success.

How to Combat the Cat.

A Suggested Trap.

Sir,—I have enclosed sketch of a cat trap as used by myself, which anyone can make out of an old box. Any size would do; about 8ins. by 8ins. by 2ft. 6ins. long is the best size. Nail two pieces of wood each side of entrance to form slot for the slide; screw the bridge to box with one screw on each side; that will admit it to come down on to the box after puss is there for the purpose of putting into a bath, the holes bored in the sides letting in the water. A, short string; B, wire; C, stout wire, bent as shown. I find cheese the best bait.

H. W. Turvey.

Woollen Syphons as Water and Food Guides.

Sir,—When out catching this is the method I use: Instead of putting the seed and water inside the store cage, I put them outside, and I put two or three little bun tins on top of store cage, fill them with water, and thoroughly soak a piece of wool about three or four inches long and put a piece in each tin with one end about 1½ inches hanging over the front just above the seed tins and drinkers. The water is continually dropping into them, and the birds go straight to it. It keeps the birds a lot cleaner when taking them home, and when caged off or put in a flight you have no trouble with them at all.

John Cope.

Bending Cage Wire.

A Reader Kindly Replies.

Sir,—In the correspondence column of the 24th issue, I see a novice wants to know about wire-bending. I would like to give him my idea if it will be any good to him, for in the experience I have had in cage making I have found my simple idea to work very nicely for me. I suppose there will be machinery for making the fancy twists and turns on a large scale, but I use a pair of round-nosed pincers, costing about ninepence, for little twists and turns. For getting square-top cages, or round like a Yorkshire show cage, or house-top shaped cages, I draw the particular shape on a piece of cardboard, then nail this to a piece of wood a little larger than the cardboard. I then drive firmly some inch nails along the drawing on the inside of the line, but touching, of course, about four inches apart. You must arrange to have one at each angle required, and also you must place a nail on the outside of the line at about every three of the others, to keep the wire in position after being bent. After having got this fixed up you can bend a lot of wires in a little time. If "Novice" cannot see through this idea, if he writes to me I will draw him some sketches.

SISKIN-BULLFINCH HYBRIDS PRODUCED AT LAST.

The Success of an Aged Edinburgh Fancier.

Sir,—I have seen various articles in your paper during the season on encouraging amateurs to trying Siskin-Bullfinch hybrids and I am very pleased to see such articles as I consider it the only way now to bring before the public that such rare crosses will be rewarded through the wide circulation of your paper amongst those blessed with longer purses than the average working man, who are keen fanciers (I mean in good prices which may be got in the sale of such). The principal drawback to many tryers is the plain fact that many authors of books and lecturers tell you how simple and easy it is to put a pair of birds together after the interval of putting one bird in one cage and the other in another until they show signs of wanting to mate. Another thing, Mr. Editor, they tell you it is necessary to get aviaries or large double breeding cages. You have to get this, and you have to get next thing, quite out of the money the average amateur can afford, which practically puts a stop to the beginning of our amateurs. In my experience of nearly 30 years I have seen many amateurs put two British birds together not even quite certain of their sex, and sometimes rearing some rare hybrids, while knowing so little about them they had to go to some one of more experience to get some idea how to feed the young. A further drawback to trying to breed rare hybrids is when we pay entry money and railway fares to the shows, only to have the bird laid aside by the judge, simply because he could not tell what they were. Now, I have the pleasure of informing your readers that the Siskin-Bullfinch hybrid has in reality been got this year in the capital of Scotland, and not in single numbers. After 22 clear eggs last year, and 20 eggs this year, at last out of a nest of four, three were fertile, two hatched, and the young hybrids are five weeks old, healthy and very active on the perches. At present it would appear there is one cock and one hen. They are bred from a large Scotch Bullie and a fair sized Siskin cock, by a working citizen nearing three score and ten, in a 20in. cage with the old fashioned box at the end, outside. The old gentleman keeps a number of Canary and Muling pairs in a small badly lighted and not over high room in the house. There is no mistake in the Siskin hen trick this time. I just hope they get through the moult all right now. I will let your readers know how they fare later on.

Happy Result.

Saffron Finch Takes a Night Out and is Sorry.

Sir,—I thought you might be interested in the adventures of a cock Saffron Finch which escaped from my little bird house one night last week, and after some songs of triumph on the house-top, took his departure down the road, just as dusk was falling. I mourned him sincerely, for he was a very fine bird, though some months of ownership had not rendered him at all tame or confiding. But my mourning was turned into joy when I discovered him the next morning loudly announcing his return and trying to find some means of entry to his old abode, which, of course, was quickly afforded him. I have lost Budgies—extremely tame ones—and other birds, but this is the first one that has ever returned to its home. I expect you are quite surfeited with compliments, or I should like to say that I consider you quite a benefactor to "birdy" people—especially amateurs and beginners. I have seen several similar journals, but never one to compare with Cage Birds in usefulness and variety.

Bradford National Cage Bird Show.

Second Great Show for a Deserving Cause.

Sir,—Encouraged by the remarkable success which attended the efforts of the Committee at last year's show when a magnificent sum of £64 was subscribed towards the Cinderella Funds for the poor children of Bradford, another great effort is being made again this year, to put this show on a sound basis as an annual event, and also with the same enthusiasm as prevailed last year, to further swell the funds of this most deserving charity. The Committee are showing that enterprise which commands success in the fact that they are putting on to last year's classification no less than 35 classes, making a grand total of 117 classes for Cage Birds alone, embracing most of the varieties existent at the present time. The Great Central Baths Hall has again been engaged at a very tall figure for December 6, 7 and 9, the show being extended to the Monday this time in order that birds from a distance will receive proper care and attention during the week-end and be dispatched off by suitable trains on the Monday, thereby minimising the risk attached to sending the birds off a long distance on the Saturday night. The several Committees acquitted themselves with honour at last year's show, many letters of appreciation showing the satisfaction that was given to exhibitors at the show and visitors alike, and they will vie with each other in their efforts not only to uphold the good opinion then expressed, but to surpass all previous attempts at running a big show on ideal lines, for the Officials gained confidence at last year's show by the capable handling of the huge crowds that flocked to the show, combined with the rapid dispatch of all away exhibits, the hall being cleared within two hours from the close of show, and not one single complaint received of birds going astray, or delayed in transit. Knowing this they are one and all making a strong appeal for support for the next show in the hope that they may be enabled to make this even a more successful show than last year. We had the satisfaction of staging a world's record show of Yorkshires, but other varieties, excepting Borders, which latter were very well supported, left much to be desired and it is hoped that the enlarged classification in many of the sections which last year filled badly will result in inducing fanciers to give us their wholehearted support in this great venture. The Assembly Hall will this year be utilised for Foreign and British Birds and Hybrids, and two tier staging will probably be adopted down each long side of the main hall, thereby largely increasing the staging capacity of the show. There will be 42 classes for Yorks, 24 for Nor., 9 Bord., 4 Lizards, 6 Cinn., 3 Rollers, 19 British and Hyb., 8 For., 1 A.O.V. class and 1 Selling class, and the following judges have been booked:—Messrs. H. W. Battye, J. C. Barnes, W. A Cowgill, F. Finn, C. A. House, A. Hirst, Wm. Mundell, J. Maddison, W. Massey, and John Robson, a group capable of tackling a record entry in each variety. Much of the spade work in connection with the show has been completed during the summer months, in fact it was started directly the last show was finished and each meeting grows more enthusiastic in the work that is to be done before the show can be actually termed a success. All fanciers who are interested in the welfare of it and desire to take any part, however small, in assisting to carry it to a successful conclusion will be gladly welcomed at any of the Committee meetings announced in the Fancy Press and it is desirable now that the date is fast approaching that as many as can, will turn up at each meeting. Our Northern Yorkshire C.C. friends have just intimated their intention to give a solid silver cup for competition amongst the Yorkshires to be allocated as the Committee think fit, and I feel sure that all Yorkshiremen will greatly appreciate this magnificent offer from these whole-hearted fanciers. The profits are entirely for the poor children of the City of Bradford and I feel sure that this laudable object will commend itself to every fancier throughout the land. The following societies have granted their patronage and support to the show:—Y.C.C., N.G.M.Y.C.C., C.M.Y.C.C., N.P.C., O.N.P.C., N.B.B, and M.C., Y.C.B.B and M.C., B.F.C.C., F.B.C., P.R.C.C. G.C.A., C.C.C. and L. and L.F.A. In addition to this the patronage of the Yorkshire Union of C.B.S. will be applied for at the next meeting of the Council of that body and if this is successful the show looks like being a tremendous success, as owing to the courtesy of Gateshead and a kind of agreement between the two, these important fixtures will not clash in the future, as was the case last year. As nearly 1,800 entries are needed to pay prize money alone we are appealing to all fanciers to patronise us this time. Cheap excursions will be arranged with all the railway companies running into Bradford, and we trust that the show will prove a magnificent success. Don't forget that prize money is paid out to successful exhibitors who attend the show on the Saturday and all prize money was paid out within four days of the show last year.

Breeding Albinos by Selection.

Sir,—I read Mr. Bush's interesting article on the breeding of Albino birds, and I should be glad if he would be kind enough to give us an account through CAGE BIRDS how he manages to breed these wonderful birds. I saw a Goldfinch the other day twelve years old, which has moulted out pure white, with the exception of tail and yellow bars in the wings. How do we account for this, as it is not bred from freak birds? It was of ordinary colour when caught. Are these freak birds more likely to throw light Mules than the ordinary ones? I have not bred with one myself, but I should be glad to hear of any fancier who has. H. C. AINGE.

In Aid of a Widow and Children

Sir,—Thank you for inserting the letter appealing for subscriptions for the wife and family of Mr. C. Eastop. When I made my appeal Mr. Eastop was lying ill, but since then he has died, as announced in your obituary notice. I beg to acknowledge the following subscriptions:—Collected: Mr. J. Mackenzie, 13s.; Mr. H. E. Cracknell, 9s. 4½d., and myself, 7s.—this from members of Newcastle and Gateshead societies and friends; Mr. Macdonald, secretary, Wallsend, 20s., from Wallsend C.B.S. and friends; Barrow and District C.B.A., per secretary, Jas. S. Fleming, 7s. 6d.; J. McAndrew, Wigan, 1s.; P Banks, Chester, 1s.; W. Kiesell, North London, 3s.; Wraight, Tunbridge Wells, 5s.; W. Cobbold, Debden, 2s. 6d.; T. E. Epsom, 1s.; J. T. Hillsboro, Sheffield, 1s. 6d.; Yorkie Fancier, Edinburgh, 2s.; total, £3 13s. 10½d. I shall be pleased to receive any other donations, however small.

A Cat that Defends Its Owner's Birds.

Sir,—I see in your paper, CAGE BIRDS, a correspondent wanting to know how to train a kitten so that it may be kept in a bird room, without touching the birds, for keeping down the mice. It is an easy matter to train a cat to do this, but not a kitten, for a kitten is playful, and sure to jump at the birds when they move about. I should prefer to have a kitten and keep it out of sight of the birds until it is three-parts grown. Take it to the bird room every time you feed your birds, and when it looks at the birds never drive it away, but try to get it to take the birds as friends, not enemies. I have a cat that will not only look after the mice, but will protect the birds. If another cat comes near our house, the great black and white cat of ours is there, and the intruder soon loses some of his fur. I have found CAGE BIRDS a great help to me, and I wish it every success.

The Affairs of the Y.C. and C.B.S. of Ireland.

Sir,—In reply to "Committeeman's" letter in reference to my ignorance of the Y.C. and C.B.S. of Ireland, I am afraid he is explaining his own position as regards its affairs. That the society's affairs are not in apple-pie order is evidenced by the proceedings at the meeting a few weeks ago. At that meeting it was proposed to proceed legally against the late chairman, Mr. Fry, for retaining the staging boards until compensated for their storage. Although not always at the meetings, I was there to see that the funds were not squandered in useless litigation. I suggested that if Mr. Fry was approached in a friendly manner things might end satisfactorily. Of course, my advice was scouted, and Mr. Birse and myself left the meeting, seeing there was no chance of a vade mecum. If legal proceedings ensue, the small sum of the society's funds may be spent without success, and I regret that, being an old member of the society, I am obliged to sever my connection as a member of the committee. PETER GILLEN.

P.S.—You may observe I write over my own name.

Prize-money at Annan Show, Held 18th December, 1911.

Sir,—In CAGE BIRDS, dated Jan. 20 last, the following letter appeared:—"Owing to our secretary being promoted to assistant superintendent in an assurance company, he has been called away to another district since the Monday after our show, and has been somewhat handicapped in getting prize-money and specials away. If exhibitors who have not yet received their prize-money will excuse him a little, he will send it as early as he can. I hope this will help to settle the minds of those who are getting anxious.—(Signed) G. Hind." Then again, in your issue of Feb. 24, the following appeared:—"The committee of Annan Show request all winning exhibitors who have not received their prizes to make known same to the chairman, Mr. Johnstone, Johnstone Street, Annan." Having, as requested in above letter, notified Mr. Johnstone that I was still without prize money won at Annan, I received a communication from a firm of Annan solicitors, dated March 19, stating they were engaged making up a balance sheet for the bird show held in December last, and that they had been handed my postcard to Mr. Johnstone, and requested me to advise them if I had yet received prize money. To this I replied I was still without prize money. I have had no communication of any kind since, nor yet received any prize money, and my object in writing to CAGE BIRDS is with the view of hearing how other exhibitors at the late Annan show have fared. The prize money due to me, I may add, is trifling, but surely those to whom money is due, no matter how small the amount, are entitled to some little satisfaction one way or another. EXHIBITOR.

A Net Query.

Sir,—Will any of your readers kindly tell me the best colour to have nets which are set on grass and how to stain them; also if there is any benefit in having them armed, and how to do it? BIRDLET.

Was it Really Bird Fever?

Seventeen Birds Saved.

Sir,—I shall be glad if you will state in your valuable paper, CAGE BIRDS, that I have had a serious loss amongst my Canaries. At the commencement of the season I acquired some new stock, and when I received them they looked "puffed" and out of condition, and were very constipated. I tried the old remedy, bread and milk, but after about three weeks they commenced to die at the rate of about one per day, until I had lost fourteen birds. I then had one bird sent to a specialist; his report was bird fever. Of course, I was worried, and thought I should lose the whole stock. A friend of mine suggested consulting Mr. Newley (of Stockwell Green, S.W.), who came and examined the birds and said he could cure most of them. I left the matter in his hands, and I am pleased to say Mr. Newley saved seventeen birds and charged me a very reasonable rate. He had them in his care about five weeks. They are now all in full moult, and I think the trouble is over. G. J. WARLEY.

Another Detachable Cage Front.

Sir,—I send you an idea for an easily removable cage front which I have found to be quite simple to contrive and satisfactory in use. In all cage fronts there are two or more wires left long, so as to push up into the top board and hold the front in position. Instead of using the front in this way, bend these wires outwardly into the form of hooks, and into the holes in the top board fix small wire staples. Then drive two small wire pins into the top edge of the bottom rail (to prevent the wire front from going inwards at the bottom). Now take two pieces of wire that are to hold the food and water glasses. Bend these round the glasses to shape, and cut off each end, leaving about three-eighths of an inch of each end to be bent downwards at right angles. Drive these ends into the top edge of the bottom rail so as to be in front of the pot holes, and when the glasses are in place they will hold the front securely. Fix a piece of wire across the front of the cage to carry the front edge of the perches, and all is complete. If the perches are made with a hoss, and screwed to the back of the cage, this wire will not be necessary. To remove the front, just take out seed and water bottles, lift up front, and unhook from the top staples. I have gathered some very valuable hints from the columns of CAGE BIRDS, and I hope some of my fellow-readers will find the above of some value to them. I know that anyone who tries it will find it a great success. J. CAPP.

*The Vanity of Dickie.

I have a Canary who, when let out of his cage, will always fly to any glass he can see himself in. One day I thought I would stop him doing this, so I covered every piece of glass in the room with paper. But when I again entered the room Dick had cleverly knocked the paper away and was, as usual, looking at himself.—Sent by Ella Terheggen (aged 15), Ivonhoe, Queen's Avenue, Church End, Finchley.

*Jackdaw Reared by Thrush

One day a friend of mine when going for a walk found an egg. She did not know what kind it was, but put it in a Thrush's nest. The bird was hatched, and when it grew older it turned all the young Thrushes out of the nest. It was a young Jackdaw. The old Thrushes fed it until it was able to fly. Then my friend caged it and it became quite tame. It followed her about the village, and the people call it "Missel," because it was brought up by Missel Thrushes.—Sent by Alice Garner (age 12), Baunold, Waterbeach, Cambs.

My Blind Linnet.

I have a Linnet, brown and small,
And to it I am kind,
Because it must be sad at heart,
For it is quite, quite blind.

Oh, only think what it must be
Never to see the flowers,
And never see the sky and trees
In golden summer hours.

But still my Linnet sweetly sings
A rippling, happy song,
As though its tiny heart o'erflowed
With joy the whole day long.

And so whenever I am cross,
And tears fall like the rain,
Oh, when I hear my Linnet sing,
It makes me good again.

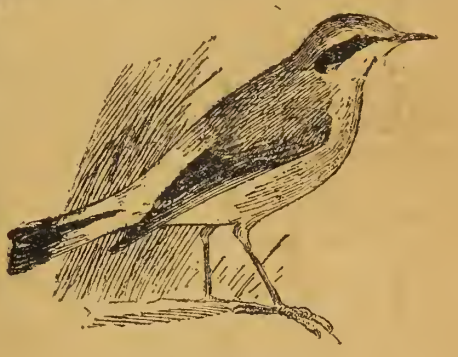
In the Courts.

The Protection of Owls.

Frederick Barnes, Brighton Road, Surbiton, was summoned for having in his possession at Kingston Market, on July 27, two Owls recently taken, contrary to the Act 43 and 44 Vic., chapter 35, section 3.

Henry Taylor, a clerk in the office of the Royal Society for the Protection of Birds, and residing at Claremont Avenue, New Malden, said on passing through the market his attention was called to two young Barn Owls, one of which was very clean and apparently fresh from the nest, and the other in a battered condition, and not more than 10½ inches in length, the normal length being 13 inches. Witness did not speak to the defendant, but heard him say that he had obtained the birds from a gentleman at Surbiton, who brought them from Germany. Witness inferred recent capture from the size of one bird, and from its battered condition, which might have been due to its efforts to escape from the cage. When witness passed again, about forty minutes later, the birds had been put in a larger one.

Mrs. Taylor, wife of the previous witness, corroborated, and said she asked defendant if the Owls were for sale, and he said they were, adding that it was all right, as Owls were not protected. She told him they were, and defendant then told her they had come from Germany. She was assistant secretary of the society.



Station-Sergt. Waters said he received a complaint from the society, and saw defendant, who told him he bought the birds from a lady at Surbiton, and that they were only on his stall for about half-an-hour, when they were exchanged for a Parrot. He said he did not think he was doing any harm, as the birds had been brought from Germany. Witness produced a list of the protected birds, which included Owls.

The Mayor, without asking for the defence, said the magistrates were not satisfied that the case was made out, and the summons would be dismissed.

Wild-Bird Life.

August Notes.

The wild birds sang gaily in the month of May, but the glorious weather we had at the commencement of the summer has not been maintained. Day after day it rains, so that on heavy lands the earth is sodden, as though it were mid-winter. The birds look sadly uncomfortable, ragged, and untidy; hardly a note can be heard during the day, and the Robin alone seems to have spirits enough left to be musical. Even his notes are somewhat mournful, telling of autumn's advent, and the passing of our brief summer. Just now it is moulting time, and although showers promote the growth of feathers, it is doubtful if the continual rain does not so much depress the spirits of our feathered friends, that the change of feathers is an operation performed with greater difficulty under the present conditions than during the phenomenally dry weather of last season.

THE WHEATEAR.

The birds' movement to sunnier lands commences in the month of August, and to study this, one wants to be in the track of the passing flocks. Apparently they make their way southwards in small parties, and gather together in hundreds along the wide stretches of down land, and flat marshes bordering the sea. Here the bird lover may become acquainted with many species that he may not have the opportunity of noting in his daily rambles.

Bold Wheatears haunt the sea-wall and banks of the tidal river, not in flocks, but scattered over a long stretch of the wall, with, in many cases, only a few yards separating each individual. By gently driving them along one can get a dozen or two covering quite a small space, and then, as one advances, they fly out from the wall, and, making a half circle, settle behind him. A few may be found on the rising ground at the foot of the downs, but, as thistles, docks and wild plants grow in such places in abundance, this ground is mostly frequented by Finches, who are here in their hundreds.

Among the Wild Birds in Late August.

A Ramble in the Colne Valley.

Mr. H. Goodchild, one of "Cage Birds" artists, tells how Londoners may enjoy a delightful day.

Within easy reach of London lies a tract of country where, in the course of a day's ramble, one may see many of the Passerine (and other) birds, which our exhibitors love, more indeed, far more, than I have been accustomed to see in my beloved Epping Forest.

I had often been invited by Mr. G. Crabb, the esteemed President of the L. and P.O.S., to accompany him on one of his favourite walks, but something had always occurred to prevent my going, and truth to tell, I had felt sceptical that any better place could be found than Epping Forest.

Bird Life From a Train.

However, the Fates were kind, and I found myself free to go with Mr. Crabb on Sunday, August 25th. Leaving West Hampstead about 10.40, we arrived at Ickenham Halt soon after 11 o'clock, having noted many Spotted Flycatchers sitting on the boundary wires of the railway as we went along. From the train we saw also the Peewit, Starling, Rooks, and Jackdaws, and noticed a Kestrel flying over the open fields.

Directly we got out of the station, we saw a pair of Kestrels flying around a tree close to the railway. In Ickenham Village, the House Martin was seen, feeding its young, in the only tenanted nests seen during the day, though the Spotted Flycatchers were seen feeding their young several times.

We turned off the roads into a park, which fortunately has a right of way through it. Soon we saw Song Thrushes feeding on the ground in a field, and with them Mistle Thrushes and near by a pair of Blackbirds. In a hawthorn bush I identified a Lesser Whitethroat, and at the same time heard the Wren singing and heard the metallic notes of the Greenfinch, as well as the joyous notes of the Swallow all around. Passing some ornamental water, we saw the Waterhen, the Mute Swan, and just caught sight of a Pied Wagtail.

A Climb Declined.

Going up what was labelled a "Private road" (which proved to be the wrong way) we saw, amongst fir and oak and willow trees by the road side, the five characteristic British Tits, the Great, Blue, Marsh, Cole, and Long-tailed, all in about as many minutes. We saw also a nest that might have been a Jay's, some thirty feet up a tree, but did not investigate it. Pheasants were evidently reared in numbers in this locality, for we saw numbers in the fields, but the gorse bushes which fringed the fields did not yield us either the Linnet or the Yellow Bunting, though we got very near to young Swallows perching on the wire fences.

Arrived at the high road again (which was only gained at the expense of a broken umbrella and loss of some blood—through thorns) we saw a Kestrel hovering over some fields, but on the common near Uxbridge we looked in vain for the typical birds that would have frequented the common but for the unfortunate burning of the gorse that occurred last year.

Two Jewels in one Setting.

Down to the Colne we took our way, and when only some 100 yards from the houses of Uxbridge, Mr. Crabb (who had generally sighted birds before I did) called out to me, and looking, I saw two Kingfishers in full view, only some 20 yards off on the other side of the river. I had never seen two together before, nor had so good a view. Crossing a river, we saw a flock of Linnets over the railway, and amongst the bushes by the riverside saw a Willow Warbler, seemingly clean through his moult. As we made our way across some open fields, Mr. Crabb asked me if a certain bird he saw was a Heron, and by the aid of a powerful prismatic binocular, I saw that it was; the bird settled in full view on the banks of the canal. Over and near the canal were many Sand Martins, which we surmised must have been bred at some distance and which were now distributed over the ground suitable for obtaining food, but not for nesting purposes.

By the waters of the Colne we sat down and ate. After our al fresco lunch we went on towards Denham, and near the place where the Misbourne comes in, we heard and sighted a Redpoll, which I identified by its peculiar shape as seen silhouetted against the sky. Flycatchers in numbers were seen in this locality and I think I must have seen as many this one day as I ever saw in my life before.

A Promise Fulfilled.

The day, which was the first fine one for many days, was bright enough to have brought out many butterflies and besides the "whites" I saw a "small copper," one of the "blues" and the "Red Admiral." In a willow tree near the Misbourne, I again saw the Long-tailed Tits, and with them a Goldcrest, rather a shabby one, but unmistakable. Soon Mr. Crabb saw a Dove on the wing and I just got a glimpse, as it settled, of the white tips to its outer tail feathers—a Turtle Dove beyond doubt. Through Denham we went, and on the outskirts, in a field amongst grazing horses, were about a dozen Wagtails, mostly pied, but with them two yellows. Over the same fields was a Kestrel. Again coming on to Misbourne River, I was delighted to see what Mr. Crabb had practically promised me—a family party of Little Grebes or Dabchicks—three young and their parents; the latter often dived, but I did not notice them feeding their young ones. There were also many Waterhens here and Wild Ducks.

Turning our faces southwards, we re-entered the village of Denham and had tea, afterwards retracing our steps down the Misbourne, and I managed to identify the Stock Dove and the Wood Pigeon, both flying, the former by its small size and the absence of white above, and the latter by the white tract across the wing.

Forty-six Species in one Day.

Amongst rank vegetation bordering the Colne, we, after some trouble, identified the Reed Warbler, and a little later a pair of Sedge Warblers, both of which showed a tendency to keep out of sight of our glasses and to keep the river between us and themselves.

Just as we were leaving the river for the evening, I noticed a bird on a telegraph wire, and on examination it proved to be a female Bullfinch. I myself had not felt sure of having seen either the Peewit, the Carrion Crow or the Partridge on the outward journey, but saw all three on the way back. Add to this that I had seen and heard the Robin, caught a glimpse of a male Chaffinch, that Mr. Crabb heard a Jay, and that the ubiquitous Sparrow might be included, we had between us seen or heard 46 species of birds in one day, a total which was over twice what I consider an average, and the best day's outing for number of species that I ever remember in my life.

Club Reports.

WIVELISCOMBE AND DIST. F.A.

Committee meeting held Aug. 19, Rev. H. McOnrick in the chair. Open and member's show fixed for Nov. 21. Last year's schedule gone through and altered. Shall be glad to hear from members wishing to join, subscription 1/6 a year. Members' classes for cage birds.—Chas. Hy. Hill and E. W. Wascombe, hon. joint secs.

JARROW, HEBBURN C.B.S.

Meeting held in Lockhart's Cafe, Mr. O'Hagan chairman, with a good attendance of members. Three new members, Mr. Wollerton, Mr. Deighton, and Mr. Gracie, were elected. Date for Open Show was fixed for Dec. 21, when we hope to have the support we have had in former shows. Classes for same were fixed, Yorks 6, Nor. 6, Border 6, Selling class 1, Mule or Hybrid 1, A.O.V. Canary 1, British Linnet 1, A.O.S. Hardbill 1, Softbill 1. Hyde's special, members' classes not fixed. Next meeting will be able to fix judge. A hearty invitation to any fancier to come and join us.—H. Ayres, Sec.

MANCHESTER & N. COUNTIES O.S

General meeting held August 19th, the Rev. F. Richards presiding over a moderate attendance. The secretary announced that the patronage of the following specialist clubs had been secured for our annual open show, October 25th and 26th: Lancs. C.C., Lancs. and Liz. C.C., Cinn. Mkd. Yorks. C.C., Cinn. C.C., Open Norwich C.C., Border Fancy C.C., English and Welsh Border Fancy C.C., Green C.C., and Foreign Bird Club. Letter was read from the secretary (pro. tem.) of the proposed Amalgamated Show inviting us to join with Ardwick and District C.B.S., Manchester C.B.S., Pendleton and Salford C.B.S., and others in a combined members' show towards the end of the year. Messrs. Cook and Fulcher and the secretary were appointed to attend the delegates' meeting, and report to the members at the next meeting, when we hope to have a good attendance to give us their views re joining with the other societies. It is to be hoped all the members will do their best to attend the meeting on September 2nd, there being some very important business to be got through.—H. Boothman, Hon. Sec.

LANCASHIRE AND LIZARD F.A.

Meeting held August 10th, at the Old Boar's Head Hotel, Manchester, when we had a very large number of members present, Mr. Garner in the chair. We have missed this well known fancier for one or two meetings owing to ill-health, but are pleased to say he is looking and feeling better again. The chief business was patronage, and it was decided we try and break fresh ground if possible, and make our varieties more popular than at present, and the secretary was instructed to try and get our varieties in new places. We have already granted patronage for Lancs. and Lizards at the following shows: Manchester, October 25th and 26th; Sheffield, November 1st and 2nd; Nottingham, November 9th and 11th; Rochdale, November 22nd and 23rd; L.C.B.A., November 20th and 20th; and Lizards only at Bradford National, December 6th, 7th, and 9th. We are also again having one or two club shows for members only, dates not fixed. It was the general opinion that the only way to make our varieties more popular is by our members making some sacrifices, so I am appealing to breeders of these two varieties to help to make bigger classes, and not have one or two good shows, and the rest miserable failures, as we cannot blame societies for not providing classes, if we do not make an effort to make them paying concerns. We were pleased to welcome Mr. George Fitton, of Lancashire fame, once again as a member. On behalf of our society I wish to tender our sympathy to our old friend Teddy Whipp in his sad bereavement. Novice breeders of Lancashires and Lizards are especially invited to join the L. and L.F.A., as I think we treat them fairly well in the matter of specials, and we have also plenty of room for old fanciers as well. The next meeting will be held at the Church Inn, Oldham, September 14th, due notice of which will be given in the Fancy papers. I think personally it would help our favourites if breeders would give us the benefit of their opinions, etc., through the columns of Cage Birds, as we, as a body, seem strangely backward in discussing our varieties. I have still three copies of the L. and L.F.A. members' photographs, taken at the Glossop meeting, to spare, price 1s. each. All members are requested, if intending showing for specials, to forward their subscriptions at an early date, as any not paid by September 20th will not be eligible to compete at our opening show, viz., Manchester. I will send particulars for benefit of new members on application at 44, Hall Carr road, Rawtenstall, Lancs.—John Rukin, Hon. Sec.

NEWCASTLE-UPON-TYNE C.B.S.

Committee meeting held Thursday, August 8th, Mr. M. C. Potts in chair. Letter was read from Green Canary Association granting patronage in Yorkshire and Border sections. Letter also read from Lancashire and Lizard Association. Rules and regulations were made for open show on October 18th and 19th. We have got the patronage of the following specialist societies: Northern Lizard, Northern Border and S.F., Northern British Bird, M. and F.B., Northern Yorks., Northern Norwich, and Cinn., National British Bird and M.C., Border Fancy, Foreign Bird, Open Norwich Plainhead, Green Canary Assn., Yorks. C.C. Will members please let me have specials at next meeting, September 5th. August 31st is last day for paying subscriptions; if not paid then, they will not be eligible to show at reduced fee in open classes.—J. W. Reed, Sec.

COWDENBEATH C.B.S.

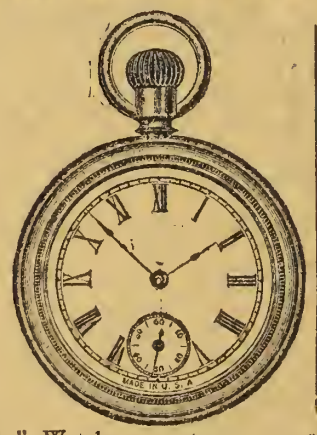
Monthly meeting, held Foulford Arms, Aug. 21, Mr. A. Simpson, presiding. The secretary read letter re a lecture on colour feeding, and it was agreed to try and fix up same for Sept. 4. It was also intimated that the society had been granted the patronage of the Scottish Yorkshire Club for the Open Show. The society's canvassers reported excellent progress, Mr. A. R. Dick having presented a handsome challenge cup for competition. The secretary was instructed to secure all necessary goods for the Open Show, and apply for Messrs. Hyde's and Sandford's specials; also to secure estimates for model prize cards. The classification was reviewed, and the following agreed to: Scotch Fancy 10 classes, judge Mr. Wm. Rodger; Bord. 10 classes, judge, Mr. J. Paterson; Yorks. 9, A.O.V. and Common 1 each, judge Mr. J. W. Bruce; Nor. 16, judge, Mr. C. Campbell; Crest and C.B. 9, judge, Mr. G. Arnott; Mules, Hyb. and Brit. 21, judge, Mr. L. J. Arright. The following new members were elected, Messrs. J. Harper, James Murray, T. Simpson, Alex. Muir, and W. Peel.—Joseph R. Reid Sec.

WATFORD AND DISTRICT C.B.S.

Meeting held at headquarters, the Essex Arms, August 13, to pay prize-money for the first feather show. There was a good attendance, with Mr. R. J. Pretty in the chair. The balance-sheet of the young bird show was handed round, and the hon. sec. was congratulated on being able to show a good balance on the right side. A vote of thanks was also passed to Mr. Campbell for his kindness in paying judge's fee. Mr. F. Easterling gave a most excellent lecture on colour-feeding, with a few notes on how to become a successful exhibitor. This lecture was delivered in a masterly style, while the members listened attentively. A number of questions were asked, and these were answered by the lecturer in an able and satisfactory manner. The meeting concluded with a vote of thanks to Mr. Easterling for his kindness, and a desire expressed that he would come amongst us again at a later date. To this the lecturer replied that he would be only too pleased to do anything for the good of the Fancy.—W. Rackley, Hon. Sec.

ANNFIELD PLAIN F.F. & C.B.S.

Meeting held August 21th; a grand attendance. Two new members; Mr. H. Cresswell and Mr. J. Oxley were enrolled. Decided to advertise show two clear weeks in Fancy papers. Moved that we engage the Co-op. Hall as well as the schools, so that we may have plenty of room to show the exhibits to every advantage. We are using all our endeavours in catering for the birdy men, having engaged the hall especially for cage birds alone, and the schools for the poultry, etc., therefore we sincerely hope for a bumping entry to make our first venture a great success. Members who have not returned duplicates, etc., kindly oblige at once to close the draw. With the sale of tickets our funds will have increased some £15 to £20. Members who received subscription lists last meeting please do their utmost re gathering specials. Any other members requiring these lists I shall be pleased to supply same. Next meeting September 28th, at Mr. Frick's.—J. W. Christon, Sec.



CINNAMON C.C.

A Trophy for Competition.

Committee meeting held at Blackburn, August 15th, a good muster turning up. Letters were read from Newcastle C.B.S., Burton-on-Trent, H. W. Battye, and J. Walsh. Re tabs for cages, it was decided to charge members 1d. each for same to cover cost, to be obtained from the secretary. Mr. V. H. Deacon presented a handsome pair of pictures for seacon competition, Mrs. Deacon, W. Godley, and W. Dormer to be barred from competing for same. This gives the little man a chance of winning something good. I appeal to the outside members to get a special or two, which will be appreciated. It was decided to have a permanent rule book printed, and to have breeders' cards inserted at 1s. each. Please apply at once for space. The club show specials were left for secretary to allot. Novices are specially provided for in the way of classification, so I hope they will appreciate the committee's work in getting these classes put in by sending good entries. It was decided to again have a trophy for competition. Mr. A. Bentley, Great Harwood, to be secretary for same. A meeting of fanciers interested will be called shortly by Mr. Bentley. The patronage will be at Burton-on-Trent, Manchester (club show), Liverpool, Bradford National, Aberdeen, Scottish National, and Crystal Palace. Subs. are due, and as the show season will soon be here, I would ask all members to be clear before it begins, or their points will not count. The half-yearly meeting, will be held at Manchester open show on the Saturday.—J. W. Metcalfe, Hon. Sec.

The Shows.

HARTLEPOOLS C.B.S.

Second N.F. show held August 21, in St. George's Hall. About 50 exhibits were staged. Considering the lateness of the season, the birds were in very good condition. The awards of Mr. Wake (Middlesbrough), who judged, gave general satisfaction, and a hearty vote of thanks was accorded him for his services. YORKS. CL. YELL.: 1, 3, 4, Pyman; 2, Hall. BRISBANE CANARY IMPROVEMENT SOCIETY.

Nineteenth annual show held July 12th and 13th. The show was the largest that the society has ever held in Brisbane, and the quality also excelled anything that has before been seen. The sec., Mr. Soden, writes that the judging of Yorks. and Nor. met with some little criticism. According to cutalogue received, the principal winners were: Belgians, Mr. Soden; Yorks., Messrs. Day, Thomson, Hodgson, Bettany, Day, Lyle, Miller, Soden, McGrory, Hynd; Lizards, McGrory, Soden; Nor., Soden, Grace, McGrory, Lyle, Bettany, Day, Crests, Benstead, Williams, Grace, Dixon, Stephens; C.B., Benstead, Stephens, Grace, McGrory, Dixon; Mules, Williams, Soden; Brit. and For., Soden, Grace, Day; special for best Yorks., Mr. Bettany; best Nor., Mr. Soden; best Crest and best C.B., Mr. Grace.

LLANRWST.

Annual show held Aug. 22, in connection with the well-known Agricultural Show, the weather was all that could be desired, and the show was well attended. Two classes only were provided for cage birds, Canary and Goldfinch, but some good birds were shown. Mr. H. E. Blackwall, secretary, is a very energetic official, and handled the reins well throughout, we hope the classification will be extended for future shows. Mr. T. H. Stretch, Ormskirk, made the awards. GOLDFINCH: 1, 2, spl, Jones, a grand pair, the winner is a good-sized, typical Finch, with a good head, grand width of skull, rich coloured expansive blaze, nicely cut away, in lustrous form, well known, shown faultlessly, 2nd good colour, nice size, rare tan and markings, in good form, beaten polish; 3, Evans and Roberts, grand stamp, well known, good size, blaze and colour, not in form to-day. CANARY: 1, res, Williams, Yorks., cl. Buff, rare length and style, full of quality, rich colour, neat wings and tail, plenty of nerves, just completing his new clothes, res a typical cl. Norwich Buff, rare size and colour; 2, 3, Roberts and Kershaw, yell. Nor., good size and quality, and Yorks. Buff, good length and position, plenty of leg.

AUCKLAND C.B.C.

The Fancy Making Headway in New Zealand.

The second annual show in connection with the above club was, in the absence of the Hon. A. M. Meyers, M.P. (patron of the club), opened by Mr. J. M. Thompson (president of the North Island Assn.). In a neat speech, Mr. Thompson complimented the officers, committee, and members of the club on the arrangements for the show, which he said were in detail perfect. The entries (a record for New Zealand) numbered 312, and the show was one of the finest and best high-class exhibitions of Canaries ever held in the Colonies. Novice classes, recently formed by the club, were extra good, the quality of the birds being high-class, as well as the entries being large, as also were the lady's bracelet classes, some of the best birds in the show being benched in both the above sections. The judges, Mr. T. Brown (Yorkshire and position birds), and Mr. C. Duncan (Norwich, C.B., and Crest), though faced with a hard task, gave great satisfaction. With regard to the novice classes, Mr. Brown remarked that he had great difficulty in placing first, second, and third Yorkshire birds., also the winners in the bracelet classes. He considered them equal in merit to those shown in the open; in fact, stated that the winners must also have won in their respective classes in open company. The A.C. and C.B. Club formed two years ago, has made wonderful progress, and the exhibits, as shown, were in the opinion of several English and Scotch fanciers (quite a number of whom have arrived in our city lately, and are always assured of a hearty welcome), would favourably compete in some of the largest home shows. For the last four or five years the importation of first-class stock has been pretty heavy, and the result is very apparent in the quality of birds benched in our shows, which is now red-hot. Messrs. Eastway Bros. lately imported a number of birds from Messrs. Ogden Bros., and with birds bred from them won the cup for best Yorks. with a real topper, a buff cinn. even marked unflighted, and in a good number of other classes, won with birds of same breeding, also with the imported stock, even though such consistent winners as W. A. Hanson and A. Vercoe had better birds staged than ever this year. In Norwich, Eastway Bros. scored with a yellow hen, this exhibit winning the cup for best bird in the show—truly a wonderful hen. In Scotch Fancy there is room for improvement, but as this breed has only lately been taken up with much interest, we may look for something to go on with later. A. J. Vercoe secured first and special with an old winner, the other exhibits not far away. The winner of cup for best in Crest and C.B. classes was a variegated buff, green Crest, unflighted, a very large one, bred by W. A. Hanson. Messrs. Eastway Bros.' cup winner for best Yorks., mentioned previously, was a wonderful bird of good length, well up. The principal other exhibitors, A. J. Vercoe and W. A. Hanson, had some rare ones, still were outcaussed by the cup winner, A. J. Vercoe winning special in the unflighted class with a real nice one. W. A. Hanson benched some beauties, including a cinnamon cock (imported), winner of 14 firsts, and also a son of the same bird, winner of 12 firsts. The cup winner in the novice section, belonging to M. H. Jansen (a clear buff cock unflighted), is fit to win anywhere. The runner-up, a yellow cock, Mr. Moody, was a very nice one. The lady's bracelet (a class which caused a great deal of interest), was won by Miss Gladys Vercoe, with a buff hen, showing plenty of quality. Some 100 odd birds were shown in Yorks., and though the judge, Mr. Brown, well knows his business, his task was by no means an easy one. That is right, Yorks. fanciers, go on and improve still more. In Norwich, the classes were even. The judge, Mr. C. Duncan, though a breeder and exhibitor for a good number of years, had the judge's book in his hands for the first time, and was right on his mettle, his placings meeting with general satisfaction. Here the gem of the show, Mrs. Eastway's clear yell. hen, scored not only cup for best Norwich, but also cup and award for best bird in the show. Clear yell., tight in feather, beautiful round head, and short neck, compact, short body, with perfect wing carriage, she undoubtedly deserved her win, the runner-up, same owner, being a buff cock, good chest, bold head, massive, a good one, but left behind by the hen. In all classes the judge considered there was more quality and type than ever benched here before. In colour feds there was great competition. Mr. J. Cornwell's birds were wonderful in colour, and well staged. Quite a feature is the prominence of the points in head and neck in the bird shown by this old and exceptionally keen fancier, whose turn to be at the top in Norwich is fast approaching. In novice Norwich there was great competition, Mr. F. Connor winning the cup by a narrow margin from Master Robinson, both wonderful birds. Here it was proved that to win one's way out of the novice section one must have only the best of birds. In Crest and C.B., again some good ones were shown, W. A. Hanson, who has been always a winner, winning the cup for best current year Crest or C.B. by a narrow margin from a novice, Mr. Finn, who won with a C.B. heavily lashed, of great size, plenty of feather, will prove a great winner later on. In the Light or Grey Crests, another novice, Mr. Brain, stepped in with a really wonderful bird, plenty of size and quality all through. These two novices tackled a hard proposition in breeding Crest and C.B.'s to beat the ones that are here already. Novice classes in Crests exceptionally good. Finches and Mules fair classes. A white Cockatoo and green Mexican Parrot amused the juvenile part of the audience by talking to each other. The attendance was very good both days, and the feeling of the fanciers is most cordial; progress noted everywhere. An old fancier who had dropped his pets for a time paid a very tall price for a pair of Yorkshires on the closing night to start off again with, and right glad will the club be to have him again as an exhibitor and member. The president, secretary, and committee worked hard, and the success that crowned their efforts amply repaid their labours. Looking forward to better times, larger shows, increased membership, the club is out for specially good times. Next year we hope to have the North Island championship decided at our exhibition. CAGE BIRDS is eagerly look for each English mail, and a right hearty welcome is assured any of your readers who may come to our city, especially if they are fanciers.—Martyn H. Jansen.

According to the catalogue received, the principal winners, other than mentioned above, were Messrs. McKay, Knight, McFarlane, Brown, Edwards, Ford, Cumming, Barber, Good, King, Brain, Searle, and Kelly, Clay, Syers.

The schedule, also to hand, is a particularly well got up booklet, and contains the standards and points values of Yorks. C.C., the Green C.C., the Southern Norwich C.C., and the Crested C.C. It is illustrated by representations of typical Yorkshire, Norwich, Cinnamon, and Crest Canaries, and we note that these are all reproductions of pictures by CAGE BIRDS' artist, Mr. H. Norman, which appear in handbooks published by us: "The Canary Manual," "Norwich Canaries," and "Yorkshire Canaries." We think some acknowledgment might have been made in the schedule of the source from which the pictures were taken.

Singing Contests.

LEEDS.

Weekly contest for quality held at Old Bird House, King's Head, Shannon Street, Aug. 24, when 12 birds sung for three good prizes given by Mr. Tillotson. 1 Wigfield; 2, Stead; 3, Kelly. Judges, S. Hardcastle, W. Naylor. Also August 25, when 17 birds sung for three good prizes. 1 Richardson, 2, Wigfield, 3 Butler. Judges, A. Jennings, W. Naylor, S. Hardcastle.—Walter Naylor, Hon. Sec.

Week-end Linnet singing contest, Aug. 25, at Prince Albert Inn, when 12 birds entered to sing for three good prizes given by Mrs. Saynor. Judges: Messrs. C. Lorriman and A. Lorriman. 1, Clark; 2, Chippendale; 3, Playforth.—E. Wood, Hon. Sec.

CASTLEFORD.

Weekly Linnet contest held at George and Dragon Hotel, Bridge-street. Eighteen birds sang for three good prizes, and a record was put up by the winner. 1st, E. Smith, 125; 2nd and 3rd, W. Nelson, 70 and 56. Mr. Smith thus wins our challenge cup which is given for the bird doing the highest score of the year, the bird at the same time doing the longest break for which we give a medal. This must be a record for Linnet singing—a cup value £10, one gold, and one silver medal in one sing.—Walter Dobson, Hon. Sec.

SALFORD.

The next contest will be held at the Boat House Hotel, Sept. 7, at 3. After the contest a special meeting will be held to decide the value of prizes to be awarded, the winners of merit and highest scores at the annual meeting. Every member is earnestly requested to attend; chairman, Mr. H. Cootes.—B. Wharton, Hon. Sec.

REPEATING OF ADVERTISEMENTS

Advt. Manager. "Cage Birds."

DEPOSIT SYSTEM.

We are not responsible for the statements made in advertisements, nor of the bona-fides of either buyers or sellers In all transactions the adoption of our Deposit System should be insisted upon

IMPORTANT.

SEND THE FULL COMMISSION.—If the full commission does not accompany the deposit, the vendor will not be notified of its receipt until the amount deficient, plus the extra postage incurred, has been paid to us.

HOW TO REMIT.—Under no circumstances will Cheques or Post-dated Money Orders be accepted as deposits. Uncrossed Postal Orders must be sent and the numbers taken for safety.

RULES.

1.—PROCEDURE.—The intending purchaser should send to this office the amount of the purchase (our deposit fee included), and at the same time he should communicate with the seller, stating what it is he requires sent on approval. We acknowledge receipt of the deposit to both parties. In all cases the depositor should give his name and address, and also that of the vendor, and must write same clearly and distinctly.

2.—END OF TRANSACTION.—The deposit is retained by us until we hear from both parties that the transaction has been completed. If a sale has been effected, we hand the amount deposited to the seller. If a sale has not been effected, we return the amount to the depositor. The transaction must be conducted by the parties themselves. We merely hold the deposit.

3.—AMOUNT OF COMMISSION.—The fee is 6d. for each £1, or fraction of £1, and it must be sent at same time as the deposit.

4.—IMPORTANT POINTS.—The depositor must decide within forty-eight hours of the receipt of the goods whether he will keep or return the same, unless, that is, some other period of approval (of which we must be advised) is agreed upon by both parties. The depositor must at the same time notify us of the fact that he has returned the goods. If the goods are not returned within the said forty-eight hours, we reserve the right to send the deposit to the seller after the expiration of that period. And should the seller fail within three days to notify us of the receipt of his goods back again, the transaction will be treated as ended, and the deposit will be returned to the depositor.

5.—A SATISFACTORY PURCHASE.—When a transaction has been completed to the satisfaction of both depositor and seller, both parties must at once return the deposit receipts as a guarantee of its completion. The depositor must at the same time instruct us to pay over the deposit to the seller.

6.—GOODS ALREADY SOLD.—If the goods are sold before our deposit note reaches the seller, or if for any other reason he declines to do business, he must at once return the deposit note to us. Failing its receipt, we reserve the right to return the deposit to the sender after the expiration of three days.

7.—FRESH TRANSACTION.—In case no sale be effected, a deposit is available for purposes of a fresh transaction, provided another deposit fee be paid.

8.—GOODS IN TRANSIT.—Goods in transit are at the seller's risk, and any damage or loss sustained on the journey must be borne by the seller. But goods not approved of must be properly packed and returned by the same means as were used in sending the same.

9.—PAYMENT OF CARRIAGE.—The payment of carriage must be a matter for arrangement between the vendor and depositor. We do not undertake to settle disputes affecting question of carriage. But in the absence of other arrangements the purchaser is liable for the carriage of the goods, and if the goods are sent on approval and returned, each party pays the carriage one way.

10.—DISPUTES.—In case of a dispute, the decision of the Editor is final.

A VITAL point in the successful keeping of Softbills (and particularly the smaller and more delicate species), is proper feeding. For that reason keepers of Softbills should not be without "Nutshell No. 25." If you study the hints given therein by H. J. Fulljames you simply cannot have feeding troubles. All the best-known of the smaller insectivorous birds are dealt with in this booklet, which also tells you how to collect ants' eggs and discusses the various cages and hand rearing, 2d. from agents (list frequently published), or 2½d. post free from "Cage Birds," 154, Fleet-st., London, E.C.

SOFTBILL keepers, take expert advice before proceeding to buy and keep the larger species of Insectivorous birds. You will then have no trouble in keeping your pets in the best of health. This advice is offered in "Nutshell No. 26," by H. J. Fulljames. It is a wonderful little work, dealing with most varieties in a highly interesting and instructive manner. Foods and their preparation, and the various styles of cages also receive full attention. Can you breed Mealworms? This booklet tells you how. Post free, 2½d., from "Cage Birds," 154, Fleet-st., London, E.C. Look at our list of agents; call on the nearest and get it for 2d.

THOSE about to buy a Grey Parrot will be saved money and disappointment if they read "Nutshell No. 17," before making the purchase. Those who already have a Grey will also find much in this booklet that is instructive and helpful. 2½d. post free from "Cage Birds," 154, Fleet-st., London, E.C. 2d. from our agents (list frequently published).

THERE is no more lovely seed-eater than the popular Gouldian Finch, which, however, is very difficult to establish. This trouble can be overcome, and the variety kept successfully. But you must follow the hints given in "Nutshell No. 14," from "Cage Birds," 154, Fleet-st., London, E.C., post free for 2½d. From agents (see list frequently published), 2d.

TALKING Green Parrot, handsome, unblemished plumage, speaks plainly as any Grey Parrot, fully 200 words, long sentences, most wonderful mimic, repeats anything and everything he hears, sings to piano, whistles tunes, repeats after you "Mary's Lamb," dances, laughs, cries, mews like cat; 4 years old, £3 15/-, with cage; approval before payment: E. Milton, Eagle Chambers, Liverpool.

THOUGH they can often be purchased for the modest half-crown, Pekin Nightingales are very beautiful in plumage, have a fine song, and make ideal cage or aviary birds. Some very helpful information on this variety will be found in "Nutshell No. 19," the author of which is Wesley T. Page, F.Z.S. Get it at once. 2½d. post free from "Cage Birds," 154, Fleet-st., London, E.C. 2d. from our agents (list published frequently).

WAXBILLS! (Golden-breasted, Orange-cheeked, Grey, and St. Helena). Than this interesting quartette, which can be purchased at from 2/6 to 7/6 a pair, there are few more charming foreigners. They can be successfully kept, too, with little difficulty if you will follow the hints given by Wesley T. Page, F.Z.S., in "Nutshell No. 20," 2½d. post free from "Cage Birds," 154, Fleet-st., London, E.C. Call at any of our agents and get it for 2d. (list frequently published).

PARROT PROBLEM

solved. For full proofs send postcard at once for my large book, "Parrot Prattle." This is the most wonderful book ever offered free of all charge to all Parrot fanciers. (This "Parrot Prattle" is registered copyright, and all infringers and imitators will be proceeded against). It contains hundreds of testimonials from all parts with full names and addresses, many interesting facts, and gives valuable advice and hints to all Parrot buyers. Full details of our original system of selling Parrots on four weeks' trial, at our risk, which we were the first to introduce. We sell Parrots of all descriptions on four weeks' trial, at our risk, before settlement. Cheapest and best in the Kingdom, and any Parrot sold by us and not giving full satisfaction, will be exchanged any time within twelve months. Remember we lead and others try to follow. Write to other dealers as well as us, and judge for yourselves. Lists of Parrots for sale and above book post free on receipt of postcard. Telephone No. 40 Morecambe.

BOOKLET FREE.

Finest Talking Parrots. I only deal in Parrots that will make first-class talkers; no rubbish. I am willing at all time to send my Parrots on four week's trial and three months' talking guarantee. Why? Because all my Parrots are young, strong, and reliable. My lifetime has been spent among Grey Parrots, both at home and abroad. I guarantee every customer every satisfaction. Grey Parrots are my special fancy. I have trained them, know their wants, and can give every purchaser a bird that will please him in every way. I can supply grey talkers, not thinkers, that will say almost anything, at reasonable prices. Before you purchase a grey or green Parrot, send for my Booklet, entitled "Talking Parrots." All my birds are sent on four week's trial, at my risk. Send postcard for catalogue.—Mrs. Forster, Princes Park Aviaries, Violet Street, Liverpool.

SOME ABSURDITIES OF BIRD PROTECTION ORDERS.

As usual at the end of the ordinary close season, various County Councils are advertising in local papers a list of birds which in the particular district are protected throughout the year by an extension of the close season, covering the period of the year not named in the original order, and everyone should make sure for himself which birds are included in the schedule for his own particular county or locality. Throughout the whole county of Surrey, for instance, a very large number or birds may not be taken at any time. Amongst these are the Chiff Chaff, Crossbill, Pied and Spotted Flycatcher, Goldfinch, Hoopoe, Kingfisher, Linnet, Nightingale, Nutcracker, Nuthatch, Oriole, Owl, Raven, Robin, Lesser and Mealy Redpoll, Redstart, Roller, Rosy Pastor, Siskin, Stonechat, Swallow, Swift, Coal, Crested, Long-tailed, and Marsh Tits, Grey, Pied, White and Yellow Wagtail, Blackcap, Dartford, Garden, Grasshopper, Reed, Sedge, Willow, and Wood Warblers, Wheatear, Whinchat, Whitethroat, Lesser Whitethroat, Green, Greatspotted, and Lesser-spotted Woodpeckers, Common, Firecrested, and Goldcrested Wren, Wryneck and others.

There are curiosities attaching to the publication of the above list which will be apparent to anyone who knows something more of our birds than those who are responsible for drawing up such a schedule. For example, among the birds which are not included are the Greenfinch, Great Tit, Blue Tit, The Shrikes, Waxwing, Hedge Sparrow, Tree Sparrow, the Larks, the Pipits, Blackbird, Thrush, Fieldfare, Redwing, Bramblefinch, the Buntings, Bullfinch, Chaffinch, Tree Creeper, Hawfinch, Jackdaw, Jay, Magpie, Ring Ouzel, Starling and Blue-headed Wagtail. It would seem to be beyond comprehension why the Crested Tit, a bird which has probably never been seen and never will be seen in Surrey, should be included, or why this and three other of the Tits are scheduled, while two, the Great Tit and the Blue Tit, are left out. Again, the large majority of the birds which are by the above order protected from 1st Sept. to 1st Feb. are migratory birds which are not in this country at all during the period named, excepting for a few days in September prior to migration, while the Waxwing, Bramblefinch, Fieldfare, Redwing, and others which are left out of the schedule, are in this country only throughout the period covered by the order. Of such is the wisdom of our legislators.

How to Cater for Small Softbills:

By R. C. TOUT (Portsmouth).

A very practical and informative lecture given before the Portsmouth Cage Bird Society.

The chair was taken by Mr. W. R. King, who said he had pleasure in introducing Mr. R. C. Tout, adding that what Mr. Tout would have to tell his audience would be about his own methods of caging and management, and that he had brought for their enlightenment some cages, birds, appliances, and foods, such as had brought him success on the show bench. —At the finish of Mr. Tout's paper an excellent discussion followed, after which Mr. J. A. Newberry proposed a hearty vote of thanks to Mr. Tout for his interesting and instructive remarks. This was seconded by Mr. G. T. Hall and carried unanimously.

IN their wild state, Softbills live chiefly on insects, their larvae, spiders and fruits. Could it were possible to obtain these insects, etc., all the year round, there would be no especial difficulty in keeping Softbills, but unfortunately these cannot always be obtained in sufficient quantities to be able to feed them entirely on their natural diet. It must be always borne in mind that the more of their natural food that you can procure, the better the condition in which you will be able to keep your birds.

In their native haunts, these birds are of a very active nature, and in captivity they require plenty of exercise, and a cage suitable for any of the small varieties should be about 24 inches long, 15 inches high and 10 inches deep. The kind of cage which I use has a movable wire front, which I find necessary for cleaning purposes. It is also fitted with a false calico top, which prevents the bird from damaging its head. Food and water vessels are hung inside on swing doors. Two portable perches should be used. I like the cage fitted with two small draw-boards, in preference to the long one, because you can get a stay through the middle of the cage, thus supporting the bottom and front. I find that the porcelain food and water vessels are the best, as they can be so easily kept clean.

Live food, and How to Provide it

In the matter of live food for the birds, mealworms must claim our first attention, these are invaluable in the keeping of insectivorous birds. They may be found in quantities in large flour mills. They feed on all kinds of grain and meal, and they may be easily bred by introducing the beetles into a large jar containing plenty of meal and old sacking. The beetles deposit their eggs in the sacking, and these are hatched in due course into mealworms, which, when full grown, turn into chrysalides, to emerge later as beetles.

Gentles are another valuable live food. These are the larval stage of existence of our common blow fly, and may easily be bred by hanging pieces of meat or fat where there are blow flies. It is essential to place a tray under the meat, to catch the gentles as they fall, and there should be plenty of sawdust in the bottom of the tray, whereby they can cleanse themselves of the black fluid which the body contains. But I cannot recommend the breeding of gentles, as the methods necessary to the proceeding are so very offensive.

Live ants' eggs, or cocoons, as they should be called, of the wood-ant are another valuable addition. The wood-ant is the largest of our British species. It is found principally in our woods, and it builds a large nest, which looks like a hillock of sand and earth intermixed with pieces of stick and leaves. Upon finding the nest, you should tie up your trouser bottoms, and also your coat sleeves, to prevent the ants from biting your skin, for you will not find it very pleasant if you allow one or two to pass through to your skin. Then put on a good thick pair of gloves, which completes you for the fray. Brush away the top of the nest until you come to the eggs, then unfold a large sheet of paper and carefully remove the ants and the eggs into same; place this in the sun, and turn over the corners of the paper; the ants will then proceed to carry their eggs into these corners for shelter from the sun. You can serve several nests the same in an afternoon, and then, when you have done enough, you can go back and collect up the first lot. There you will find that the ants have very carefully packed most of their eggs in the corners, which saves you the trouble of sorting.

Wasps Have a Business End.

Live wasp-comb can also be collected. The common wasp builds its nest in the ground, chiefly in banks. The taking of this nest is a very risky job, as the wasps usually put more sting into it than you do, so preparation should be made over night by placing some sulphur in the hole and setting light to same, then cover up the hole with clods of earth, and leave it for the night. Next morning proceed to dig out the nest, and you will find that all the wasps have been suffocated, with the exception, perhaps, of a few newly hatched ones. So be careful when removing the comb, or it is quite possible you may be stung. It is necessary to bake the comb in a hot oven just sufficiently to kill the grubs; the latter are then fit for use and very much relished by insectivorous birds.

Bottles and house flies can easily be obtained by using the demon beetle trap for the beetle, and the balloon fly trap for the flies. Most bakers will welcome you with the beetle trap, and after a night's catch these should be baked just enough to kill them before proceeding to cut them up, as I do not advocate giving them whole to the birds, for they are not easily digested. Butchers, fishmongers, etc., are ever ready to receive the fly traps. When you have sufficient in the trap the best method to adopt is to pour a kettle of very hot water over trap and flies. When all the flies have been killed, tip them on to a sheet of blotting paper to dry; they are then ready for use.

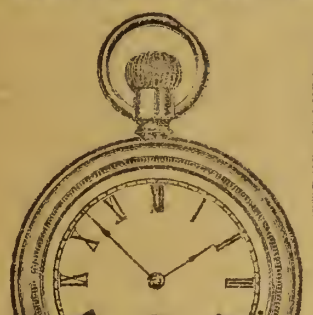
Caterpillars, spiders, etc., are very much relished by the birds, and these can easily be collected if you go for a stroll in the country, where there are any woods or coppices. The best way is to place a large sheet of paper or an umbrella (open) under a nut bush or a small oak tree. Then give the tree a good shake. The caterpillars and spiders will fall on to the paper, and you can easily place them in your collecting box. At times you can gather some of these insects in your own gardens, as well as earwigs and wood lice, etc. Should you not feel disposed to collect your own live-food, it can always be purchased in season from reliable men.

A Good Stock-Food

As regards a good stock food for the birds, I will describe the ingredients. Dried ant cocoons should be of a good quality and not older than of the previous year's crop; also absolutely free from mite. A good quality can easily be tested by handling; you will find that they have a distinctly oily touch and a quite pleasant smell. Old (stale) eggs are dark brown and full of mite, and do not carry the pleasant odour. They are very much used for all varieties of softbills, especially the smaller species. A very good sample can be brought for 2s. 6d. to 3s. per lb.

Dried flies form another ingredient which I strongly recommend. Some fanciers do not believe them to be of any use. These flies are imported into this country by the ship-load. They are caught by the million on the lakes and swamps of Mexico. One thing to bear well in mind is that you get a good sample, for I have had flies offered to me which have been nothing more or less than skins, legs and wings and full of mite. A good sample can be bought for 2s. 6d. per lb.

Meat meal and silkworm pupæ are both easily obtained from reliable firms, and should be purchased in small quantities, so as to be as fresh as possible. Biscuit meal can be made from any kind of biscuit, but I prefer the Osborne, or fancy lunch. The egg food is imported into this country in several different forms, but I find that the egg flake is the most suitable, and strongly recommend fanciers to never be without it, for it is one of the most nourishing foods we have, and it is also very easily digested. Sponge cake and cream cheese can be obtained from our local confectioners and dairies. It is necessary for the sponge cake to be at the least one day old, or you will have great difficulty to crumble same.



And How to Mix it.

This concludes the ingredients of our stock food, but, of course, it is no use me telling you all about the ingredients unless I give you the proportions in which they are to be used. I have found it very dangerous to mix them out of their right proportions, as some of them are of a very fattening nature. I use for my own birds: Two parts powdered biscuit, one part ants' eggs, one part dried flies, half-part crumbled sponge-cake, quarter-part meat-meal, quarter-part silk-worm pupæ (by measure). These ingredients, when thoroughly mixed together, form a most desirable stock food.

RAVEN, Esq., Nottingham; MALCOLM ROBERTS, Esq., Baron's Court; LACY RUMSEY, Esq., Oporto; M. THOMSON, Esq., New Zealand.

The great calamity which has befallen the City of Norwich spells disaster to thousands of the hardest workers and poorest dwellers in the world-known Cathedral city, and the floodgates of charity are already opened in an endeavour to ameliorate to some extent the unhappy condition of the humble citizens who have lost their little all.

It has been decided to open a shilling subscription with the object of ameliorating the sad distress in which these poor bird-breeders find themselves. Relief funds already started will ensure that the inhabitants of the devastated quarters do not suffer from absolute starvation, but it is not to be expected that any portion of such funds should be devoted to the re-establishment of the stocks of Canaries which have been swept away. In fact, it would be impossible, in many cases, to replace the strains which have been built up by years of strenuous endeavour, but we can at least provide the sufferers with material for a fresh start.

I hope that not only every member of CAGE BIRDS LEAGUE, but every reader of our organ, CAGE BIRDS, will join in this charity by forwarding a Postal Order for one shilling to me at the above address. Every contribution will be acknowledged in our columns, and the money will be disbursed under special local supervision, the assistance of the Norwich Alliance All England Cage Bird Association having been requisitioned for that purpose.

The subscriptions will not be limited to one shilling. Any amount from one shilling upwards will be gratefully received and duly acknowledged in our columns.

TERMS OF MEMBERSHIP.

PATRONS.—A donation of not less than Ten Guineas in one amount, or an annual subscription of not less than Two Guineas, shall constitute the donor or subscriber a Patron.

LIFE MEMBERS.—A donation of not less than Five Guineas in one amount shall constitute the donor a Life Member.

VICE PRESIDENTS.—An annual subscription of not less than Half-a-Guinea shall constitute the subscriber a Vice President.

HONORARY LIFE MEMBERS.—The payment to CAGE BIRDS LEAGUE of a legacy of £20 and upwards shall constitute the administrator or executor making the payment an Honorary Life Member. A form of bequest will be sent, post free, on application.

ORDINARY MEMBERS shall pay an annual subscription of Two Shillings and Sixpence.

JUNIOR MEMBERS.—Members under the age of fourteen years at the date of joining shall pay an annual subscription of One Shilling.

Leaflets setting forth the aims and objects of the LEAGUE will be forwarded, post free, to any reader upon application.

BADGES.

Neat and unobtrusive badges are supplied to members, without any charge beyond their subscriptions as above. The badges may be had either in button form, or mounted in rolled gold in two forms, one as a brooch for ladies or for cycling caps or coat lapel, and the other as a pendant for bracelet or watch-chain. The kind required should be specified clearly.

MEDALS.

Gold, Silver, and Bronze Medals are offered for competition among CAGE BIRDS LEAGUE members at Open Shows. The terms under which these will be given may be had upon application.

CAGE BIRDS FREE TO PATRONS.

SEALS AND HEADED NOTEPAPER.

GUMMED SEALS printed in gold and colours in facsimile of the LEAGUE BADGE are supplied for affixing to note paper, postcards, or envelopes. Price eightpence per hundred, fivepence for fifty, post free.

100 Sheets, Two Shillings and sixpence.
250 Sheets, Four shillings.
500 Sheets, Five shillings and sixpence.
1,000 Sheets, Eight shillings and sixpence.

All post free.

Members are entitled, if application is made at the time of joining, to a free copy of a sixpenny pamphlet on British Bird Culture, or a similar treatise on Canary and Hybrid Culture.

How to become an Associate.

Many readers of CAGE BIRDS have written to say that they would like to join CAGE BIRDS' LEAGUE, but cannot afford the subscription. To meet their wishes we have decided to form, in connection with the LEAGUE, a body of Associates. All we ask of these Associates is that they will promise to give every possible attention to the wants of their birds. And they must induce others to see that their birds are kept happy and contented.

All that the intending Associate has to do is to sign the coupon herewith, get five of his or her friends to sign each a similar coupon, and send the six, together with a penny stamp, to the Secretary of CAGE BIRDS' LEAGUE, who will forward by return an enamelled Button Badge of the LEAGUE. There will be no other charge. NOW, THEN, BIRD LOVERS!—USE YOUR BEST EFFORTS IN THIS SPLENDID CAUSE.

Twitterings.

Mr. M. Kerr, Sec. Derry C.B.S., writes that Mr. S. Hadwin, of Liverpool, has been appointed judge of Derry Show, November 14.

Our foreign bird expert, Mr. Wesley T. Page, will be glad if Mr. A. Butler, late of 58, Albert Road, Heele, Sheffield, would communicate with him at Glenfield, Graham Avenue, Mitcham, Surrey.

We are asked by Mr. Wright, hon. sec. Anfield, Everton C.B.S., to correct his note of last week, published in this column. The date of the members' show of the society is Nov. 16, not Sept. 16.

Mr. George Brown, Secretary of the Leith O.S., informs us that Mr. J. Steel, of Dalkeith, will give a lecture at the Society's meeting on September 14th; subject, "Natural Food of British Birds" (illustrated).

Messrs. A. and F. Hartley, the writers of the article on "Moulting and Exhibiting British Finches," published in our issue of August 31, write that they have changed their address to 3, St. Nicholas Villas, Hull Road, York.

Sandiford's Colour-feed is used by every leading exhibitor in the world. Mr. Sam Cook (Manchester) and Mr. Aitchison (Edinburgh) both write, and scores more, to say what a lovely colour they are getting. Order at once. See advertisement. (Advt.).

Islington F.A. are holding their young stock show, writes Mr. H. A. Brown, assist. sec., Sept. 7, at the Congregational Schoolroom, Warlters Rd., Holloway, N. Fanciers should pay a visit to this show. Ladies' string band will play during the evening.

Would you publish in your valuable paper, writes J. Davison, Low Fell, that I have given up the secretaryship of the Gateshead C.B.S. through pressure of other business, and do so for the benefit of the Society. All communications should be sent to Mr. J. G. Greason, 24, Newman Terrace, Gateshead.

I am sorry to say, writes Mr. J. Rukin, that I inadvertently gave our old friend Teddy Whipps' name, instead of Mr. Teddy Fittons' name in regard to the latter gentleman's sad bereavement. It was Mr. Fitton, and not Mr. Whipp who suffered such a sad loss. Will you kindly make the correction.

Mr. W. A. Wilson, Hon. Sec. Leeds C.B.S., writes as follows: Will you thank, through the columns of your paper, the many kind friends who sent me letters of sympathy on hearing of my recent accident. Pleased to say I am nearly well again, after my fall of 34 feet, and am preparing for our great event, the annual open show.

At the next meeting of the London Cage Bird Association, Sept. 11, at "The Feathers," Great Chapel St., Westminster, Mr. Mallinson will give an account of his fifty years' experience with the Yorkshire Canary. Mr. Knight, hon. sec. to the Society, wishes us to say that a special invitation is extended to all fanciers to be present on this interesting occasion.

I am sorry to say, writes Mr. A. E. Jeffries, that my partner, Mr. E. Husband, has been obliged to change his employment, and, I am sorry to add, has also left this part of the country—Richmond, Yorks. I shall still keep on the same address. I have only had a fair season with Norwich and Crests, and one or two good ones amongst them, but I shall be exhibiting in future in my own name, only, with both Plainheads and Crests.

We have started a Fur and Feather Fanciers Association at Wadebridge, writes Messrs. E. J. Mitchell and Rd. Lockett, hon. secs., Egloshayle Rd., Wadebridge. We are pleased to say that cage birds are well represented on our committee and our committee are holding a twelve miles radius show for members only on November 13; members fee is 2s. 6d.; we are hoping to have a good show of cage birds and hope that all lovers of cage birds that are in the radius will join our Association. We should be pleased to distribute any copies of Cage Birds at our show.

We are glad to hear from Mr. Rudd, of Norwich, that, as the whole of his aviaries and stock rooms are out of the flooded districts, he has not lost a single bird.

Very pleased to see such an excellent sketch of my Linnet on front page of Cage Birds this week, writes Mr. C. Botting; and thank you for the honour done it. In my new home in Billericay, I hope to have more birds than ever, and I trust to soon start advertising in "C.B." with, I hope, as good a result as I have had through previous advertisements.

The Norwich Floods.

Mr. W. Rudd, the well-known bird specialist of Norwich, writes that should any of his customers wish to help the local fanciers who have suffered in the floods, he will be pleased to acknowledge to them any amount received—no matter how small—and hand over the same to Cage Birds, deducting, of course, nothing for postage or receipts, etc.

Our Front Page.

My Green Border, which stood third in his class at the late Palace Show, I shall be pleased to see adorning the front page, writes Mr. T. Parker, of South Shields. I may say that my ambition was always to win at the Crystal Palace Show, and I intend to try again another year. His wins were first and special at Newcastle (special for best Green Border in section over four strong classes), first at Gateshead, 2nd Jarrow, 3rd Sunderland, 3rd Derby, 3rd Carlisle, etc. He was in the money every time out.

OBITUARY.

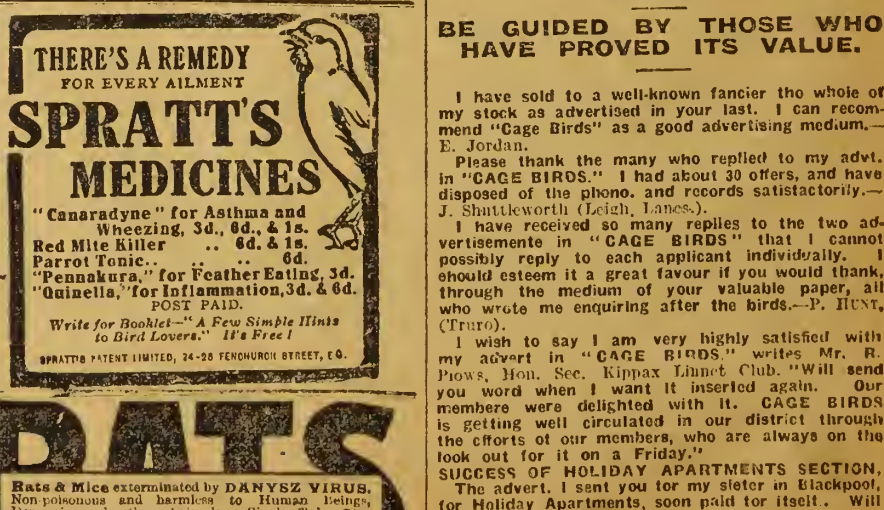
We are sorry indeed to be in receipt of the following sad news, which has come to hand from Mr. T. R. Ind, Bristol:—

It is with profound regret I hear to-day, September 1, of the death of Mr. J. Miles (Miles and Spencer), of Trowbridge, Wilts, the well-known Crest breeder of a few years since, who passed away Friday, 30th. He had been in failing health during the past two years.

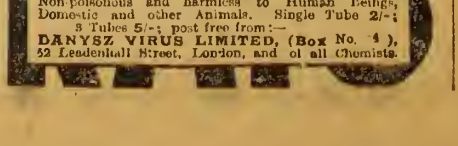
Rare-coloured House Sparrows.

Among the Sparrows which favour the Embankment Gardens in London are now to be seen two young birds, one of which is cinnamon coloured and the other almost white.

Wild Birds Act in Tynemouth.



Under order of the Home Office, the Wild Birds Protection Act is now extended to protect throughout the year in the County Borough of Tynemouth, the Hedge Sparrow, Blackbird, Bullfinch, Goldfinch, Jackdaw, Kingfisher, Larks, Linnet, Greenfinch, Sand Martin, Nighjar, Owls, Redwing, Robin, Starling, Thrushes, Blue Tit, Wrens.

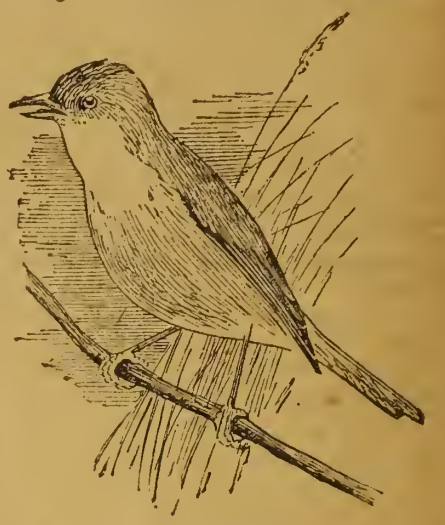


Sparrows Still Busy.

In spite of the unusual weather, the hardy Sparrow is still busy upon domestic affairs. A scantily feathered brood has just been launched in the writer's garden, and the old birds are evidently thinking of having just one more nest. Our little friend may be a useful member of the feathered tribe, but, fortunately for us, the winter's frosts and snow puts a stop to his efforts to perpetuate his race, or we should be compelled, in self-defence, for a time to subsist upon "Sparrow pies."

A Young Greenbird's Adventure.

The noise of a pair of Greenfinches, and their evident excitement, caused a passing pedestrian to seek for the cause of the trouble. The spot was some bushes growing upon the bank of a stream. After a little search, something in the water attracted his attention; it proved to be one of the young brood that had fallen in, and was fluttering for dear life. Its flutterings took it near a heap of stones, when it promptly climbed up and shouted lustily for help. In an hour's time it was sitting upon the branches with its companions, apparently none the worse for its adventure.



Wild-Bird Life.

Absent Warblers.

As the summer passes and is nearing its end, we daily become aware of a difference in the wild birds around us. New Warblers are constantly arriving, passing a day or two in the village gardens, and then moving onwards to make room for fresh arrivals. In a quiet country lane, with tall herbage growing on either side of a narrow path, a pair of Whitethroats were still nesting in the early part of the month. A few days ago the young ones were with them, flitting about the bushes; the old ones following our footsteps down the hedge, hoarsely croaking and "chaking" in protest against our trespass. To-day they are absent, and not a Warbler of any kind is to be seen or heard along the whole length of lane, although it is one that is much frequented by these delightful birds during the summer months.

No doubt to-morrow or the next day a fresh batch will take their place, but at present a host of Linnets and Greenbirds crowd the bushes; joyous, happy, little fellows twittering and calling to each other as they flutter from tree to tree, occasionally making a raid into the weed-grown fields, anon returning to bask in the all too scarce sunshine; the youngest recording their little song, the earlier hatched singing sweetly. Among the Linnets are a few old cock birds with ruddy breasts, quite brilliant in the sunshine, some very ragged and untidy, with patches of new feathers on front and back.

But for these attempts at song from the young birds, the country would be strangely silent, no loud-voiced Thrush greets us from the wood, nor soaring Skylark carols in the sky. The adult birds have no need for song. As summer passes, they daily feel an increased impulse to assemble in their autumn flocks, to range the fields and downs in company, wherever food chances to be plentiful. At present it is abundant everywhere, each single weed growing by the wayside has scattered its thousands of tiny seeds broadcast, and of these the birds take their toll, and feast upon the abundant harvest.

At no time of the year do wild birds feel the need of good living more than now, when change of plumage causes an extra drain upon the system, and Dame Nature bounteously gives of her best.

ALWAYS ADVERTISE IN "CAGE BIRDS."

BE GUIDED BY THOSE WHO HAVE PROVED ITS VALUE.

I have sold to a well-known fancier the whole of my stock as advertised in your last. I can recommend "Cage Birds" as a good advertising medium.—E. Jordan.

Please thank the many who replied to my advt. in "CAGE BIRDS." I had about 30 offers, and have disposed of the phono. and records satisfactorily.—J. Shuttleworth (Leigh, Lancs.).

I have received so many replies to the two advertisements in "CAGE BIRDS" that I cannot possibly reply to each applicant individually. I should esteem it a great favour if you would thank, through the medium of your valuable paper, all who wrote me enquiring after the birds.—P. Hunt, (Truro).

I wish to say I am very highly satisfied with my advert in "CAGE BIRDS," writes Mr. R. Plows, Hon. Sec. Kippax Linnet Club. "Will send you word when I want it inserted again. Our members were delighted with it. CAGE BIRDS is getting well circulated in our district through the efforts of our members, who are always on the look out for it on a Friday."

SUCCESS OF HOLIDAY APARTMENTS SECTION.

The advert. I sent you for my sister in Blackpool, for Holiday Apartments, soon paid for itself. Will you kindly reinsert for six times.—Mrs. Atherton, M.B.R.C.C. (Preston).

Rates for this heading: 18 words 6d., and 1d. per word afterwards; 6 insertions price of 5. 13 price of 10; prepaid. Ed.

DESOLATION IN CANARY CITY:

"CAGE BIRDS" SPECIAL ACCOUNT.

Recent record rainfall (six inches in one day) results in unprecedented floods at Norwich, & awakens sympathetic consternation among bird-keepers the world over

Our representative, we are pleased to say, finds loss of birds over-estimated.

THE message flashed over the wires on Wednesday evening of last week that thousands of Canaries had met their fate in the record flood which was devastating part of the city of Norwich, would awaken a feeling of sympathetic consternation in the heart of every bird-keeper who read the ill-fated lines in the daily newspapers. CAGE BIRDS briefly dealt with the matter in the issue then going to press, and, needless to say, the members of its staff were sad at heart over the grievous misfortune that had befallen their fellow-fanciers in Canary City.

On the following morning (Thursday) the news came through that the Great Eastern Company had managed to re-establish railway communication with the stricken town, and it was at once decided that the writer should make the journey into East Anglia with a view to gathering first-hand information concerning the losses suffered by bird-keepers and breeders and the plight in which they found themselves. The paragraph in last week's CAGE BIRDS expressed the hope that the loss of birds might prove to be over-stated. And this, we will say at once, turned out to be the case. But the sad plight of the birdy men whose homes stood within the flooded area no pen could well exaggerate.

A Scene of Wide-spread Ruin.

The remarkable sights witnessed from the window of the dining car when the train entered the stricken area are never likely to be forgotten by me. At Barton, some considerable distance from our hoped-for destination, the waters had converted the countryside into a series of huge lakes, and as the railway line hereabouts was submerged, our progress necessarily became a crawl, with not infrequent stoppages. The scene of ruin revealed by the cold rays of the moon was at once impressive and saddening. The pitiable condition of the people in the flooded houses and the hardships they were being called upon to bear, were self-evident, while the ruins of bridges whose arches of solid masonry many feet thick had failed to withstand the rush of the torrent testified to the dangerous and destructive nature of this phenomenal visitation. Outbuildings, whether of wood or brick, which stood near the bed of the river had collapsed as though they had been built of cards, while many fine trees were overturned, some literally torn out of the ground and flung into the waste of water.

As we approached Norwich the desolation became even more pronounced. Near Trowse the railway track had been a considerable depth under water, and our progress was slow and punctuated with frequent stops heralded by the explosion of fog signals. But the "permanent" way did not belie its name, and at a late hour we exchanged the scene of rushing ruin for the comparative security of Thorpe Station.

A Helping Hand Cheerfully Given.

The Friday morning saw me in Bull Close Road, at the home of Mr. F. Cullington, one of the oldest, keenest, and best-respected fanciers in the Cathedral City. Though heavily pressed with work—Mr. C. is a master builder and carpenter—due to the flood, he at once consented to become my "guide, philosopher, and friend" for the rest of the day. As Mr. Cullington was kind enough to put it, he felt that the mission of CAGE BIRDS was so good and timely in its promise of help—should help prove to be needed—that he must let other considerations stand aside—to be of assistance to brother-fanciers in distress was a motive he could not resist. I return my hearty thanks to Mr. Cullington. I could not have been in better hands. There can be few bird-breeders in Norwich to whom he is not known and with whom he is not on "hail, fellow, well met" terms. And as his list of acquaintances is so considerable, and the flooded area was so extensive, the length of the tramp we took together can perhaps be imagined. Yet Mr. Cullington, though no longer in the "first bloom of youth," bore it remarkably well, and after the cup of tea we took at parting, left with the intention of "doing a little work"! He is a fancier of whom any city may be proud.

Before starting, I took a two-minute glance at the stock in Mr. Cullington's excellent bird-room. He has had a fair breeding season, and many very good all-round Plainheads were to be seen in his moulting flights. In two or three cages I noticed that it was not to pepper alone that the colour food owed its hue. And Mr. C. admitted that he was experimenting with "something" which he thought would prove a useful addition to the pepper; but it was too early to judge of its effect.

The house of my guide is quite close to the scene of the floods, and a large number of the homeless people (mainly children) were being accommodated in the public schools on the opposite side of the road. Mr. Cullington and I were permitted to enter, and the sufferers therein made one of the saddest sights it has ever been my lot to witness, though the poor people bore their distress bravely enough, considering practically all their worldly goods had been destroyed. There were many willing helpers present, of course, and food and clothing were being sent from many quarters. I may mention that Mr. Cullington's daughter collected over £5 in a few hours outside the schools for the benefit of the relief fund.

On our way towards the Heigham, St. Martin's, and adjoining districts, where the floods were at their worst, Mr. Cullington said that although there had been no time since the subsidence of the water to make enquiries, he did not expect to find any great loss due directly to it, as he had only been told of one instance of the drowning of birds; the story of the "thousands of Canaries" he thought was so much nonsense. The great majority of the working-class bird breeders of Norwich keep their Canaries in the bedrooms, or upper part of the house; and there floods cannot very well penetrate. In the olden days a good deal of work was done in small workshops at the rear of the dwelling-houses, and in these the workers generally kept their birds; but at the present day practically all are indoor workers at the huge factories which have sprung up.

After Effects to be Feared.

Well, we made some scores of enquiries during the day of fanciers whose homes we visited, or whom we met in the streets, and we failed to locate a second case of drowned Canaries or other small birds. We saw many heart-rending sights, however, and the awful state of some of the homes belonging to bird-keepers would surely have sufficed to draw pity from even a heart of stone. Just before we descended to the low-lying streets in the region of the river we passed the house of Mr. Campling, who will be remembered as the breeder of the Canary presented to Queen Mary. There was no trace of disaster here, but near by two houses were being shored up with timber baulks, great, slowly-widening cracks having made an appearance in the outer walls, owing to the foundations being undermined. It is common knowledge now that a number of houses have collapsed, and that many more are in a dangerous condition.

An Aged Breeder's Hard Luck.

Eventually we came to the little cottage in Key and Castle Yard, tenanted by Mr. R. Wigger. "Bob" is a fine specimen of the best type of workman, and though now old in years, still plies his tools in the making of boots. He is also a respected bird-breeder, and has achieved considerable success with both Crests and Plainheads—for instance, a yellow Crest-bred produced in his room scored at the Palace Show of some three years ago for its purchaser. Mr. Wigger was in a sorry plight. His cottage, standing within a few yards of the river's brink, had contained over five feet of water! Its condition was terrible, and typical of many thousands more; mud and slime covered the floor and walls, the paper hanging in tatters on the latter. couch, chairs, table, etc., were sodden with water and strewed topsy-turvy all over the place, rust and mould were appearing everywhere, and the musty smell was simply sickening. Mr. Wigger had suffered in the great flood of 1878 (he showed me marks left by the latter on his pictures) but this latest experience capped all.

The water rose so suddenly, and with such astonishing rapidity, that little could be done to save furniture. and the like. Mr. Wigger was afraid for his birds in the upper room. He broke open an untenanted cottage standing on somewhat higher ground further up the yard, and carried all his birds and cages into this, having to wade waist high through the flood while doing it, a trying ordeal for a man of his years. A parcel of rape-seed left behind showed signs of beginning to sprout; his colour-food had disappeared entirely, together with many other small articles, washed. goodness only knows where. His Canaries were showing signs of the rough time they had experienced. Their new lodging was damp and musty; even the roof was soaking wet in places, the record rainfall having proved too much for it. Several promising young birds, I am afraid, Mr. W. could not possibly save, and some of the old ones looked sick and sorry. Damp and cold are bad companions for moulting birds.

A number of young lay dead in the nests with food in their crops, the parents having deserted them, and "Bob" was resigning himself to the inevitable loss of others. I may say here that I found late breeding favoured by many of the fanciers in Norwich. In some rooms hens were still incubating eggs, and many were feeding nestlings but a few days old! Mr. Wigger was sorely stricken, but struggled manfully to hide his distress. As he contemplated his ruined home, he said, with a pathetic catch in his voice: "I'm done; I don't know how to begin again." I hope assistance may be extended him.

Some Good Crests Meet their Fate.

A short walk brought us to Napier Street, where we visited Mr. J. Ashworth, a baker by trade, and an enthusiastic breeder of Crests. This fancier had been very hard hit by the floods. Not only had his trade suffered, his utensils and machinery damaged, and furniture ruined, but fifteen or sixteen of his best birds had been drowned. Here again, it was a case of being taken by surprise. None thought it possible such a disaster could visit the city. When the waters rose so rapidly, Mr. Ashworth had so many things needing attention (a batch of 400 loaves, amongst other things, were in the bakery) that the birds were overlooked for the moment. The latter are kept in a nice place built just outside the house door. A glance at the photograph I had specially taken will show the height to which the water rose and flooded the cages. When the top cages were being removed (they were replaced for purposes of the photo) it had become necessary to swim into the room!

The survivors (probably 40) I inspected in the loft looked very fit, and were a real nice lot, with some promising Crests amongst them, which Mr. Ashworth is hoping may do well at the All England Show. I trust his hopes may be realised, as some slight compensation for his present troubles. Some of the hens were feeding young, despite their rough experience of some few hours before, in one nest a bonny dark Goldfinch-Mule catching my eye. In this loft, dog, cat, rabbits, birds and a number of fowls had found sanctuary! Many of the neighbours had been compelled to take their poultry, rabbits, etc., temporarily into their bedrooms.

In this quarter we located a number of fanciers, and the majority expressed their fear as to the effect the damp would have upon their pets. Mr. Cullington and I then visited Mr. Freestone, and found that the popular chairman of the Norwich Alliance C.B.S. had also been a heavy sufferer, not by reason of loss of birds, but both his business premises and his house had been invaded by the flood, while a place he has in the country had been severely damaged by the violent storms. Yet, despite his troubles, Mr. Freestone consented at once to act (in conjunction with Mr. R. Roll, the secretary of the society, and Mr. Cullington) in the distribution of any funds readers of CAGE BIRDS might in the goodness of their hearts feel disposed to subscribe to help the working-men fanciers to replace birds lost owing to the flood, and to restore damaged cages and bird-rooms.

To Help the Sufferers.

Of course, it was quite impossible to visit every street in the flooded area, or to get into touch with other than a minority of the bird-breeders therein, and Messrs. Freestone and Cullington agreed that it would be a week or so before the real extent of the loss would be known, though we had proved that the terrible slaughter of Canaries and the floating about of their dead bodies in the streets, existed only in the imagination of the newspapermen responsible for sending these details of the sad story of calamity to the outside world. The trio of gentlemen named above undertook that enquiries should be made into any cases of loss reported, and that only bona-fide claims should have consideration. In the course of a few days we shall hear further from them, and shall publish their report in our next issue. In the meantime, we shall be pleased to receive any sums—however small—readers care to send us to establish a fund out of which those brother fanciers of Norwich who need monetary help to replace their birds, and assist them to the position in the hobby they occupied before the devastating flood brought disaster to their stock. Should there be any surplus it will be forwarded to the General Relief Fund. All amounts will be acknowledged in our columns, and, of course, no expenses of any kind will be deducted.

In conclusion, I may say that Mr. Roll asked me to mention that a statement he made to a press correspondent, as to the wide-spread and ruinous disaster in which the local Canary industry had been involved, was based upon what he had read in the daily press, and before he had had an opportunity of making personal inquiries; further, that CAGE BIRDS LEAGUE, while labouring under the same mis-impression, issued a letter to the London Press, which doubtless many of our readers will have perused.

Questions and Answers.

DOUBTS AND DIFFICULTIES SOLVED BY SPECIALISTS

Queries will be answered under the following conditions:—

(1)—All questions must be clearly written in ink (or typewritten) on one side of paper, and must conclude with either the correct name of querist or a pseudonym, or initials.

(2)—The proper name and address in full of querist must always be written on a separate sheet of paper, and enclosed with the query. In no case must the address appear on the query.

(3)—Queries intended for different specialists must not be written on the same sheet of paper.

(4)—Queries must not include or be included in orders for books, instructions re advertisements, or any other matter for publication.

(5)—The department to which the queries refer must be stated in bold letters on the left-hand corner of the query.

(6)—If an answer in the same week's issue is desired, queries must be posted to reach us by Monday's first post at latest. Queries will be dealt with in the order in which they are received, and only as space permits. The earlier queries are received the better attention they are likely to have.

(7)—Queries relating to illnesses of birds, except enquiries as to cause of death (for which see Post Mortems will be answered by return of post on receipt of a postal order for sixpence and an addressed stamped envelope. Queries of an ordinary nature will be answered by post, if desired, on receipt of a postal order for one shilling and a stamped addressed envelope.

(8)—All who require letters of complaints written to advertisers must state grounds for doing so clearly and fully, and enclose a fee of sixpence,, otherwise their letters will not receive attention. All the fees received from this source will be handed over in full to the "Referee's" Poor Childrens' Fund (London).

(9)—All queries must be oddressed to the Editor, "Cage Birds," 154, Fleet Street, London, E.C. Only queries so sent will be answered. Postcards ore not admissible.

THE following gentlemen represent CAGE BIRDS staff of ADVISORY EXPERTS. Queries must in no case be addressed to any of them individually, but to the Editor.

NOTE.—If an answer is required concerning the proper mating, etc., of Norwich, Yorkshires, Crests, Cinnamons, Greens, Borders, Lizards, Scotch or any other variety of the Canary family, we shall, should the querist desire us to do so, be pleased to submit his questions for answer to some leading specialist of the day on the variety concerned.

CANARY QUERIES.

Answered by CLAUDE ST. JOHN.

CANARY SEED (R. Hyde).—All the samples sent are of good quality, though No. 3 is rather thinner and does not seem so well ripened or harvested as Nos. 1 and 2. Still, the quality is good. No. 1 is the best of the three, and is a very excellent seed all round. I cannot fix a definite price for it, as this varies according to locality, but I should expect it to cost about 2s. 9d. or 3s. per peck. If you can obtain this seed at about the price named and are in any sense a large consumer, let me advise you to get in a twelvemonth supply as soon as convenient—that is, of course, if you can store it properly.

CAGED OR FREE (Gresham).—(1) Yes. Canaries will, as a rule, breed just as freely flying at liberty in a room as when caged separately in pairs. The greatest trouble to be anticipated usually is that the birds sometimes interfere with each other's domestic arrangements, when they sometimes make a hash of the business. To avoid this as far as possible, one only needs be careful to introduce good, healthy, hardy stock, which are most likely to come in good breeding condition normally, and so set to work in an energetic way and "mind their their own business"; not to put in too many cocks; and to remove any hen during the breeding season which goes about meddling with the arrangements of the other hens, instead of settling down on her own account. (2) It is neither necessary nor advisable to have an equal number of sexes. For 30 hens, 9 or 10 cocks, would be quite sufficient. (3) Yes, the cocks would mate with any of the hens that were in high breeding condition.

LUMP ON WING (A. B. C.).—The substance, as shown by your rough sketch, appears to be progressing quite satisfactorily. It is quite possible the lump may "dry up" at the base and drop off very soon. The soreness which appeared was probably due to the bird picking it. If any soreness now remains, anoint it sparingly with LanocyHin every second day for a week. If the lump drops off, anoint spot once or twice with Lanocyllin until it appears quite well. If it has not disappeared in a week after the conclusion of the fortnight's course of treatment, advised in last reply, repeat the treatment over again for another week or fortnight, as may seem necessary, but paint with the iodine every fourth day only. If any soreness appears, anoint with above-named oiutment.

RESULT OF SHOCK (New Reader).—At twelve years old the bird would probably in the natural order of things begin to drop off singing somewhat, and it is doubtful if it will in future resume singing after each moult until the mild warm days of spring. In like manner the cessation of song from the shock of falling with its cage would last much longer than it would with a young bird. If he is quite healthy and active, there is no reason why he should not sing again, though I should scarcely expect him to resume before next February or March. The best thing you could do to bring him out would be to place a lusty singing young cock in his hearing for a week or two when he is quite over moulting. This might induce him to open out earlier, but is not certain to do so.

BREAST BARE (A. J. G.).—Strictly speaking, every Canary's breast is bare of feathers. The plumage grows only in certain well-defined tracts, of which one runs down each side of breast, but not upon the breast. In the case of a very short feathered bird—generally a yellow—growing very plump and stout it is quite possible for the bare skin of the centre of breast to show through the plumage, and gave the bird the appearance of being bare on breast, though it may not have lost a single feather. Is this likely to be the case with your bird? If not, see that cage is kept quite free from red mites, and when the moult begins, if not already in progress, keep the bird ou the warm side, allow it to bathe freely, feed rather generously, and in addition to the seed mixture advised in article on August 3rd, give a morsel of bread and milk slightly dusted with flowers of sulphur and then sprinkled with soft sugar three times a week for a month.

ATTACKS OF LISTLESSNESS (Anxious, Walthamstow).—Catch the bird and examine its eyes in a good light. If there appears a kind of milky-whiteness in the centre—the pupils—the bird is blind with cataract. If there is no milky appearance, still test its sight by putting your finger-tip towards it, on both sides alternately. I rather suspect you will find the cause of its listlessness through this suggestion, and if my surmise is correct, you can do nothing for it. If the sight is normal, see if its claws are seriously overgrown and hamper its movements, and cut them back with a sharp pair of nail scissors if they are. Hold claws up to good light, and cut a little short of the pink streak you will see running some way down centre of claw, which is the blood vessel. If this surmise is wrong, give bird a morsel of bread and milk with two drops of cod liver oil emulsion on it, and sprinkled with soft sugar every second day for a fortnight. In the drinking water add six drops of syrup of buckthorn, and as much Epsom salts as will cover a threepenny piece for two days, and afterwards give four drops each of tincture of gentian, tincture of calumba and aromatic sulphuric acid in the water every second day for a week.

NOT SINGING (G.N.).—I am not quite clear whether you mean the birds have just moulted or some time ago. If only quite recently, it is early yet to expect them to sing. Try the following treatment for a month. Staple diet, a mixture of three parts canary, to one part summer rape. Every second day give half-a-teaspoonful of crushed sponge cake with four drops of sherry and two of cod liver oil emulsion mixed in it, and sprinkled with a mixture of equal parts maw and gold of pleasure. On the alternate days give same quantity of a mixture of equal parts hemp, inga, millet and teazle. Give a spray of green food four times a week. In the water give six drops of syrup of rhubarb and as much Epsom salts as will cover a sixpence for two days, and afterwards 20 drops of whisky, and ten each of glycerine and lemon juice two days in every three for a week, and every second day in the next week. Keep cocks caged separately, and see that all the birds are in a bright healthy place free from cold draughts and heated impure air.

A STARTER (C. F. Empleton).—(1) If you have had little or no practical experience in breeding Canaries, you could not do better than start with, say, two or three pairs of Plainhead Norwich, or Border Fancies. These are very hardy, free breeders, and among the very easiest to manage. Yorkshires also stand very high up in this respect. You would do well to read and digest "Canary Breeding for Beginners" before next season. (2) Mule query should have been on a separate sheet. You had better write another query for Mr. Weston, and be more explicit. As it stands, the query is very vague. It depends upon what you mean by the "most useful Mules." Say whether you mean the best for showing, the best singers, the most valuable, the rarest, or what. (3) Twenty inches long, 11 inches deep (back to front), and 15 or 16 inches high is a very nice size for a single breeding cage. I recommend you not to build nesting compartments into the cages, either for inside or outside nests. Use the modern nest-pans or boxes hung with a bracket on back of cage. In making your own cages, you would find the manual, "Aviaries, Cages and Birdroom Management," most helpful. Our Manager would send it you post free for 8s. 2d. (4) Personally I have always found the person you name fair in dealing.

BRITISH BIRDS AND HYBRIDS.

Answered, this week, by H. J. FULLJAMES.

SKYLARK PERCHING (T. Finlay).—A Skylark is not a perching bird. It will rest at times on the rail or post of a fence, or on a thick bough, but its toes are so constructed that it certainly could not grasp a wire.

SING'NG SKYLARKS (W. W. Mann).—It is against our rules to recommend individual advertisers. You will find Skylarks advertised in our columns by several dealers, and if you get a bird on approval on the deposit system from any of these you should easily get suited.

CAGE FOR BLACKCAP (Cageite).—A cage for the proper keeping of a Blackcap should be of the "box" pattern, 24 x 12 x 12 inches. It should be fitted with three moderately thick perches of soft wood; the food and water vessels should be of glass, fitting into wire loops on hinged doors made in the bottom rail. An illustration of such a cage is given in Nutshell No. 25, "The Smaller Insectivorous Birds," 2½d. post free, from our Manager.

AVIARY-REARED BULLFINCHES (T. Woodward).—I confess I am unable to understand your losing your young Bullfinches after successfully rearing them up to eight weeks old. At that age they should have been independent of their parents, and your feeding seems to be quite all right. Perhaps they would not take to the hard seeds after their parents left off feeding them. Besides giving their young insects, Bullfinches feed from the crop with semi-digested food, and the change may have been too much for the young birds. For the nest you now have, at a week old, provide the parents with any non-poisonous berries they will take, a spray of blight infested rose-bush, or insect life in any available form will be useful. At this season you may get freshly ripened sunflower seed, and many wild seeds that are not yet hard and dry. When the young can feed themselves, feed them for a time on seed that has been soaked overnight and rubbed dry, cracked hemp and broken up sunflower seed, etc., and you should have better fortune than with the first lot.

SONG OF THE GOLDFINCH (E. Preston).—Individual birds differ in singing merit, and some foreign Goldfinches are better than some English ones, and some not nearly so good. Speaking generally, I like our own songster; he always seems merrier than his Continental relation. Foreign Goldfinches, when first imported, may have become used to a large proportion of hemp seed, and it is well not to reduce this too suddenly. Get them gradually on to a menu as recommended to "Anxious" in another reply, and follow the treatment outlined in the Nutshell on the Goldfinch, 2½d., post free, from our Manager.

THRUSH WITH DEPRAVED HABITS (Thrush).—I am afraid this is a very bad case, entirely brought on by improper feeding. Surely, if you read CAGE BIRDS, you will long ago have learnt that "Indian meal boiled in buttermilk" is not fit food for a Song Thrush. It might do for ducks which were being fattened for killing. The insufficient feeding is responsible for the sore toe. Any affection of the feet is an indication of digestive troubles. Please send at once for the Nutshell No. 26, on "The Larger Insectivorous Birds," 2½d. post free, from our Manager. The subject is much too large a one to be properly treated in a short reply, and you will find much valuable information in the booklet mentioned. In the meantime, put as much sulphate of soda in the drinking water as will lie on a sixpence, and give your bird some live food at once. Snails, smooth caterpillars, small garden worms, spiders, anything you can get hold of. Repeat the sulphate of soda after a couple of days' interval, giving, of course plain water on the intervening days. A similar dose about once a week will be useful in restoring the action of the digestive organs which has been entirely upset by your feeding. Bathe the foot in comfortably warm water. Its plumage should soon become all right with proper feeding and cleanliness.

BRITISH BIRD & HYBRID QUERISTS

should consult Boulton's great work, "Cage-Bird Hybrids" (7/6); Norman's "British Bird Manual" (2/3); or Part 1 "Hardbills" (1/1), Part 2 "Softbills" (1/1); "Aviaries, Bird-rooms, and Cages" (2/3); "Seeds, Foods, and Wild Plants" (1/2); "Secrets of Hybrid Breeding" (1/2); Dr. Creswell's "Hygiene of Bird-keeping" (1/1); Dr Clarke's "Septic or Bird Fever" (7d.); "Colour-feeding" (3½d.); or the "Nutshell" booklets (2½d. each): No. 1 "Goldfinch," No. 2 "Linnet," No. 3 "Skylark," No. 4 "Song Thrush and Blackbird," No. 11 "Bullfinch," No. 13 "Chaffinch," No. 15 "Greenfinch," No. 22 "Siskin, Redpoll, and Twite," No. 25 "Small Insectivorous Birds," No. 26 "Large Insectivorous Birds," No. 6 "Ailing Birds and How to Cure Them," No. 9 "Disinfection of Cages, Birdrooms, etc.," No. 12 "How to Moult British Birds." All thoroughly practical and instructive. Prices quoted ore post free from "Cage Birds," 154, Fleet Street, London, E.C.

SAND FOR AVIARY (Beginner).—Sea or river sand is the best, but in either instance some kind of bird grit, specially prepared for birds according to the size kept; this applies both to Finches and Parrakeets. A local builder would supply you with river sand, and any of our advertisers would supply you with Finch or Parrakeet grit.

RED MILLET (J. J. H.).—Almost any of the foreign Finches will eat this to a greater or lesser degree, but the shell is tough, and it is not so good for the smaller species as either white or Indian. If you keep a mixed series, why not supply a mixture of white, Indian, brown, and red, in equal parts—then you will soon ascertain the birds' tastes, and can leave out or decrease the proportion of the less favoured kinds.

WHAT PARROT (E. J. T.).—It is a Jendaya Conure; the colour of this species varies considerably with age, and a young bird often takes three years or more to reach full brilliance in this country. Their value is not large, and they are often to be obtained at as low as 10s. 6d. each, though recently there have not been many on sale, but a well feathered talking specimen should be worth 30s. to 40s. Your diet is about right, but I should keep a tin of canary and white millet seed, in equal parts, in the cage as well as the Parrot mixture. It is a well-known species, and has been known as a cage bird for many years.

A FEATHER PULLER (G.E.B.).—You must give me such details as how long you've had it, how you feed and treat it generally, also the bird's general demeanour. In the meantime, spray twice weekly with quassia solution; keep out of draught till dry. Every fourth day put one teaspoonful of Dinneford's magnesia into the regular supply of drinking water. Do not give any tea, coffee, or milk sops, table scraps, or any kind of animal food whatever. Fruit liberally, and green-food, should be regularly supplied. On receipt of information asked for, will try and give a more definite reply.

FOREIGN BIRDS.

A FEATHER PULLER (G.E.B.).—You must give me such details as how long you've had it, how you feed and treat it generally, also the bird's general demeanour. In the meantime, spray twice weekly with quassia solution; keep out of draught till dry. Every fourth day put one teaspoonful of Dinneford's magnesia into the regular supply of drinking water. Do not give any tea, coffee, or milk sops, table scraps, or any kind of animal food whatever. Fruit liberally, and green-food, should be regularly supplied. On receipt of information asked for, will try and give a more definite reply.

Bird Dealers and Seed Merchants wanted as Agents. Write for special trade terms to CAGE BIRDS, 154, Fleet Street, London, E.C.

COCKATEEL (V. C.). The best remedy would be turning the bird into an outdoor aviary; failing this let her have a fly round the room as often as convenience permits. Give her as much green food as she will eat, spray her twice weekly with quassia solution, and give her two drops of Dinneford's magnesia, or, a piece of crust or sponge cake, or direct to the beak from a quill, every other day, so long as the voidings are not watery loose. Giving them a cage large enough to contain a nesting receptacle—large coco-nut husk or concave bottomed box—will probably help to mitigate the trouble. Examine the bird and cage and if there are any parasites on either they must be got rid of by scalding and sterilising the cage, and treating the bird with insect powder. Cause: Ennui, or heated condition of blood, or parasites.

BICHENO FINCHES, ETC. (Joe Wells).—Yes, but if the winter should prove exceptionally severe, the Bichenos would be better brought into one of your living rooms during the worst months, even if this necessitated a smaller cage; the birds to be returned to the larger one in the spring for breeding purposes. I consider all you name would be probable breeders in such cages, that is, one such cage for each pair. Ruficauda: Pale olive green, with red tails, and red at the base of the beak extending over crown and round the eye in the male; face, throat and chest much spotted with white. Pectoral: Blacks, browns and greys above with the sides of face washed with chestnut, and the union of the dark upper parts and white areas of the under blended together, with warm browns and chestnut, very chastely blended; a mottled pectoral band of black and white crosses the breast. Long-tails: Golden-brown or fawn above, with black flights and tail; head silver-grey; large bib black; rump, white, under surface lighter than the upper surface.

WHAT PARRAKEET? ETC. (T. E. Evans).—(1) I suspect the birds to be young ones, and though there are several discrepancies in your description, I think your birds are Yellow-rumped Parrakeets, but I am keeping your description by me, and will confirm it, or otherwise, in a near issue. (2) You cannot do better than continue your present treatment. (3) Good, I think they would agree with Budgies, Cockatiels, and Lovebird, but doubt them agreeing with other Platycerci, such as Rosellas, etc. (4) Yes. (5) 8 x 4ft. by from 5 to 6ft. high, wire netting at front only and a wood and glass shutter to close up at nights, though during the summer months this would not be necessary. If shutter were made in two parts, one could be always shut during the winter, even in the daytime, and the other closed at night only. There should be two nest receptacles for each pair of birds.

AFRICAN GREY PARROT (P. Hardman).—Diet: I should put the bird back to the mixtures advised in this column, or better, the following: One quart each canary and white millet seed, one pint oats, half pint each hemp, dari, paddy rice, and sunflower seeds, and one gill of grit (not sand), the whole to be well mixed. It can have a liberal supply daily of ripe apple or other fruit; also shelled nuts (Spanish, monkey, or walnuts). Keep a piece of clean cuttlebone continually in the cage; the crust and dry biscuit are quite in order as she takes them. The trouble is partially the moult, and I also think there are skin parasites. Have your cage scalded out with boiling water, also perches and food hoppers, seeing that every crevice is well searched. Also spray the bird twice a week with quassia solution, using a "mist" sprayer, and in between blow insect powder into the plumage, especially under the wings and those areas which appear to cause the bird most irritation. Continue the magnesia and chemical food as at present, but if the voidings become watery you must give the magnesia less frequently. A little open-air treatment will be good for it when weather permits, but it must not be stood in an exposed position, or where a current of air blows through the cage, or stood out while cold winds prevail. Report progress a month hence.

AMAZON PARROT (P.Z.).—I am pleased to note such good progress in what appeared an almost hopeless case; you had better continue the treatment, except that the fomenting and painting of the legs may be discontinued, but at the slightest sign of leg weakness resume the treatment and continue as long as may be necessary. Keep the bowels moving freely by giving as often as required two drops of Dinneford's magnesia direct to the beak. For seven days put three drops of Friar's Balsam in a table spoonful of chilled water, and give this fresh twice daily, in lieu of the ordinary drinking water. Diet as previously advised, but a little lettuce, chickweed, groundsel, or other greenfood will be helpful, but it should be washed and shaken fairly dry before being supplied to the bird. The bird should be kept in a warm well ventilated room, out of reach of all draught, but not away from light and air. You had better report progress a week hence, and please give full details, as I do not keep queries by me.

YOUNG GREY PARROT ("Proud 'Un").—As a rule the legs are a good feature to judge by; they become more scaly and horny as the bird increases in age; if the legs are clean, not hard, rough, or scaly, it is a young bird. From your description of the iris (white), it is a young bird, and should certainly talk, but you must get it tame and thoroughly accustomed to yourselves and its new quarters. When this has been accomplished there should soon be some response to your training. The Nutshell will give you full details as to how to train and feed.

LAVENDER FINCHES (Tomaso).—You are treating the Lavender Finches correctly; give them a handful of garden weeds, including flowering (seeding) grass, picked about noon, when fine, or during a dry spell (while weather conditions remain as they are). A twig from rose or fruit trees usually has a little insect life about even during present weather conditions. Any of the seed merchants advertising under "Foods" would send you Indian millet. You might get a packet of wild Finch mixture and give them a little to pick over; seed heads of mignonette, marigold (Calendula), cornflower, may all be given and will make an agreeable change and be exercise for them to pick over. Millet sprays are good for them, as some little work is entailed in picking out the seed. Get small quantities of cabbage, cress, cornflower, charlock, lettuce, dandelion, and mustard seeds, giving a pinch of this two or three times a week as a tit-bit.

GENERAL.

Answered by THE EDITOR.

Forfar Show (D. Kerr).—We are sorry for the omission, which you will see has been rectified this week.

Getting Rid of Cats (Little Jim).—We could not publish the details of the method you suggest. You must not kill your neighbour's cat. You may scare her from your premises, or bring an action against the owner if you can prove a previous offence, but you are not justified in taking the cat's life.

Tools for Cage-making (R. G.).—No one, so far as we know, makes a speciality of "cage-making tools." The tools necessary for cage-making are just the ordinary tools used by a carpenter, plus a pair each of cutting pliers, wire nippers and round-nosed pliers, and soldering iron. With these latter, and a jack plane, smoothing plane, square, cutting gauge, two-foot rule, glue-pot and brush, bradawls of various sizes, small hammer, and a tenon saw, you would be fully equipped for the task of cage-making. For materials, you will require ¼ and ⅜ wood, brads of different lengths, or, preferably, "panel pins," wire of different gauges, say 12, 14, and 16, and some lengths of punched bar.

An Aquarium Query (Constant Reader).—A tank of the size you mention, 32x17x16 ins., would contain approximately thirty-one gallons of water, and would accommodate about two dozen ordinary sized Goldfish. The three roots of Vallisneria would certainly not be too much at the beginning, but the plants grow rapidly, and would soon overcrowd the space unless some herbivorous snails and beetles were kept. Four water snails would scarcely keep clean the sides of so large a tank, especially as it is placed near a window, where the growth of confervæ would be rapid. The water will not require renewal so long as you keep the balance even between the fish, the weeds and the snails. Fishes consume oxygen and give off carbonic acid. Plants decompose the carbonic acid and give off oxygen. Snails eat the confervæ and keep the glass clean, and at the same time lay eggs which the fish eat. It is just a matter for your own observation to discover whether you are keeping the balance correctly. At the commencement you might with advantage introduce the two water lilies; it is an easy matter to remove the vegetation if it gets too rank. Too much is better than too little, for a supply of oxygen must be kept up for the use of the fish. In reply to your last question, any cement which will not become brittle when set. Prout's elastic glue, or marine glue, would answer the purpose of cementing the slate. Ordinary red lead may also be used, but this takes some weeks to harden, and should be painted over with shellac varnish. You should get Nutshell No. 21 "The Aquarium and its Management," 2½d. post free, from our manager.

POST MORTEMS.

Mr. G. Yates, M.R.C.V.S., 1, College Road, Harrow, Middlesex, will examine and report upon dead cage birds for a fee of 1s. 6d. each bird; for reply direct, 2s. 6d.; analysis, 21s. Subjects for post mortem examination must be sent packed in a box direct to Mr. Yates, with the fee, this and any accompanying letter being kept from contact with the dead bird. Send by letter-post; it is cheaper and quicker than parcel post. Any bodies sent to the office of this paper will be thrown away, and if a fee is enclosed the loss will be the sender's.

G. Fraser.—Tuberculosis affecting the liver. It is an incurable disease. The disease had been existing some time, although illness was apparent only in the later stages. Your treatment was very good, and likely to alleviate in the early stages, but would be useless in such an advanced case as yours.

J.W., Aberdare.—Your bird died as the result of a fit. The injuries you noticed were probably incurred during the fit.

Laitance.—Pneumo-enteritis, or a complication of pneumonia and inflammation of the bowels of a very acute character, brought about by poisons or ptomaines.

YORKSHIRE CANARIES, 1/1½.—By H. W. Battye (Past President of the Yorkshire Union). Absolutely the very best Handbook dealing with the Yorkshire and its sub-varieties. Contains complete instructions upon Pairing, Breeding, Moulting, and successful Exhibiting, also how to treat in both health and disease.

NORWICH CANARIES, 1/1.—By C. A. House. Tells the fancier all that he needs to know to enable him to become successful as a breeder and exhibitor of the Norwich Plainhead. The chapters on "Forming a Stud," and "How to Produce the Ideal" are worth the cost of the whole book many times over.

THE SECRETS OF HYBRID BREEDING REVEALED AND EXPLAINED.—By many notable Mule and Hybrid Breeders. Among the contributors are such well-known breeders as Messrs. R. Colton, W. H. Vale, C. Houlton, C. J. Ward, J. Beswick, G. Lander, T. H. Kinch, T. Smith, etc. This Handbook, which contains 212 pages, 7 inches by 5, is brimful of the most practical information on the highly interesting subject of Hybrid Breeding. Price 1/-, post free 1/2.

PARROTS FOR PLEASURE AND PROFIT, 7d.—By C. P. Arthur. A practical handbook, dealing with the keeping, feeding, and general treatment of the Grey, the Amazon, etc. It explains how to sex these birds, the treatment of newly imported specimens, and cures for their various ills.

SEEDS, FOODS, AND WILD PLANTS FOR CAGE BIRDS, 1/2. — By various leading authors. Full information on the seeds suitable for all cage birds, their food values, uses, etc., with descriptions and illustrations of the wild plants indispensable to the successful keeping of British and other birds.

HOUSE'S CANARY MANUAL, 1/2.—By C. A. House. A thorough, practical guide to the general management and breeding of Canaries, dealing fully with the breeding, etc., of every member of the Canary family, including the Roller (or Singing) Canary. An illustration of each bird, by the master Canary artist, Mr. H. Norman; exhaustive chapters on aviaries and cages, breeding procedure, moulting, exhibiting, diseases, and seeds—a compendium of knowledge.

BUDGERIGARS AND COCKATEELS, 6d.—By C. P. Arthur. The breeding of Budgerigars and Cockateels is recognised as one of the most profitable and pleasure-giving sides of foreign bird-keeping. This eminent authority gives very full details upon how to keep, feed, breed, tame, and teach them to talk.

FOREIGN BIRDS FOR BEGINNERS, 1/1½.—By W. T. Page, F.Z.S., etc., Foreign Bird Expert to "Cage Birds." A highly instructive Manual. It contains a magnificent coloured plate and a number of black and white illustrations. Indispensable to all keepers of Foreign Birds. Replete with useful hints.

BRITISH BIRD MANUAL, 2/3 (cloth bound).—By H. Norman; or may be had in two parts, Part 1: "Hardhills," and Part 2: "Softbills." Either Part, price 1/1, post free. Each part contains a beautiful and life-like coloured plate and numerous illustrations of birds and cages. Up-to-date information on the keeping of British Birds; full of extremely valuable hints.

THE STOCK BOOK, 7d.—By G. E. Weston. Of our invaluable "Breeding Room Register" a well-known fancier has said:—"It makes bird-breeding easy" No breeder of birds can possibly afford to be without it. It simplifies the operations in the bird-room and makes it possible for everyone, even the veriest novice, to breed his birds as they should be bred. Contains both Pedigree, Breeding, Young Bird, and Show Registers of simple and unique character, in addition to useful account pages, and many invaluable "Hints for Emergencies."

BIRDS OF THE COUNTRYSIDE, 5/4.—By Frank Finn, B.A., F.Z.S. A handbook to the wild life of all our familiar British birds; their appearance and habits accurately described. With 12 beautiful coloured plates, and 118 photographic illustrations. A charming gift book.

PETS, AND HOW TO KEEP THEM, 5/4.—By Frank Finn, B.A., F.Z.S. Gives the correct method of housing, feeding, and managing every kind of pet; all sorts of animals are dealt with—monkeys, dogs, cats, lizards, tortoises, also gold and other fancy fish, while there is a large section devoted to birds. Contains many coloured plates and photographs. Another charming gift book.

FANCIERS' PRINTING.—Fanciers requiring business notepaper, postcards, trade envelopes, etc., should write us for a quotation. We are now in a position to supply these at specially low rates combined with first-class work. Artistic memos., with block of any desired bird, and fancier's name, address, and 12 words of description, 250 2/ 500 2/6, carriage paid.

CAGE-BIRD HYBRIDS.—Published in 8 Monthly Parts at 6d. each, post free 7d. Complete bound in cloth, 7/6 carriage paid. This great work is written by Charles Houlton, an authority with a reputation extending over 25 years as a leading exhibitor and a leading expert and judge; (associate editors, G. E. Weston and C. A. House). Magnificently illustrated by that great bird artist, H. Norman. There are no less than sixteen coloured and sixteen art plates in this work. Each plate is a perfect study of an individual Hybrid. Every plate shows the correct colour, the correct shape, the present day type and general characteristics of a modern Hybrid. The practical and comprehensive work for which all Hybrid breeders have been waiting.

COLOUR FEEDING OF CANARIES AND OTHER BIRDS, 3½d.—By J. W. Ramsden. Tells you how to mix the colour-food, and how to moult the birds to get the richest possible colour.

CANARY BREEDING FOR BEGINNERS, 7d.—By Claude St. John. A Practical, up-to-date guide to Canary breeding, designed specially for the use of the beginner. Deals very fully with the choice, sexing, and mating of the birds, feeding for condition, the cages and their fittings, the bird-room, egg-food, nest-building, rearing and moulting the young, colour-feeding, training for show, and all the difficulties likely to confront the breeder.

Longevity in Caged Birds.

A Napoleon Bishop Passes Away After Twenty-two Years.

Sir,—I am sorry to have to report the death of "The Bishop," my old Napoleon Weaver, after being in my possession twenty-two years and two months. He is much missed, and as you kindly inserted the notice of his "twentieth birthday" in your paper, I thought it might interest your readers to know the age he finally attained. He passed away quite suddenly and peacefully, and enjoyed a meal-worm to the last.

E. G. Watts.

P.S.—My Russ' Weaver means to run him close; he is now aged sixteen years.

Affairs of the Y.C. and C.B.S. of Ireland.

A Reply from the Hon. Secretary.

Sir,—In reply to committeeman's letter in your issue of 24th inst., I would like to inform him that the information he received is not to be depended on. He states that already several new innovations have been adopted for the forthcoming show, which will help to keep birds at home. I have attended all meetings of the Council this year, and have no knowledge of the innovations to which he refers. The new scheme of hanging birds around the walls and producing catalogues without advertisements exists only in his imagination, as such a thing has never been suggested at any meeting of the Council. Now, Mr. "C.," don't you think that it would be more manly for you to write above your own name and state the true facts than trying to hide behind the non de plume of "Committeeman," which I am aware you are not.

In reply to Mr. Gillens' letter in your issue of 31st inst., in which he refers to "Committeeman's" ignorance of the affairs of the Y.C. and C.B.S. of Ireland, I may mention that Mr. Gillen only attended once since his election on the Council this year. This does not look as if he took much interest in the Society or its funds, and it may also account for his ignorance of the affairs of the Society. For his information, I may state that the meeting he refers to as being held a few weeks ago, was held on 17th June, at which he was not present. A resolution was then proposed by Mr. Power, and seconded by Mr. Birse, that legal proceedings be taken for the recovery of staging, which was required for the young bird show, and passed unanimously. As the matter of staging is pending, I cannot go any more fully into it at present. I observe your P.S., and have my opinion.

How to Bend Cage Wire.

Sir,—Seeing that a correspondent asks for a method of bending cage wire in your issue of the 24th, I will give him my method of proceeding, which, I think, will take some beating, both for quickness and for keeping the bends all true. If he wants to make round-top cages, let him get some common jam pots; the small 1lb. size pot will do for small call cages, the 2lb. pot for larger size cages, the 3lb. pot for Yorkshire show cage top. Cut the wires all one length; then take the pot, according to size cage you want to make. Place the wire across the pot, and with your thumbs press the wire firmly round the pot until the two ends just meet. Bend one wire at a time at first, and when you get into it, you can bend more. (I bend half-a-dozen at a time myself). You will find this method will keep the wires all on a level all round when you have finished your cage. To make the flat top cage, cut a piece of board the exact width of cage you are making, place wire across board, and bend firmly at corners. Mark the board with square and lead mark across, according to the gauge the cage is to be wired. The board can be left in while the cage is being soldered, and it will keep the cage true and square. Re fancy turns and twists, your correspondent will have to have some practice in wire-working before he can make anything worth looking at; but he will be surprised at what he can do after a bit of practice. Hold wire firmly in right hand, and with thumb and finger of left hand slide along wire and bend slightly at the same time to any curve you want. For sharp curves use pliers, and for curves and rings ordinary chair legs and staves will be found very useful. He will also find these useful for making round drinking holes in cages. I hope I have made my methods clear to your correspondent, and if there is anything else in wire-working, both household and cage utensils, he would like to know, or anyone else, if they will send stamped addressed envelope, I will reply.

Proposed New Society for Boscombe and Dist. (Hants).

Sir,—There will be a meeting at 12, Wilton Road, Boscombe, September 11, at 8, to consider forming an Association for Boscombe and district. Several well-known gentlemen have kindly offered to help us. Now, fanciers, pull yourselves together and see what can be done.

Linnet Contests.

Sir,—In reply to Mr. Dobson's letter in Cage Birds last week in regard to how we carry out our contests for quality and time, I will give him my system of working them at Leigh. We have the usual time judges, and also two judges and a referee for quality. We sing half a minute, spring, and five minutes' bluff, three seconds or over to count; and birds are timed as soon as they are put in the window. All the birds are judged for both quality and time. If any further information is wanted regarding same, I will try and oblige.

T. Statham.

Will Mules Breed?

A Beginner Says he has Done it First Time.

Sir,—I am sending to let you know that although I never kept birds before in my life a Roller hen first, and then a Linnet Mule, I started with a couple this summer. I bought and I put the two in the same cage. I have had a young one from them, and the young one is a clear bird, and a cock. Two of my friends who know all about it told me to write to Cage Birds, and that is why I am sending you this.

[The solution may be that our correspondent has a marked or green Canary, and not a Linnet Mule.—Editor.]

The Wryneck as a Cage Bird.

Sir,—Seeing in your issue of Aug. 10 an article on the nesting of the Wryneck, I am sending you a few notes on the bird in captivity, hoping these will be of interest to my fellow-readers of Cage Birds. The Wryneck as a cage bird, when steady and in good plumage, is a bird well worth owning, and one which all British bird exhibitors should possess. They can be kept for years providing that they are fed correctly. As I have kept a fair number of these birds, and had them live with me for several years, I can speak from practical knowledge. My birds were caught always when they came over in the spring by using limed twigs near the holes of decayed trees. They were kept in large home-made box cages with the back of the cage cork-lined, and with a slit at the top of the cage something like that of a letter box, only not nearly so large. From this opening I used to drop into the crevices of the cork ants and their eggs, mealworms, and spiders, in fact, nearly any insect I could procure, as I have found out from experience in keeping birds there is nothing like giving them something to amuse them, and cause them to take exercise. The Wryneck is now very often exhibited at our large shows, so I will describe the bird, as it may interest many of your young readers, who are not well acquainted with it. The beak is long and slender, and is a pale lead colour in summer, but in autumn and winter a dingy green. The tongue is much like that of the Woodpecker, being of considerable length, which enables it to get well into crevices for its food. The head is ashen grey, spotted with black, white, and rusty brown; a broad stripe of brownish black commencing at the back part of the head and running a good way down the back. The remainder of the upper portion of the body is greyish brown, striped and spotted with black, white, and a reddish brown; from the upper corner of the eyes, extending backwards, is a pale streak of yellowish chestnut; the cheeks, throat, fore part and sides of neck, the upper part of the breast, and vent are yellow, tinged with chestnut or brown, and crossed with black wavy lines; the lower parts of the breast and belly, as well as the thighs, are yellowish white, mottled, sparsely covered with triangular shaped blackish-brown spots; the larger pen feathers are black, marked on the outer web alternately with spots of dark brown and rusty brown; the lesser quill feathers and wing coverts are brown striped with grey and black, and mottled profusely with black and white spots; the tail is light grey, mottled with black and brown, and crossed with four broad bars of black. The legs are short and lead coloured. The hen is a trifle smaller than the male, and paler in colour, especially so in the under parts of her body. Their nests are slovenly put together, and consisting of moss, wool, dried grass or hay, and hair, are built in holes in trees. The hen lays from six to ten glossy white eggs. I have raised these birds from the nest with bread and milk, yolk of egg, and ant eggs soaked, and mealworms, with any spiders, flies, etc., I could procure. The adult birds may be fed on any good soft food mixture. These birds—and, in fact, all insectivorous ones—should be kept scrupulously clean, or they will soon smell strong in a bird room, and they must be kept warm during the winter.

The Bread and Milk Diet for Young Canaries.

Another reader sings its praises.

Sir,—Having been an amateur fancier about twelve years, I have during the time reared a number of Canaries, generally from twenty to forty in a season, with from two to four pairs of birds. I have always studied my birds, and fed them with what I found they liked best, as I have found that birds vary in their tastes just as we do ourselves. That being so, my methods of feeding, have been various, but I have not yet come across a bird that would not eat bread and milk, and I have always given it to all my birds once or twice a week all the year round. I never attempted, however, to rear young birds entirely on it till last year (season 1911), and I did not then do so altogether as an experiment, but more through force of circumstances. I started the season with two pairs of Canaries. No. 1 pair—a yellow unflighted Roller-Norwich cock, and a cinnamon buff hen, untried. The hen laid four eggs, and (the cock being removed) hatched out four young. I prepared hard boiled egg and biscuit, but the hen would not touch it, but fed the young entirely on hemp seed. When the young were four days old I tried the egg-food again, but she would not take it. I then tried bread and milk, and this she took to at once, and successfully reared the brood entirely on it. Of course, I supplied plenty of canary seed, and a young dandelion leaf daily as well. When the young were about a month old, I removed them into a flight cage, still supplying the bread and milk. I paired the birds again, and four eggs were laid, all of which duly hatched out. This brood was fed on hemp seed till four days old, and afterwards on bread and milk, and successfully reared, as before. I paired the birds for the third time, and the result was again four young, which were successfully reared, as before; the birds were then separated. My second pair consisted of a buff Norwich cock and a green hen, both untried. Four eggs were laid, but the hen sat only for three days and then left the nest. I returned the cock, but she would not take to the nest again. I paired these up again at the latter end of May, and the second nest of four were successfully reared, having, from the shell, nothing but bread and milk. A third nest of four had bread and milk only, as before, and all were reared. I continued giving the bread and milk to all the birds right through the moult, a small quantity daily. My method of preparing the bread and milk is this: I use wholemeal bread, cut into small squares, and placed on a saucer. I then put some new milk into a saucepan, and bring to the boil. I pour a small quantity on each square, as much as the bread will absorb, then sprinkle a pinch of castor sugar, and a pinch of maw seed on each lump, and allow to stand about fifteen minutes before giving to the birds. This milk sop was made fresh twice daily, morning and evening. I prefer the wholemeal bread, as it is more nourishing, and not so sloppy as ordinary white bread. My breeding cages are all single—18in. by 14in. by 9in.; seed boxes and drinkers outside. The birds are kept in a cold room, window facing east, and the cages against the wall facing South, thus getting the early morning sun, and the birds are always in the best of health. I never use mixed seeds, but always keep the seed boxes well filled with plain canary seed, "tit-bits" being given separately. I am a regular subscriber to Cage Birds. I think it is a most valuable paper to fanciers, and wish it every success.

The Disastrous Floods at Norwich.

Appeals for the Bird-keepers Who Have Suffered.

Sir,—Permit me to say that it was with the deepest regret that I saw through the daily papers of last week the dreadful disaster which had befallen many of the Canary fanciers of Norwich by the floods, in which many of the fanciers have lost their most valuable strains, which have taken years to produce, and I wish to convey with all other true fanciers a message of heartfelt sympathy to all those who have suffered that great loss. I hope I shall see through your valuable columns that something will be done to help some of the poorer fanciers, who have lost all their pets, that they may once again keep going on with that profitable and interesting hobby, Canary breeding.

A. E. Jeffries.

Richmond, Yorks.

A Well-known Judge's Views.

Sir,—In speaking of the terrible disaster which has overtaken the City of Norwich, you say: "This news will be received with the greatest regret by bird lovers the world over." You then go on to speak of a message of sympathy. So far, so good. But should the Cage Bird Fancy be content to stop at that? Sympathy is cheap. It costs nothing. With your permission I would like to suggest that something more practical be done.

In the past the City of Norwich has done much for the Cage Bird Fancy. The men of the Eastern City were practically the pioneers of the Cage Bird Fancy as it exists to-day. To their work we owe much. In this, their hour of need, comes the opportunity of those who have benefited by their work to show that the brotherhood of the Fancy is no mere meaningless term, but a strong, living, active force. Our brothers at Norwich need help. What can we do for them?

There are thousands of fanciers scattered throughout the kingdom, and if everyone gave one shilling towards a fund for the benefit of our brothers in Norwich, a goodly sum would be raised. I would suggest that you, Sir, as Editor of Cage Birds open a shilling fund, and get out collecting sheets, such sheets to be sent to the members of all the Societies appearing in Cage Birds Annual and to the members of Cage Birds League. A mighty canvassing force is here ready to hand; a leader only is required. Who more fitted for the position that the Editor of Cage Birds, aided by the Secretary of Cage Birds League, and the secretaries of all those societies I have mentioned.

To give the movement a start, I shall be pleased to give ten shillings towards such a fund. I have said "A Shilling Fund." This does not mean that subscriptions will be limited to one shilling. Those who are in a position to do so, could give more, but I do think that every reader of Cage Birds could give at least one shilling for such an object, some could not afford more, but their one shilling would relatively be equal to the one hundred shillings which some of our more wealthy fanciers might be disposed to give.

Apart, however, from what they may feel disposed to give themselves, fanciers could, by the expenditure of a little labour and time, collect in office, shop, warehouse, workshop, factory, mill, etc., many hundreds of shillings from their fellow workers. Subscriptions to the fund need not necessarily be restricted to fanciers, but the fund would represent the efforts of fanciers in giving and collecting for one of the most deserving objects it has ever fallen to their lot to assist.

During the past twelve months we have seen what can be done by organised and determined effort in connection with the Y.M.C.A. Will Cage Birds readers be less willing to organise and work for charity's sake?

As I have shown, Cage Birds readers are drawn from, and come in contact with all sorts and conditions of men. Apart from what may be done amongst personal friends and acquaintances, there is a big field that will shortly be ready to reap, and which should yield a big harvest. In less than a month we shall be in the full swing of the autumn show season. Many are the shillings which earnest pushful fanciers could collect from visitors to our forthcoming shows. Each of our Cage Birds societies could make a collection amongst its members, and thus, added to the amounts collected at shows, and in places of business, would make, as our Lancashire friends would say, "A gradely total."

How such a fund should be disbursed is as important as how it should be collected, and I would suggest that you, Sir, call to your assistance such men as Messrs. Roll, Freestone, Campling, Revell, Stark, Cooper and others connected with the clubs of Norwich. These gentlemen would be able to furnish you with the names of fanciers who have suffered from this awful disaster, and would also be able to give you an idea as to how each sufferer should be assisted. At headquarters you could call in the help of Messrs. Ramsden, Law, Crisp, Tyson, Heath, Robson, and others. By such combined effort and administration would everyone be satisfied, and the fund would be wisely and carefully dealt with.

Never before have Cage Birds readers had such an opportunity presented to them of showing their power, and I hope they will not fail to grasp it. The cause is a good one, and urgent in the necessity. I trust the Fancy will rise to the occasion, and show the world at large that there is indeed truth, strength, and sympathy in the Brotherhood of the Fancy.

C. A. House.

[Mr. House's admirable and forceful letter will touch the sympathies of all bird-keepers, though from our special report on page 715, it will be seen that fortunately the situation has been exaggerated so far as the losses of bird keepers are concerned.—Editor.]

A Net Query.

A Reader Kindly Replies.

Sir,—In reply to "Birdlet," re above, the best colour I find is a light brown, the colour of hay. To stain the nets, get some walnut husks and boil them in an old pot, and put the nets in the liquor. They will come out a good colour and will not fade, and it will not injure the nets. Your nets will require "arming," or they will not hang square. The advantage is fourfold. The way to arm them is to drive a nail in the wall, tie a loop to it, and then take a 2in. mesh and tie on loop; slip that off the mesh. Now put your netting needle back through four meshes, and tie another loop; slip that off, now tie another loop, but don't pick up any meshes, and so on right along the net. If done correctly, you will have loops at top for line and at bottom with the meshes on. If "Birdlet" cannot follow, and will send me his nets, I will arm them for him. Editor has my address. W.C.

Egg Binding Extraordinary.

Canary Hen Holds Up Egg for Ten Days.

Sir,—Below you will find an account of egg-binding. On the Friday hen laid first egg, second on Saturday, Sunday morning (it happened to be my Sunday off duty) I went into bird room about 7.0 a.m., and found the hen under perch in front of cage with wings spread out and the skin of her eyes down. I took her, oiled her vent, steamed her and gave her a dose of whisky, took the cock away and put her on nest. An hour after, seeing no improvement, I repeated operation, and then left her to her fate. Monday morning, 4.45 a.m., before going to work I expected seeing her dead, but she was on the perch calling for her mate. I had to return him, for her continual calling made other hens uneasy. She looked very heavy about the eyes and greatly swollen about the abdomen. Whon I caught her I could feel the egg. The following Tuesday week (ten days afterwards) she laid two eggs, one sound, and the other milk white and decomposing. with a hole in the side, made by the good egg passing over it; she bas since laid eggs and hatched out chicks, but would not feed, and having no other hen at liberty I am sorry to say I lost them. I spoke to a faucier about it and he said it was not uncommon for a bird to lay two eggs in one day, but I think it is very unusual for a ben to carry an egg for 10 days. What I cannot understand is being egg bound with third egg, after laying two all right. The hen is alive now and going on well with the moult.

Bradford National Cage Bird Show.

To Exhibitors of British Birds, Mules and Hybrids.

Sir,—I beg to call exhibitors' special attention to Bradford's gigantie show on Dec. 6, 7, and 9. I might add in connection with same that never before, to my knowledge, has such a large classification been given to any show in Yorkshire for British, Mules and Hybrids. We have secured the patronage of the National British Bird and Mule Club, in addition to the Yorkshire County B.B. and M.C. Tbe N.B.B. and M.C. have allotted three medals to be won at this show, namely one gold, one silver, and one bronze. I earnestly appeal to my South Country friends tc rally round us in this, our great event. I assure them that every care shall be used for proper attention to be given to their exhibits, both as regards feeding and general management. There are thirteen classes for British, and six classes for Mules and Hybrids, and I am anticipating that our section will prove worthy of the classes that have been put on. I also wish exhibitors to remember that we have specially catered for the exhibitors, and indeed, seeing the show is for the benefit of those who cannot help themselves, let us for once have that "Unity, which is strength." In connection with the small club here in Yorkshire, over which I have the pleasure of presiding, I have to say that every possible attention will be given to outside exhibitors' wants, and we ask you to give us the chance of seeing what we can do respecting this section. I trust that the great National Show will provide a red letter day, and that the British Bird section will have proved itself worthy of being well catered for.

A Ramble in Surrey.

Mr. H. Goodchild, who last week gave us an account of a day's ramble among the birds in a northern London district, now tells of a day in a southerly direction.

The rich harvest of "species" reaped by careful observation in the the company of Mr. Crabb, of the L. and P.O.S., in tbe Valley of the Colne, whetted my appetite to see more in another direction, and starting from Waterloo, we detrained before noon within thirty miles of London, and having met a veteran resident of the neighbourhood we were visiting, doubled back and commenced a circular tour.

The district we were in was thinly populated with human beings, but well populated with feathered bipeds. Not to mention the Sparrow, we had seen the Starling, Crow, and Waterhen on the way down, and soon got among the Robins, which, with the Wrens, were the only birds still singing. House Martins and Swallows were all around us, but we looked in vain for the Sand Martin and the Swift, though our guide assured us we should see the latter.

The Wood Pigeon was soon on the list, and numbers of Pheasants, nearly full grown, were seen both near the keepers' cottages and further afield. The Chaffinch's "pink," too intense to be mistaken for the Great Tits, soon was heard. Before mid-day, a Hawk was sighted, which at first was set down as a Sparrow Hawk, but which proved to be a Kestrel, and was identified at long range by its "hovering."

The Wary Mistle Thrush.

The Mistle Thrush's "churr" was heard, the bird was seen only at a distance, as, with characteristic wariness it did not allow us to approach closely. The Blackbird and Song Thrush were soon seen, and again a Kestrel, despite game preservers and their conscientious servants. The pipe of tbe Green Woodpecker sounded in our ears as we skirted a covert, but even three pairs of sharp eyes failed to actually see the bird. Local knowledge of both Mr. Crabb and our veteran friend took me to the nesting site now vacated, of the Green Woodpecker, some 25 feet up in the side of a Canadian Poplar. The frequent piping of the "Yaffle," as they call the Green Woodpecker, blended with the harsh and angry rasp of the Jay, and before long we saw the birds, three young ones, which flew in a line across our view, but well out of the range of a shot-gun. Jenny Wren was heard singing, and a Wagtail was seen high up, and far off; too far for ordinary binoculars to distinguish its species.

Soon after 1 p.m. we arrived at our "Mecca," a long strip of common near a village, well furnished with bramble and whin bushes and other cover suitable for birds, and just as we were preparing for lunch, we sighted what our guide had told us had been seen that morning—Goldfinches. All those I was able to examine through the binoculars were "Greypates." In less than an hour, the common we were on yielded us the sight or sound of fourteen species of birds, viz., Yellow Bunting, Goldfinch, Long-tailed Tit, Stonechat, Skylark, Starling, Backbird, Green Woodpecker, Greenfinch, Whitethroat, Linnet, Wren, Peewit, and Partridge. We saw a covey of six Partridges and the Peewits were in two flocks, one of 20 and the other, 75 at least. Stonechats were repeatedly seen, the Wren was heard singing, and the Hedge Accentor added to our list before we moved on.

A Butterfly Day.

The day was bright enough to have brought out the butterflies, and we noted the "Meadow Brown" and both the small and the large heath butterflies; working our way over the common, we added the Willow Wren and the Marsh Tit to our bird list, the Blue Tit having already been recorded.

After tea in a comfortable cottage with our host, we resumed operations and saw ponds and marshy spots where Snipe were to be seen in days gone by.

Under a hawthorn bush we found a heavy and primitive trap, baited with grain, looking as if it could hold nothing smaller than a rabbit, which our guide told us was set to catch Pheasants that wandered from a neighbouring estate.

The Nightjar Not on View.

We had hoped for a sight of Nightjars, but were disappointed, and were fain to console ourselves with the sight of a female Reed Bunting, and later with a view of a Pipit.

Mr. Crabb had to catch a particular train, and he since tells me that on the way home he saw the Mute Swan. I remained behind to try and see the Nightjars, and wandered down a very moist lane, to flush a fine cock Pheasant, and to see more Longtailed Tits, but our visit to the Nightjars' haunts proved a "forlorn hope." We got wet, but added nothing to the 35 species that between us we had heard or seen in one day in wooded and peaceful Surrey. H. Goodchild.

The Bird o' Circle.

An Old Hand Gives His Views.

Sir,—I was pleased to see the picture of two fine Scotch Fancies on the front page of Cage Birds of August 24, and as I looked at them it awakened memories of years gone by when the Scotch Fancy was the leading bird of the day. I am sorry it has lost a lot of ground these last few years, but just as sure as the sun shines, it will come to the front again. I think it would be a good idea if the breeders of the two birds which adorned the front page of your valuable paper would tell us how they bred these two fine specimens, and would give their experience on the breeding of the Scotch Fancy. It would be a great help to the advancement of the one time leading bird of the day. I am sorry to say this bird is much misrepresented; it is said to be a weak bird, a bad feeder, and hard to rear and not prolific. I can contradict all those statements. It is just as good a feeder as any other variety, as hardy, and as prolific. You get bad feeders in every class of Canaries, and bad breeders, so there is no use placing all those faults at the door of the Scotch Fancy, for they are just as clear of them as any other variety of the Canary family. It is a bird that has an attraction that no other Canary has, except the Belgian. Just look at him when you lift the cage; see how he gets up and drives out his head and lifts his shoulders and put down his head and strains every nerve, as though to say to his master: "Am I doing what is right?" He needs little training if he is a good one, and no colour-feeding. No trouble of that kind and you have something to look at and then the cheer it brings to the breeder's heart when he breeds a Derby winner. If, as some call it, the bird of the year, I hope I have not trespassed to much of your valuable space with this letter. I wish Cage Birds the success it deserves, for the Fancy cannot be half thankful enough for a paper like it. We can express our views through its pages, even though we are hundreds of miles apart, and I hope to live to see it achieving even greater success in years to come than it has done in the past, and that means a great deal.

TIMELY HINTS.

Two prizes of 2s. 6d. each (cash or our books to value, at option of winners) given weekly to the senders of the two best Hints. All hints must be WRITTEN ON POST CARDS, with sender's name and address at foot, and reach us by Monday's post.

Give Birds Rain-water.

Many good and useful hints appear from time to time as to how to feed birds, but nothing ever said about their drink, which is quite as important as their food. Wash all drinkers every morning with soap and soda, and well rinse in clean water and fill with rain water from a slate roof, if you can. It is their natural drink. If your readers do so they will have all birds healthy and strong, mine are—not tap water.—H. B. Bambridge, 5, Bolton Street, Brixham, Devon.

A Recipe for the Breeding of Mealworms.

Nearly fill a gallon jar with wheat, bran, barley, or oatmeal, sugar paper and bits of old leather. Put into the jar a pint of mealworms, tie a woollen cloth over the mouth of the jar, and let it stand for three months. The cloth must be occasionally wetted with beer. The mealworms propagate very rapidly, and at the end of the time your pint of mealworms will have increased into half a gallon.—H. Rippin, 16, Eastgate, Peterborough.

To Prevent Birds at Shows from Becoming Soft.

[Winner of Half-crown Prize.]

A good many exhibition birds become soft while on view at most of our shows. If convenient for an exhibitor to go himself, he should take some water in a bottle for his birds, as the change of water often causes them to go soft. Show secretaries ought to use water that has been kept at boiling point (212 degrees) for about ten minutes, as that temperature renders certain salts, etc., contained by the water, harmless. This precaution would reduce the number of soft birds by at least one-half at the shows. The same precaution may be applied to birds purchased from a distance, care being taken to boil the water daily for the first week.—Jas. Hillier, 38, Sun Street, Stranraer.

Good Bird Grit for Nothing.

After there has been a lot of rain, have a walk along a brook till you come to a sharp turn in it, and you will mostly find a lot of silt, etc., washed up on the bank. Get some of this in a bucket and put under the tap and turn the water on. Stir it well with a stick till the water comes out clean, and you will find at the bottom of the bucket a lot of clean, sharp grit. The water washes all the dirt and mud out, and the grit, being the heaviest, settles on the bottom.—H. C. Ainge, 21, Thorpe Road, Melton Mowbray.

How to Make Milk Sop.

Here is a hint for making milk sop which I am convinced will satisfy all who try it. Procure a 1-lb. jam jar and a fair sized saucepan. Then get one tea biscuit and a round of stale bread. Fill up jar with this within an inch of top. Then pour enough milk and water in equal parts to just cover the bread. Add one tea-spoonful of sugar and one teaspoonful of syrup of hypophosphates. Put jar in saucepan half filled with water on the fire and boil till bread and milk becomes like a thick jelly. When cool it is ready for use. The birds will eat this with relish, and it will keep for the best part of a week. I might say that this hint was gained by practical personal experience, as this year, in consequence of a lot of my young birds dying, I was at my wits' end. But after giving this a fair trial I am glad to say I did not lose any more youngsters.—James Porter, Newtowncunningham, Co. Donegal.

American Cress Advocated as a Green Food.

American or Land Cress, as it is called, is an excellent green food for birds. It tastes like watercress, though the leaves are slightly different in form. It is easily grown in one's own garden. 1-oz. of seed at 4d. will sow two square yards, which will keep the average fancier going all summer. Begin at end of the patch, and cut the blades as required, and by the time you get over it all the first cut will be ready again, thus insuring it always being fresh and tender. I find the young birds thrive very well on it, and if one has to go to the burns for watercress or the fields for chickweed, especially in a wet summer like this one, a little bit of work in the garden will be well repaid.—A. B. Allardyce, 99, Rosemount Place, Aberdeen.

Through a Bird-room Window

This article on the Dayal is No. 27 of the new series of personal birdy experiences related by that eminent aviculturist the Rev. C. D. FARRAR

No. 27.—MY DAYAL BIRDS.

I BELIEVE it was Shakespeare who once said, "A rose by any other name would smell just as sweet." I do not dispute the fact for a moment. It is probably the same with the Indian Dayal, but his present denomination has a history. He is commonly known as the Dayal, or by dealers as the Dayal bird. Latham called him the Dial, and the great Swede, jumping to the conclusion that his name had something to do with the sun, christened him Copsychus solaris, or meant to do so, but he or his amanuensis, or his printer, made a mistake in the last word, and the poor creature has been known to science ever since as Copsychus saularis. However, I expect he is quite happy, as they say, "Ignorance is bliss," and as he cannot possibly know Latin, he is none the wiser.

I may here say that the Indian Dayal is a rare bird, and therefore when you come across him, do not fail to secure him. The lady Dayal is still rarer, and I have only happened on two in my long avicultural life, as I shall relate in due course, and I secured them both.

Mind you, I am not always as lucky. Only a few months ago I saw two White Sparrows advertised in CAGE BIRDS, but I lost them through over-caution. I have so often been taken in by descriptions that I have grown horribly suspicious. I am suspicious as a wary old Magpie of a gin. I thought they might be only White Javas, so I wrote and made careful enquiry if they were really Passer domesticus. By return of post I got a note, saying how much the writer enjoyed my articles, but that for once I had been too cautious, as the birds had been sold. "Dear Mr. Farrar," he wrote; "it is not often you are caught napping, but for once you have slumbered—the birds were sold the same day by wire." My feelings were what the reporters call unreportable, and I determined to be less cautious another time.

An Introduction to Yorkshire.

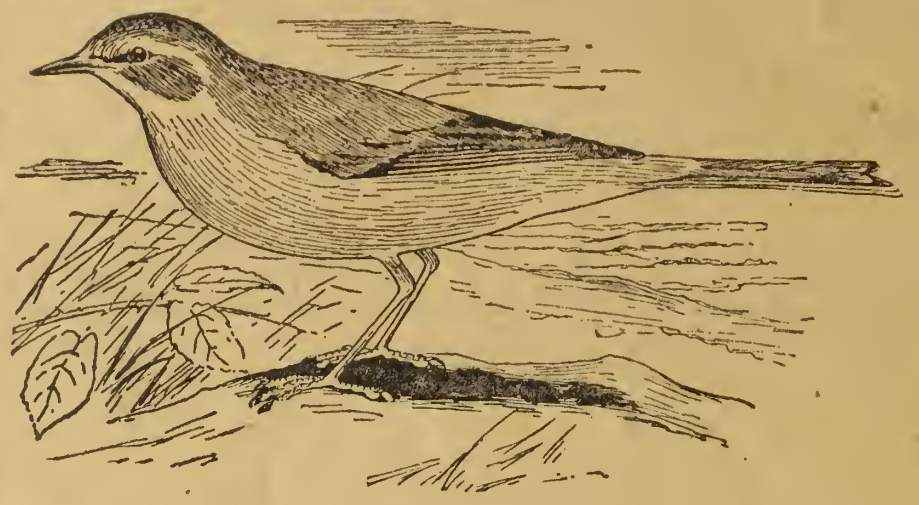
One day I was walking down at Forest Gate, when in a corn chandler's I saw a cock Dayal. I almost shouted for joy, but was prudent enough to restrain my over-wrought feelings. Was it not Linnæus who, when he saw a mass of gorse in bloom, thanked God he was alive? I understand his feelings perfectly; but I went into the shop with, I hope, a quiet and composed, not a very expressive countenance, and asked the price of the black and white bird in the wicker cage. The man answered me in the most matter-of-fact way, as though he were selling a pound of sausages, that the bird was an Indian Dyal, and that I could have him for 25s. If he had said £5, he would have been mine, but luckily our neighbours cannot always read our secret thoughts. I put him into a soap box, for lieu of anything better, and proudly carried him down to Micklefield, and I felt that Yorkshire was an honoured county.

We are celebrated for many things in the county of broad acres. We love "brass," we love horses, and we love a little bit on a race, but above all we love to best somebody, and I felt that this day I had bested a lot of people; in fact, I felt that I had done almost as big a thing by introducing the Dayal to Yorkshire, as Sir Walter Raleigh did, when he introduced the succulent tuber to Ireland.

The first thing I did after getting Master Dayal out of his travelling quarters, was to give him a right good "wesh," and he wanted it, too. It is wonderful what a lot of dirt you can get out of a travelled Dayal, but it amply repays you to see how he enjoys himself after he is dry. I suppose he feels very much the sensation of peace with all the world as we men do after a luxurious Turkish bath.

My next anxiety was to find a help-meet for him. This, as I knew, would prove no easy task, but in the bird world one never knows what may be round the corner. Some weeks later, I was again in London, and, of course, I had to visit Covent Garden. I always pass the rows of splendid stalls, where the choicest fruit of the world is displayed, without as much as a passing glance, and I make straight for the upper storey, unknown, I fear, to many of my readers, where Mr. Green has his splendid aviaries. Many and many a person goes by the unobtrusive little sign, "This way to the Bird Aviaries," but not so your humble servant.

A Heart Filled With Joy.



As I wandered round the cages, so beautifully kept, my feet were suddenly glued to the floor at the sight of a bird dressed in pale violet and white, and just the "spit and image," as we say up here, of my Dayal at home. My heart jumped into my mouth, and anon played postman's knock against my ribs: I felt like Pizarro when he first viewed the City of Mexico, for here, I felt sure, was the thing I had so long sought, a hen Dayal. I tried not to look too eager, as I timidly enquired the price, and imagine my delight when I was told she could be mine for £2. There is an old saying and a true one. "Take the gifts the gods provide," and I acted upon it incontinently.

It is a tribute to our higher nature that we cannot see a beautiful and rare thing anywhere without wanting to draw near, to see, to touch, and to possess it; at any rate I never can, so I think my nature must be a lofty one.

I at once lost all further interest in London, my one desire was to get back North. I felt that it would be tempting Providence to keep these two birds apart, that had evidently been so providentially led into one pair of hands.

As soon as I got home, I took the new purchase upstairs to my indoor birdroom, and proceeded to introduce her to her future spouse, but I took the precaution to keep bars between them at first, as I knew from what I had read that Dayals are rather peppery in temper; I had no wish to see the lady scalped before my eyes.

The cock seemed delighted to see one of his kind again, and stiffened himself all over, dropped his wings, and stuck up his tail, quite like a miniature Magpie, and burst into song. The hen was evidently a little bit jealous of his intentions, and made herself as slim as possible, but by the way she jerked her tail and eyed him with her bold black eyes, I felt sure that she considered him a "pretty fellow." As they seemed fairly quiet, I thought I would let them go together after a few days; so one morning I put them both in a big division, but stood by, like Moses' sister, to see what would happen. Fortunately, nothing terrible ensued, and, beyond a little chasing about by the cock and scolding by the hen, they seemed determined to settle down, and behave like staid married folk.

THE GRACEFUL GREY WAGTAIL.

This fine specimen won First Prize at the Crystal Palace Show, where it was exhibited by Mr. P. Arnot, of Alloa.

I did not like to risk turning them out; as one never knows what will happen in our pleasant English climate; so I loosed them in the general bird-room. I ought to have had more sense. Morning after morning I found little inmates scalped and dead without suspecting their slayers. I thought it must be mice; but could see none, or any signs of them, and then one morning I caught Master Dayal at it. He was actually engaged on a sorrowful little Avadavat; in fact he was putting the finishing touches to the tragedy, when my incoming interrupted him.

I regret to say that, like Isaiah's contemporaries, he was not ashamed, neither did he blush, but hopped away quite unconcerned; no doubt intent on further deeds of violence. I felt like Mr. Brook in Middlemarch, that things were going a little too far, in fact over the hedge; so I caught up the rest of the little Finches, and gave the Dayals the place to themselves, as I hoped that their murderous propensities indicated a desire to nest. I accordingly fastened up a lot of pea-sticks round the walls, to resemble a "Bullfinch hedge" as much as possible, for I supposed that they built in such places in India. You see, I don't know everything, though some of my readers kindly seem to imagine I do; for I learnt afterwards, that like our Robins and Redstarts, Dayals build in holes.

The Border Fancy Canary.

A lecture given by Mr. A. Brown before the members of the Long Eaton & Dis. C.B.S.

An appreciation of the "Wee Gems," with practical information as to their management and show points.

MR Brown in commencing his lecture said: My first reason in giving this paper is to try and stimulate some interest amongst my fellow members, and when you have heard me to-night someone else I hope will step forward and volunteer to give us some of his ideas and methods. Another purpose is to try and make the Wee Gem more popular amongst you. To my mind, the Border Fancy is without doubt one of the smartest of all the Canaries. Take its action, take its plumage and colour. Who can deny this little chap a warm corner in his heart? Another thing, the Border is one of the best breeders and the hens excel all others as feeders. To prove this I will give my season's work. I have had six pairs up and two spare hens. I have hatched 82, out of which I reared 74, only losing one bird after they left their parents. The seven others died at from one to four days old. Only about seven eggs were clear. I am not going to say that this good luck is through the birds being Borders. It is due also to the management, and I will admit my wife has taken a great share in this, and with great interest too, she has been my right hand. To come to the point, I will give you my treatment. After I have got my pairs together I give egg food twice a week with a little cod liver oil mixed with it. I find this is a good conditioner. I give plain canary in the seed hoppers and a good mixed seed alternately to the egg food. This mixture consists of one part each rape, niger, gold of pleasure, and maw, allowing a teaspoonful to each pair. If all goes well, I stick to this treatment until they have laid their first egg, and then I begin to gradually wean them from the egg food, but still give a little mixed seed. The green food I give during pairing up is dandelion and watercress which I gradually reduce, and I stop this altogether when the hen has been sitting two days. I like to go amongst my birds freely all through the breeding season as I find they soon get used to one, and one can keep them cleaner by so doing than if one was afraid to look. Even when they are sitting or feeding they take no notice of me. When my chicks appear I give yolk of egg that has been boiled for 15 minutes the first two days, and then I begin to add tea biscuits to the egg. I find they like these very much and feed well. I let the young stay with the old birds, if they do not interfere with each other, until the hen shows signs of wanting to sit again, and then I separate the young by putting in a wire partition so that the cock may feed them for a day or two. They will soon feed themselves, and then I give hemp, rape, and canary seed, crushed in the mill; a little every day, and gradually increase it till they can crack their own. I give a little egg food till then every day, and, afterwards, every other day, with bread and milk twice a week which I find is the best thing to keep them from going thick. I give no green food when they have left their parents until shepherd's purse is ripe, then I give them as much as they will eat of this. When plantain stalk comes in, I give this every other day, so you see there is nothing extraordinary about the management. In fact I think the Border Fancy one of the most easily managed and the hardiest of the Canary family. I will draw my paper to a close by giving you my idea of a good show specimen. First of all it must have a smart, easy, jaunty carriage, but not the erect slimness of the Yorkshire nor the short cobbyness of the Norwich. It is a happy medium, on a small scale, of the two, and it must be evenly moulded throughout. Head small and well rounded in all directions, and set on a short neatly moulded neck quite free from snakiness and flatness. The beak is fine and must be in proportion to the head; eyes bold and bright, and well set apart; the body rounded throughout: the back well filled and running in almost a straight line from the rise of the shoulders to the tip of the tail, showing no hollowness; chest, perfectly round, showing no sign of frill or prominence, and tapering away in a gradual line down to the waist and vent, free from any thigh roughness, giving the whole bird an appearance of wax-like boxwood; wings compact and firmly set into the shoulders, and carried close to the body, meeting evenly at the tips; legs of medium length, free from scales, and feet to correspond; total length not to exceed 5½ inches; it is best to keep a little under this length if a good proportion is to be maintained; plumage close and firm, of a rich glossy appearance, perfectly free from loose feathers on any part of the body, and of a very delicate texture, quality being the great essential; tail close packed and narrow, well filled in at the roots, not stiff, nor with a wooden appearance, but carried easily and gracefully; colour rich soft, and of a purely natural tone; hardness must be avoided, and colour feeding is strictly barred; position half erect, standing at an easy angle slightly across the perch—too much erectness throws the mould of the chest out; carriage gay and jaunty, head, body and tail all carried with a free easy grace, and in taking the perches not a feather should be out of place. In fact the Border must be dantiness itself. You will have to excuse me from giving details as to ideal pairs for mating, as I have got a lot to learn, but, up to now I have had nothing to grumble at. I have to thank Mr. H. Bennet, of Kelso for his straightforward dealing with me. I will draw to a close by thanking you for listening to a novice's first paper in the birdy line, and if I have made you think more of the Border, I shall be satisfied.

Our books tell you how to successfully moult your birds, and will help you to win at the shows.

In the Courts.

Sparrows as Brace-Birds.

Thomas Winn, of Russell Street, Sydenham, was summoned at Greenwich for using nets and a trap cage for the purpose of taking wild birds in Thorpewood Avenue, Sydenham, and further, by bracing and pegging two Sparrows to the ground, causing unnecessary suffering, and further, for having in his possession a Robin, a Redstart, a Linnet, and eleven Sparrows.

The defendant pleaded guilty to the first and third summonses, but denied that he had caused any pain to the birds.

Police-sergeant 86 P deposed to the facts, saying that the Sparrows' legs were very much inflamed as the result of the bracing. On being spoken to, the defendant said that they had lasted well; he had had them a week. On being told that he would be reported, he said that he thought the close season had finished.

The defendant said that he had been asked to catch the birds, as they did so much damage to the crops.

Mr. Symmons said that the serious part of the offence was the cruelty, and fined defendant on that summons 20s. and 2s. costs, and on the other two, 3s. He also ordered the nets to be destroyed, and the birds found in defendant's possession to be released.

Club Reports.

SWINDON F. AND F.A.

Monthly meeting held at the Baths, Aug. 28, Mr. H. R. Holliday in the chair. Messrs. W. Fleetwood and T. Sims, Wantage, and Mr. D. Tucker, Swindon, were elected members. Next monthly meeting, Sept. 25, at 8. Arranging a schedule, etc.—W. J. Moran, Sec.

HOUGHTON-LE-SPRING C.B.S.

Monthly meeting, Aug. 31st, White Lion Hotel, when there was a good attendance, Mr. Dixon in the chair. Decided to hold annual members' show on November 20. Judges were nominated and will finally be selected at next meeting, Sept. 14, at the usual time. We hope that all members will try to be present, as there is important business; also fixing of classes, etc. Those intending joining can have particulars from hon. sec., and are invited to the meeting. Members who have not yet paid subs. should do so as early as possible.—R .H. Dixon, Sec.

SUNDERLAND C.B.A.

Fortnightly meeting held Aug. 31, Mr. Farrer presiding over a good attendance. The patronage of the N.Y.C.C., the N.B. and S.F.C., and the N.B.M. and F.B.C., has been secured for our open show on January 17, 18, in the Miners' Hall, when Mr. J. Stanger and Mr. J. Maddison will judge. The classification for the open section now reads:—4 Nor., 8 Yorks. (5 champion, 3 Nov.), 7 Bord., 1 Scotch Fancy, 3 Crests and C.B., 2 Liz., 3 Sell., 8 Brit., 2 Mules, 2 For., a total of 40 open classes. Members' classes will be fixed at a later date. I beg to remind those members who have not paid their subs. that they are now considerably overdue. I shall be pleased to hear from anyone wishing to guarantee any of the above classes.—J. Jeffrey, Sec.

OPEN NORWICH PLAINHEAD C.C.

Sub-committee meeting held at Flying Dutchman Hotel, Leeds Road, Bradford, Aug. 28. Mr. W. A. Cowgill in the chair. Mr. J. W. Kaherry, Gt. Horton, was elected a member. Decided that Mr. L. Hodgson's tender for printing of year books be accepted. Committee was completed by the addition of Mr. J. Moorhouse, Huddersfield. List of prizes given for competition:—Open competition "champion," £2, £1 5s., 15s.; "novice," £1, 15s., 7s. 6d. Open competition, money specials awarded to members at each show where club's patronage is given. Two shillings for most points with fourth birds; ditto for vhc. Junior novice competition, competed for in Yorkshire Union novice Nor. classes by Union members of the O.N.P.C., £1, 15s., 7s. 6d. The conditions for competition of the Joe Thomas rosebowl were accepted with the best thanks. All subscriptions are now due, and secretary will be pleased to receive same. Will members whose subscriptions are not paid kindly forward same to F. Rhodes, Hon. Sec.

LONG EATON C.B.S.

Monthly meeting held Aug. 31. Mr. A. Brown read a paper on the Border Fancy, to a well-attended meeting. Keen interest was shown throughout, and at the close of the paper questions were put to Mr. Brown in abundance, and were answered in a most satisfactory manner. G. T. Wall, Sec.

DERWENT VALLEY C.B.S.

Meeting held Aug. 31, in the Church Hall, Hamsterley, Mr. Gardiner in the chair. Fair attendance of members. Agreed that members' classes be the same as 1911. Decided to alter the door draw tickets, and instead of giving Canaries, to make the first prize 10s., second Linnet Mule, third Canary. One new member enrolled, Mr. J. Oxley.—Lindsay and Marsh, Hon. secs.

YORKSHIRE C.B.S. OF IRELAND.

Meeting held Aug. 26th, Mr. J. Dowling in the chair. Messrs. Gillen and Hyland sent forward their resignation from the council. After some matters were settled about forthcoming show, Mr. Furley was appointed vice-chairman. The following new members were elected:—Messrs. J. J. Dowan, J. McNally, G. Townsend. Messrs. Sheridan, Huggard, McDonnell, and Lea were co-opted members of the council.—C. Lattimore, Hon. Sec.

N. MANCHESTER C.B.S.

Meeting held Balmoral Hotel, August 27. Mr. Robinson presided over a good muster. Correspondence read, a very encouraging letter came from Mr. T. Wilson, saying he will become our vice-president, and will be pleased to open our next show, held in November. Delegates gave a report of business done at amalgamated meeting, which was satisfactory to the meeting. Mr. Whittaker's picnic fund is going very strong, and we have a good sum to hand. Tickets were issued to members present for our next show. We also had the pleasure of admitting a few more members to our club, which we can still do with. Next meeting September 10. Business very important, re amalgamation.—W. H. Tansey, Hon. Sec.

WOLVERHAMPTON C.B.S.

Meeting held Duke of York Hotel, August 29th, Mr. F. J. Weaver in chair. This meeting had been specially convened to review and discuss the prospects for the open show to be held on November 1 and 2. The Chairman, in his opening remarks, impressed upon those present the necessity of the hearty support and co-operation of all members, to ensure a universal success, and hoped that members would use their best endeavours to attend all intervening meetings. The engagement of that spacious hall, the Co-operative, with its splendid lighting and freedom from draughts, should meet with the support such an expensive venture deserves. The Committee hope to give a schedule equal, and in some respects even better than those in the past Mr. J. A. Tonks has already the promise of several specials, and with others in view, the list will be greatly augmented before the eventful day. The Secretary reported that the last members' show was very satisfactory, and a clear balance sheet will be shown when all ticket money is in (absent members please note).—J. Gibbons, Sec.

The Shows.

WISBECH.

A successful show was held by the Wisbech F. and F.S. on Aug. 28th. NOR.: 1, 3, Rogers; 2, Beilby; 4, vhc, Handley and Son; hc, Breeze; c, Courts. YORKS.: 1, 3, vhc, cup, Harrold; 2, Ramsdale. MULE OR HYB.: 1, Ramsdale. A.O.V.: 1, 2, Winterbone.

GRIMSBY O.S.

Meeting held Slatter's Rooms, August 29, 18 members present. Table show held same time, judge, Mr. H. Harding. MULE or HYB.: 1, 2, Yearing; 3, Jacklin. LINNET, ETC.: 1, 2, Cartwright. GOLDFINCH or BULLFINCH: 1, Cartwright. GREENFINCH: 1, Cartwright; 2, Yearing. A.O.V. BRIT.: 1, 3, Cartwright; 2, 4, Yearing. AMAT., LINNET, ETC.: 1, 3, vhc, Siddle Bros.; 2, hc, Watson. GOLDFINCH or BULLFINCH: 1, Siddle Bros. GREENFINCH: 1, Siddle Bros.; 2, 3, Watson. A.O.S BRIT.: 1, 3, 4, hc, Watson; 2, Siddle Bros.; vhc, Oliver. A vote of thanks was accorded to Mr. Harding, who in the absence of Mr. E. R. Ridley (Hull) judged the birds.—Towl and Smith, Hon. Secs.

RUTHIN.

Ninth annual show, held in the beautiful grounds of Ruthin Castle (by kind permission of Colonel W. Cornwallis West), Aug. 29, in connection with the Flower Show and Sheep Dog Trials. Entries in the cage bird section far exceeded last year, and were very satisfactory. Some really good specimens were on view, many a good bird was cardless on account of the classification, two classes only being provided for Canaries. Other classes were very fair; the show was a great success. Special for best bird and for best Mule went to Mr. R. E. Griffiths' well-known light Mule; best Canary, Mr. J. O. Williams, clear Buff Yorkshire. Mr. H. Hampson, Wrexham, made the awards, and gave general satisfaction.

The Critique.

CANARY (14): 1, sp., J. O. Williams, cl. Buff Yorks., nicely drawn, good length and style, full of quality, often noted; 2, 3, Mrs. Richards, both Yorks., former a nice youngster, good style and feather, a little patchy in colour, beaten length, latter tkd. Buff, good upright carriage, nice length and quality. Some good Norwich were among those left out. MULE (7): 1, 2 sps., Griffiths, good light yell. Mule, rare size and type, often described, seems slackening to-day, still a good one; 2, Jones, smaller, but good quality and nicely feathered; 3, D. E. Williams, nice col. buff, close up. BRIT. (9): 1, Griffiths, good Greenfinch, capital head and neck, rich colour, grand condition; 2, Mrs. Edwards, good size and colour Bunting, very steady; 3, J. Williams, Greenfinch, good type feather and colour, wants more size. F.F. (13): a good class. 1, J. O. Williams, cl. buff Yorks., typical and stylish, good wings and tail, leggy, boxy feather, rich col., wins well; 2, Maddocks, another Yorkie, nice length and style, straight and slim; 3, Mrs. Richards, variegated Buff, good length and position, a very useful bird. GOLDFINCH (9): 1, Evans and Roberts, a good stamp, broad head, rich, expansive blaze, rare tanning and markings, in good fettle; 2, Griffiths, typical Finch, good ground colour, nice size and marking, beaten blaze; 3, D. E. Williams, a neat one all over, good colour and feather, not the size of those placed above him. Hyde's special: 1, Jas. Williams.

DEPOSIT SYSTEM.

We are not responsible for the statements made in advertisements, nor of the bona-fides of either buyers or sellers In all transactions the adoption of our Deposit System should be insisted upon

IMPORTANT.

SEND THE FULL COMMISSION.—If the full commission does not accompany the deposit, the vendor will not be notified of its receipt until the amount deficient, plus the extra postage incurred, has been paid to us.

HOW TO REMIT.—Under no circumstances will Cheques or Post-dated Money Orders be accepted as deposits. Uncrossed Postal Orders must be sent and the numbers taken for safety.

RULES.

1.—PROCEDURE.—The intending purchaser should send to this office the amount of the purchase (our deposit fee included), and at the same time he should communicate with the seller, stating what it is he requires sent on approval. We acknowledge receipt of the deposit to both parties. In all cases the depositor should give his name and address, and also that of the vendor, and must write same clearly and distinctly.

2.—END OF TRANSACTION.—The deposit is retained by us until we hear from both parties that the transaction has been completed. If a sale has been effected, we hand the amount deposited to the seller. If a sale has not been effected, we return the amount to the depositor. The transaction must be conducted by the parties themselves. We merely hold the deposit.

3.—AMOUNT OF COMMISSION.—The fee is 6d. for each £1, or fraction of £1, and it must be sent at same time as the deposit.

4.—IMPORTANT POINTS.—The depositor must decide within forty-eight hours of the receipt of the goods whether he will keep or return the same, unless, that is, some other period of approval (of which we must be advised) is agreed upon by both parties. The depositor must at the same time notify us of the fact that he has returned the goods. If the goods are not returned within the said forty-eight hours, we reserve the right to send the deposit to the seller after the expiration of that period. And should the seller fail within three days to notify us of the receipt of his goods back again, the transaction will be treated as ended, and the deposit will be returned to the depositor.

5.—A SATISFACTORY PURCHASE.—When a transaction has been completed to the satisfaction of both depositor and seller, both parties must at once return the deposit receipts as a guarantee of its completion. The depositor must at the same time instruct us to pay over the deposit to the seller.

6.—GOODS ALREADY SOLD.—If the goods are sold before our deposit note reaches the seller, or if for any other reason he declines to do business, he must at once return the deposit note to us. Failing its receipt, we reserve the right to return the deposit to the sender after the expiration of three days.

7.—FRESH TRANSACTION.—In case no sale be effected, a deposit is available for purposes of a fresh transaction, provided another deposit fee be paid.

8.—GOODS IN TRANSIT.—Goods in transit are at the seller's risk, and any damage or loss sustained on the journey must be borne by the seller. But goods not approved of must be properly packed and returned by the same means as were used in sending the same.

9.—PAYMENT OF CARRIAGE.—The payment of carriage must be a matter for arrangement between the vendor and depositor. We do not undertake to settle disputes affecting question of carriage. But in the absence of other arrangements the purchaser is liable for the carriage of the goods, and if the goods are sent on approval and returned, each party pays the carriage one way.

low prices do not always mean cheapness, but when you get lowest prices and highest quality combined you have the essence of cheapness. So confident am I of the superior quality of my goods over that of other makers that I invite every intending purchaser to have any of my goods on approval, and if in their opinion the goods are not of highest value obtainable to smash them up and I will willingly refund their money. Clap nets made from specially knitted ¾-mesh fine thread netting, 3 yards long, 5½ feet deep, and 4 feet fly, 4/- pair; ditto 4 yards long, 5/-; 5 yards, 6/-; 6 yards, 7/-; 7 yards, 8/-; 8 yards, 9/-; 9 yards, 10/-; 10 yards, 11/- per pair. All clap nets have two nets to the pair, each guaranteed of above stated size and all fitted complete with all pegs, poles, and lines ready for immediate use. These are the only nets on the market that are properly armed or geared all round. Loose netting specially knit from 60's 3-ply thread ¾-inch mesh, 7 feet deep, 3d. yard; ditto, 9 feet deep, 4d. yard; ditto, 12 feet deep, 5d. yard; extra stout netting for use on rough ground, ¾-mesh, 10 feet deep, 5d. yard. Lark netting, 1½-inch mesh, 12 feet deep, 4d. yard; all netting post free. My netting is the only netting on the market having a plain single selvedge, thus doing away with all cut edges. Sparrow nets, fitted on 17 feet bamboo poles, 5/6; ditto on 19 feet poles, 6/6 complete; self-acting spring net traps, 24 by 18 inches, 1/2 each; three 3/-; ditto, 18 by 14 inches, 10d. each; three, 2/8 carriage paid. These net traps can be used with call bird inside if desired, and can be baited for hardbills and softbills at same time. Genuine Japanese bird lime, guaranteed strongest lime made, will stand all weathers and hold birds in pouring rain; ¼lb. 6d., ½lb. 10d., 1lb. 1/6; sample 3d.; all post free. This lime must not be confused with that sold by others as Japanese. If you do not buy from me, rest assured that you are not getting the real thing, as I have no agents. Single trap cages 6d. each, 5/- dozen; double ditto 1/- each, 9/- dozen; treble ditto 1/3 each, 12/- dozen; all with separate compartment for call bird, in addition to traps stated. Patent self-setting and self-acting trap cages (Reg. No. 23027), guaranteed to automatically reset immediately each bird is caught, 1/6 each. Real Italian hemp pull lines, specially spun, free from smut and strong as boat lines, 1/4 each post free. Bird calls for imitating call and song of any bird, 2d. each; twelve 1/- post free. Flirt pegs and lines, stave poles, and everything required by catchers in stock; send stamp for full descriptive list, which also gives hints on net making. Remember, all the leading professional catchers purchase their appliances from me, so follow their lead and get yours from the man who knows exactly what is required for successful catching. All on approval, and if not satisfactory, you smash them up and I refund money in full. (Imitators, please copy.)

Everything Depends on Quality.

RUDD'S Special BIRD SEEDS.

and Bird Food Preparations are vastly superior to any similar on the market. They are the outcome of many years' practical experience, and excel all others for purity and cleanliness. All the ingredients are carefully selected, and nothing cheap or common is used to cut prices down. We ask fanciers to compare samples and further comment will be quite unnecessary.

Success, Prizes, strong healthy birds, in fact, everything depends on quality. Get samples and see for yourselves.

A VITAL point in the successful keeping of Softbills (and particularly the smaller and more delicate species), is proper feeding. For that reason keepers of Softbills should not be without "Nutshell No. 25." If you study the hints given therein by H. J. Fulljames you simply cannot have feeding troubles. All the best-known of the smaller insectivorous birds are dealt with in this booklet, which also tells you how to collect ants' eggs and discusses the various cages and hand rearing, 2d. from agents (list frequently published), or 2½d. post free from "Cage Birds," 154, Fleet-st., London, E.C.

SPECIAL notice to Lark fanciers.—I have a large stock of young runners, guaranteed cocks, 1/-, 1/6; a few steady for show, contest singing, 2/-; also hand-reared Larks, eat from finger, 3/-, 4/-; hundreds of testimonials; read this—"September 4th, very pleased with the two Larks I received from you; they are pictures.—Mr. Richards, of Leigh, to Mr. Hollinshead." I send birds to all parts; no waiting; satisfaction guaranteed, so send at once to Hollinshead, Cheshire Aviaries, Howard Street, Stockport.

SOFTBILL keepers, take expert advice before proceeding to buy and keep the larger species of insectivorous birds. You will then have no trouble in keeping your pets in the best of health. This advice is offered in "Nutshell No. 26," by H. J. Fulljames. It is a wonderful little work, dealing with most varieties in a highly interesting and instructive manner. Foods and their preparation, and the various styles of cages also receive full attention. Can you breed Mealworms? This booklet tells you how. Post free, 2½d., from "Cage Birds," 154, Fleet-st., London, E.C. Look at our list of agents; call on the nearest and get it for 2d.

THE Song Thrush and Blackbird.—Full directions how to keep these favourite songsters in the best possible condition; together with directions for hand-rearing the young and the selection of show birds, will be found in "Nutshell No. 4," 2½d. post free from "Cage Birds," 154, Fleet-st., London, E.C. 2d. from agents (list published frequently).

NOTICE. Parrots, my celebrated pets and talkers, with or without cages; birds and animals, every variety from Tit to Elephant; pleased to hear customers are satisfied; state requirements, stamp for particulars; terms cash or fortnightly instalments: Copp, Wardrobe Stores, Dartford.

THERE is no more lovely seed-eater than the popular Gouldian Finch, which, however, is very difficult to establish. This trouble can be overcome, and the variety kept successfully. But you must follow the hints given in "Nutshell No. 14," from "Cage Birds," 154, Fleet-st., London, E.C., post free for 2½d. From agents (see list frequently published), 2d.

PARROTS, including one of tamest and plainest talking African Greys living; choice Amazons, Parrot cages, Budgerigars, and their cages. Beware of the pink-breasted common Cockatoos sold as Grey Parrots, by unprincipled bird jobbers; such are non-talkers and market price only a few shillings each; denial challenged. Send for prices and exposure of these hucksters: W. Rudd, Bird Specialist, Norwich.

BEAUTIFUL yellow Budgerigars, good breeding pairs, 7/6 pair; pair Quaker Parrakeets, 10/-; 2 pairs Cockatiels, have both bred in outdoor aviary, 10/6 each; 2 Ringneck Parrakeets (cocks), 8/- each; 2 Blossomhead Parrakeets (cocks), 10/6 each; all wintered in outdoor aviary; approval, deposit; large outdoor aviary, perfect condition, cost £20, take £5: Rowney, Spondon, Derby.

TALKING Green Amazon Parrot, most magnificent plumage, finest, plainest, and most fluent talker living, says 200 words distinctly, laughs, cries, dances, counts 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, sings to piano, recites "Polly Green," four years old, tame, perches on shoulder, heard talking, or sent approval before purchase, £3 15s., including cage; no dealers: E. Ashcroft, Houghton-st., Liverpool.

NOTICE to a lover of a really good African Grey talking Parrot, red tail, one that is thoroughly acclimatised, wonderfully hardy, healthy pet; never ailed in any way; £3 15/- accepted; cheap at double to anyone wanting interesting good company pet; shown willingly; no fault; reason of sale privately communicated by its "Owner," 25, Marlborough-st., Gainsborough.

THOUGH they can often be purchased for the modest half-crown, Pekin Nightingales are very beautiful in plumage, have a fine song, and make ideal cage or aviary birds. Some very helpful information on this variety will be found in "Nutshell No. 19," the author of which is Wesley T. Page, F.Z.S. Get it at once. 2½d. post free from "Cage Birds," 154, Fleet-st., London, E.C. 2d. from our agents (list published frequently).

BOOKLET FREE.

Finest Talking Parrots. I only deal in Parrots that will make first-class talkers; no rubbish. I am willing at all time to send my Parrots on four week's trial and three months' talking guarantee. Why? Because all my Parrots are young, strong, and reliable. My lifetime has been spent among Grey Parrots, both at home and abroad. I guarantee every customer every satisfaction. Grey Parrots are my special fancy. I have trained them, know their wants, and can give every purchaser a bird that will please him in every way. I can supply grey talkers, not thinkers, that will say almost anything, at reasonable prices. Before you purchase a grey or green Parrot, send for my Booklet, entitled "Talking Parrots." All my birds are sent on four week's trial, at my risk. Send postcard for catalogue.—Mrs. Forster, Princes Park Aviaries, Violet Street, Liverpool.

FOREIGN BIRD KEEPING.

The Lesson of a Year's Experience.

By W. J. GREEN (Aintree).

Quails Changed for Budgerigars.

The Chinese Painted Quails I purchased at the end of March. I found them to be very timid birds, with a nasty habit of flying at a tremendous rate until they hit something and then dropping (reminding one of a beginner in aviation). This soon made both birds bald, and was, I think, the cause of the cock's death a few weeks after he came into my possession. I then cut the hen's wing, thinking to prevent its recurrence, but in a few weeks she could get along as well as before; so I left her to learn by experience, which I think she eventually did. I exchanged her ultimately for a pair of Budgerigars, and these I found to be a far more attractive species. I had no special aviary ready when I got them, and as I did not wish to court disaster by placing them with the smaller birds (with which I believe they are often more violent than lovable) I placed them in a cage in my bird-room, where I have a few Yorkshire Canaries. Although they had probably always been kept in an aviary before, they soon grew accustomed to the change, and grew so tame that they had no objection to eating during my presence in the room.

They often attempted to imitate the Canaries' song, making an awful din in consequence. Fearing that this would tend to deteriorate the Canaries' vocal powers, I prepared another aviary and placed them in it on New Year's Day. This may seem rather a foolish thing to do, but, considering that the temperature there is not much lower than it was in the bird-room, and that they are aviary bred, I do not think the change will harm them. They are at present alone, but I propose placing with them some more pairs (including some of the Yellow variety) also some Cockatiels, and what other Parraquets I think they will agree with.

The Birdy Menu.

I feed my birds on equal parts canary-seed and millet (red or white) with a few oats for the Java Sparrows. I also keep a spray millet constantly hanging in the aviary. When I had the Waxbills I occasionally supplied some insectile food, also a few green fly when available. In the breeding season I provided ant-eggs (given dry, as purchased) but do not think any were ever eaten. I find the birds are very fond of the bath, and I allow same every day, as it helps to keep them in good condition.

In addition to my present birds, my selection for the coming season is as follows: Zebra Finches, White Javas, Grey and Green Singing Finches, Saffron Finches, Diamond Doves, Mannikins and Cockatiels, from some of which at least I hope to be successful in rearing young.

As will be seen from the foregoing account of my experiences, I have not yet succeeded in rearing a single foreign bird from the nest, and it may be thought by some that advice from such a fancier would be worthless. However, I think if this is read by anyone about to start in this most fascinating branch of our hobby, and the lesson contained therein, viz.: Interfere with the birds as little as possible, particularly during the breeding season, is learnt, he will generally find that he has been saved at least one season, which would otherwise have probably been wasted in gaining the necessary knowledge.

THE HARD CASE OF THE NORWICH FANCIERS.

NOTES BY THE SECRETARY.

Patrons—THE HON. MARY HAWKE, Tadcaster; MRS. TINNISWOOD MILLER, London; SIR R. J. CORBET, Bart., Shrewsbury; HAROLD BLACKETT, Esq., Sunninghill; E. J. BROOK, Esq., Ecclefechan; A. EZRA, Esq., London; THE REV. C. H. RAYNOR, M.A., Maldon. Vice-Presidents—MISS C. M. E. HILL, Exeter; MRS. M. B. PARTRIDGE, Worthing; MAURICE AMSLER, Esq., M.B., Eton; H. D. ASTLEY, Esq., M.A., F.Z.S., M.B.O.U., Newbury; E. BAKER, Esq., Cowes; C. OUSHNY, Esq., London; J. MACE, Esq., Sheffield; G. E. RATTIGAN, Esq., London; W. H. RAVEN, Esq., Nottingham; MALCOLM ROBERTS, Esq., Baron's Court; LACY RUMSEY, Esq., Oporto; M. THOMSON, Esq., New Zealand.

I have the very great pleasure to announce that in response to my appeal of last week in aid of the Canary breeders of Norwich who have suffered from the disastrous floods which have recently devastated whole portions of that city, a total of £9 17s. 6d. has come to hand in the first few days, up to Wednesday evening the 11th inst. A full list of the generous subscribers to this very deserving cause, with the amounts subscribed, appears elsewhere in this issue, together with some editorial notes, and it only remains at present for me to express my gratification at receiving the kind expressions of sympathy accompanying many of the subscriptions.

A large proportion of the subscribers are members of our CAGE BIRDS' LEAGUE, and I expect that before the fund is closed many more of our members will assist in helping, according to their limitations, their fellow fanciers in distress. I am sure that every one will have felt pleasure in learning that so far as loss of life to the birds themselves is concerned the effects of the flood were not nearly so disastrous as was at first feared. The deaths of animals of any kind in any disaster adds much to the distress with which the news is received, and many thousands of sympathisers must have felt relief when they read that the birds had not suffered as a whole, nevertheless, the humble owners of the birds are, many of them, in very sad case, and the general fund which is being organised to alleviate their condition will, of course, only very partially compensate the sufferers.

Our fund will be distributed by a committee of bird fanciers and bird lovers to aid their fellow fanciers, independently of the proportion of the general fund which will come to them in the ordinary course, and I hope that CAGE BIRD LEAGUE members will rise to the occasion, and send as much as they can afford in support of the bond of good fellowship which it is one of our ideals to set up among bird lovers all round. Amounts received will be acknowledged in the columns of CAGE BIRDS each week.

Our energetic member, Mr. Peck, with the enthusiasm so characteristic of all that he does, and which helped him to win our £5 prize for the introduction of members to the LEAGUE, has evolved a scheme which I am afraid is unworkable, on account of the Lottery Acts. Mr. Peck offers to contribute two singing Canaries in drawing-room cages, and to tour the towns in his district collecting small subscriptions, each subscriber to receive a sealed envelope. In each of two of these envelopes there would be a ticket entitling the owner to one of the birds and its cage. Mr. Peck thinks he could dispose of about two thousand of these envelopes, and it is with very great regret that I have to say that I think in so doing he would be infringing the Lottery Acts. The police take no account of the object. All that concerns them is the carrying out of the law, and I am afraid they would soon be down upon any one selling envelopes which might contain a prize and might contain only a blank piece of paper.

TERMS OF MEMBERSHIP.

PATRONS.—A donation of not less than Ten Guineas in one amount, or an annual subscription of not less than Two Guineas, shall constitute the donor or subscriber a Patron.

LIFE MEMBERS.—A donation of not less than Five Guineas in one amount shall constitute the donor a Life Member.

VICE PRESIDENTS.—An annual subscription of not less than Half-a-Guinea shall constitute the subscriber a Vice President.

HONORARY LIFE MEMBERS.—The payment to CAGE BIRDS LEAGUE of a legacy of £20 and upwards shall constitute the administrator or executor making the payment an Honorary Life Member. A form of bequest will be sent, post free, on application.

ORDINARY MEMBERS shall pay an annual subscription of Two Shillings and Sixpence.

JUNIOR MEMBERS.—Members under the age of fourteen years at the date of joining shall pay an annual subscription of One Shilling.

Leaflets setting forth the aims and objects of the LEAGUE will be forwarded, post free, to any reader upon application.

BADGES.

Neat and unobtrusive badges are supplied to members, without any charge beyond their subscriptions as above. The badges may be had either in button form, or mounted in rolled gold in two forms, one as a brooch for ladies or for cycling cabs or coat lapel, and the other as a pendant for bracelet or watch-chain. The kind required should be specified clearly.

MEDALS.

Gold, Silver, and Bronze Medals are offered for competition among CAGE BIRDS LEAGUE members at Open Shows. The terms under which these will be given may be had upon application.

CAGE BIRDS FREE TO PATRONS.

SEALS AND HEADED NOTEPAPER.

GUMMED SEALS printed in gold and colours in facsimile of the LEAGUE BADGE are supplied for affixing to note paper, postcards, or envelopes. Price eightpence per hundred, fivepence for fifty, post free.

100 Sheets, Two Shillings and sixpence.
250 Sheets, Four shillings.
500 Sheets, Five shillings and sixpence.
1,000 Sheets, Eight shillings and sixpence.

All post free.

Members are entitled, if application is made at the time of joining, to a free copy of a sixpenny pamphlet on British Bird Culture, or a similar treatise on Canary and Hybrid Culture.

HENRY J. FULLJAMES,
Secretary, CAGE BIRDS LEAGUE
54, FLEET STREET, LONDON, E.C.

How to become an Associate.

Many readers of CAGE BIRDS have written to say that they would like to join CAGE BIRDS' LEAGUE, but cannot afford the subscription. To meet their wishes we have decided to form, in connection with the LEAGUE, a body of Associates. All we ask of these Associates is that they will promise to give every possible attention to the wants of their birds. And they must induce others to see that their birds are kept happy and contented.

All that the intending Associate has to do is to sign the coupon herewith, get five of his or her friends to sign each a similar coupon, and send the six, together with a penny stamp, to the Secretary of CAGE BIRDS' LEAGUE, who will forward by return an enamelled Button Badge of the LEAGUE. There will be no other charge. NOW, THEN, BIRD LOVERS!—USE YOUR BEST EFFORTS IN THIS SPLENDID CAUSE.

THE BIRD LOVER'S PLEDGE.

I hereby promise to take every care of my feathered pets and to induce others to do the same

The Destruction of Swallows.

In the House of Commons recently, Mr. G. Greenwood (Peterborough) asked the Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs whether his attention had been called to the wholesale destruction of Swallows and other British migrants in the South of France and Italy; and whether, in view of their utility to agriculture and of the increase of insect pests in this country, he would communicate with the Governments concerned to see if some international steps could be taken for the protection of these birds.—Mr. Acland replied: I am aware that numbers of insect-eating birds are killed abroad, but I understand that the extent to which these birds are useful to agriculture remains an open question, and that, moreover, their destruction cannot be proved to have produced an increase of insect pests in this country. The International Agricultural Institute are at present investigating the whole question, and it is hoped that they will, where necessary, be able to devise remedies for the present state of things. In these circumstances his Majesty's Government do not propose to approach foreign Governments on the subject at present.

Unwelcome Visitors.

It is not an uncommon occurrence for wild birds to visit one's house by way of the chimney; the writer recently had a young Woodpigeon call to see him. Fortunately he was a quiet, inoffensive bird, and did no damage, but a few years ago a family of Starlings "dropped in" and played havoc with the tiny vases and ornaments, not to mention the dirt and litter on the best Brussels and easy chairs!

Nests of Birds, Poultry, etc., should be regularly sprinkled with KEATING'S POWDER, especially when hens are sitting. Don't forget to do this just previous to the eggs hatching, to destroy the Red Mite. Kills all insects. Harmless to everything else.

Twitterings.

We should be glad if Mr. Henry Morgan, who wrote us in May last, care of Springneld Mines, N.S. Canada, would kindly communicate his present address.

Mr. R. Roll, Sec. Norwich Alliance C.B.A., writes that schedules for the All-England Show, Oct. 10-11, will be sent in due course to all last year's exhibitors.

Will show secretaries kindly note that applications for Ramsden's specials must be accompanied by coupons, and should be made early in October. (Advt.).

We regret that owing to a printer's error the meeting of the Lancaster C.B.S. for Sept. 7 was given in our Club Notice column as that of the Doncaster Society.

Mr. G. W. Jones, Chairman, Bournemouth and District C.B.A., writes that Mr. J. A. Crawshaw, 28, Gerald Road, Bournemouth, is now hon. sec. of the society, vice Mr. W. O. Brooke resigned.

We have secured the services of Mr. J. H. Roe to judge our annual show on October 17, open to all England, writes E. T. F. Wiggins, secretary of the Bedford and Bedfordshire C.B.S.

Mr. S. Anderson, who penned the article which mentioned the herb tormentil as a remedy for young birds when "soft," asks us to state that his full address is 9, West Benhar, Harthill, Lanarkshire.

Mr. J. W. Reed has received the following additional amounts for widow and family of Mr. C. Eastop:—Bristol C.B.S., per Mr. J. Fletcher, 6s. 3d.; Mr. J. Little, Newcastle, 1s.; R. and J. S. Ulverston, 2s. 6d.; collected, per Mr. Mackenzie, 10s. 6d.

Mr. Rowland Bamber, hon. sec. Ealing, Hanwell F.S., writes that the young Stock Show will be held Sept. 14, show opens one o'clock, 6d. before six o'clock, 3d. afterwards (Memorial Hall, Leeland Road, West Ealing). Tickets may be obtained at the door.

The Radcliffe and District C.B.S., writes Mr. W. Pickup, secretary, will hold their members' show on Nov. 30. Mr. Lomax, St. Helens, will judge. At the next meeting, which will commence at 7.30, there will be a washing exhibition, and it is hoped that every member will attend.

We hear from Mr. W. Lanyon, secretary, that the members of the Smallbridge and District C.B.S. are taking a ramble on Sunday, 15th inst., to Hollingworth Lake, Tunshill, and Oldham Waterworks. The party leaves Wardle Lane at 7.30, returning in time for dinner. Friends and members of other societies are cordially invited to join.

Mr. W. Hodson, Sec., Dulwich and Peckham C.B.S., writes that on Sept. 17 Mr. Geo. Gardner has kindly consented to deliver a lecture to the members on "The Influence of Antecedents in Canary Breeding." A very interesting evening is anticipated, and a very warm welcome is extended to all fanciers who are interested in this important and interesting subject. The meeting commences at 8, at headquarters, the Reindeer Hotel, Rye Lane, Peckham, S.E.

The City of Glasgow O.A., writes Mr. R. Heggie, Sec., has appointed the following judges for its annual show Oct. 18-19:—Norwich, Messrs. A. G. Cameron, Kelso; and A. Harris, Lochgelly: Border Fancy, Messrs. Thos. Arnot, Howick; and G. Hyslop, Stirling; Crest and Crestbred, A. Paul, Uphall; Yorkshire and any other variety, D. F. Webster, Partick; and Mules, British and Foreign, Messrs. A. W. Watson, Edinburgh, and James Livingston, Bathgate.

Referring to the yellow Border cock which appeared on our front page last week, Mr. T. D. Ayre writes: "This yellow border cock was bred 1911, and I showed him five times, with the following results: V.H.C., L.C.B.A. (not finished moult), 2nd Lancaster, 1st Carlisle (second show), 2nd Aspatria, 3rd Crystal Palace. I was expecting him to do some more winning this next show season, but I am sorry to say I lost him during the second round of breeding season, but have got some youngsters off him.

Mr. C. W. Law informs us that the L. and P.O.S. will have a lecture on Foreign Birds, by Wesley T. Page, Esq., on September 19, at 8, at "The Raglan," St. Martin's-le-Grand, all welcome. All the London members are asked to be present re business connected with the autumn show.

Owing to resignation of Mr. G. T. Clark from the secretaryship of the Highgate, Hampstead and District C.B.S., Mr. J. Hyde, 1, Raydon Street, South Highgate, London, N., has been elected his successor. All enquiries respecting the society should be made to Mr. Hyde at the address given.

On coming home from my holidays, writes Mr. J. Brunton, Leith, I was very greatly surprised on lifting my CAGE BIRDS to see the picture on the front page of my novice winning buff Border cock at the last Palace show. Last year was my first at exhibiting, although I have kept birds all my life, mainly British. I have also pleasure in mentioning that I paired him up to a marked yellow hen, with the result that I have been successful in raising ten young from them, and with a good moult some of them should do well. In conclusion I have to thank you very kindly for the honour done me, and wish CAGE BIRDS (our best friend) every success.

OBITUARY.

Mr. JAS. HARPER (Walsoken).

It is with the deepest regret, writes Mr. H. Harper, that I have to place on record the death of my uncle, Mr. James Harper, late of Napier Terrace, Walsoken, Wisbech, Cambs. He was one of our oldest and most ardent fanciers, had a great liking for pets of all kinds. He always kept Canaries, and was always in the front line. His name will be well in the minds of fanciers, as he was a frequent visitor at shows, never missing the opportunity to purchase a good bird. One thing is certain, he always purchased those birds that he fancied himself, often others than those in the prize list. On Wednesday morning, August 14, about 7.30, he was engaged in loading trucks with timber. He was between two moving trucks when he attempted to leave the line, and was caught between the buffers. He fell into the arms of one of his mates, and died immediately. This sad fatality has caused great grief among his fancier friends locally; he was one of the leaders, having been a commitee member for over 30 years. His aged was 49, and he leaves a widow, naturally very painfully grieved, she being always so devoted to her husband and his hobby. His birds, etc., will be advertised for sale in CAGE BIRDS in due course. He had a good stud, and, I may say, was always found ready to help along beginners.

I have pleasure in sending you one of the National Green-Marked Yorkshire C.C.'s Handbooks for 1912-13, writes Mr. E. Clegg, the hon. sec. (Victoria Schoolhouse, Dewsbury). We have, as you will see, 139 members, which I think is very good, seeing that the club was only formed three years ago. The Green-Marked Yorkshire has advanced in popularity by leaps and bounds since its formation, and I think all fanciers who possess birds of this variety are greatly indebted to the club, and should not hesitate to become members. I shall be pleased to furnish any fancier with all information. (This useful handbook is splendidly got up, and a great credit to its compilers.—Editor.)

The Sparrow Plague.

Mr. Wolverley A. Fordham, of Ashwellbury, Herts, set traps in his orchard for the Sparrows which came after his ducks' food, and in six weeks has caught 1,469. The most in a day were 196, when ninety-two were taken in one trap.

Bed-ridden, but Loved Birds.

An old lady of seventy-nine has just died in Grimsby, after having spent the whole of her life since the age of ten in bed through a spinal injury. Her principal consolation through the long years had been the company of her pet Canaries, which flew about her bedroom, and would come to her call to be fondled and fed

Storks at Kew.

It is reported by a London daily that only one young Stork has been reared this season at Kew Gardens. The rainy summer is supposed to have interfered with their domestic affairs. These birds are common enough on the Continent, particularly in Holland. They are known mostly as rare visitors to our own southern counties.

An Unlucky Sparrow.

While wandering along a hedgerow, now very thick with the recent growth, a reader found a cock House Sparrow impaled through the head upon a thorn. This was evidently the work of a Butcher bird. The Sparrow had been consumed by maggots and only the wing feathers remained intact. Evidently the Shrike does not always kill for food, or he would not leave so many evidences of his powers.

How to Improve the All-glass Water Fountains.

I am sending an idea, which, I hope will be found useful to users of the blue-topped fountains. They are very useful, but of great inconvenience to keep clean. I run the diamond round the part, as marked, give a careful tap and file down the sharp edges. Use a cork, and a small brush will keep them sweet and clean. It only takes a minute or two to clean them.

No. 609.

A Novel Rack for Prize Cards.

Sent by J. W. Pates, 54, Carwood Crescent, Petre Street, Sheffield.

The rack shown in the sketches will be found useful for holding cards gained at shows, and look much neater than nailing the cards on the walls, as I think is usually done. It can be made at a very small cost, as all the materials required are two

"Punched Bars" and some wires. The rack may be made to any length. First get the bars A B and lay them so that your cards just cover each outer edge, then bend wire as shown C, and put each end through holes and clench. It looks very neat when finished, and the printing on cards, i.e., 1st, 2nd, 3rd, hc., or c., will be plainly shown when cards are in position on rack.

How Our Books Help.

I am sending you six coupons, writes Mr. F. Hill, Bradford, which have been signed according to the rules. I may say that this is my first year in the interesting hobby of canary breeding. Having bought one cock and two hens in October last, I set myself to get them in good form for the coming spring. I paired them up in April, and broke them up in July, after having reared 14 fine birds and lost two, 16 in all. This I owe to reading your books, viz., CAGE BIRDS ANNUAL, "Canary Breeding for Beginners," and "Yorkshire Canaries." I have never missed my weekly CAGE BIRDS since I first got my birds. I wish your paper the best of success.

A Warning.

Mr. W. Rudd, the well-known bird specialist of Norwich, requests us to state that some person in London is offering "guaranteed cock" Canaries for sale at impossible prices (they are, of course, hens) at the same time representing that they are HIS (Mr. Rudd's) surplus stock. This man, he hears, stands on Fridays and Saturdays near Clapham Junction, and on Sundays near the Walworth Road, and if anyone questions his tale he replies that he is Mr. Rudd's nephew, and produces one of his (Mr. R's) despatch cards. Mr. Rudd has shown us three letters of complaint he has recently received concerning the birds sold by this unscrupulous party, and asks us to warn readers against the man, and to say that he has no agents, but does all his business direct.

The Disaster in Canary City.

Our appeal in aid of fanciers who have lost their birds.

We made an appeal in our last issue on behalf of the working-men fanciers of Norwich who suffered so severely during the recent phenomenal floods, losing many valuable birds which, unless help be extended them, they will be unable to replace for a long period, as their financial loss in respect to their furniture, stoppage of work, etc., is in itself an item very hard for them to bear. The response has been a fairly liberal one, though not, as yet, by any means adequate to satisfactorily meet the needs of the situation, and we ask readers to send on to us at once any sum, however small, they can spare for this deserving cause.

Every claim is being investigated, so that its bona-fides may be established beyond question, by Messrs. Freestone, Cullington, and Roll, chairman, treasurer, and secretary respectively of the Norwich Alliance C.B.S.; and no expenses of any kind will be charged to the fund. We are sure we shall not appeal in vain to the sympathies of brother fanciers for so admirable an object; if every reader will send but sixpence or a shilling—or even a few coppers—they will be assisting in a beneficient work, and earn the gratitude of some real good fanciers, the majority of them old in years, and none too well blessed with this world's goods.

Mr. R. Roll writes. "There are severe losses on the part of some of our breeders and fanciers, but we have not been able to get the fullest particulars at present; we keep hearing of them day after day, and are keeping a careful record of same. The local relief funds are coming in splendidly, but we cannot, of course, expect any portion to be allocated to the loss of stock, as the calls upon it are very numerous indeed for other necessary purposes. Whatever donations your readers may favour us with, will be carefully dealt with by my Association, as requested by you. My chairman and colleagues on the committee are in touch with nearly all the fanciers in the city, and we shall all be pleased to do our utmost for the benefit of our unfortunate brethren."

Mr. Cullington writes: "Thanks for your kind appeal in CAGE BIRDS. It has given great satisfaction here. I have heard of one further case of the drowning of birds, and I believe Mr. Freestone and Mr. Roll have others. I have not been able to see them since Friday. My case is Mr. C. Hobart, of Paddock Street, Heigham, who had four pairs drowned. Glad to say they are compensating the people out of the local fund for their losses of furniture, etc., as far as is possible. The first three houses Mr. Weston and myself went into were very bad cases; one gets nine pounds, and the other two four pounds each, the goods to be purchased of any tradesmen the sufferers choose."

We may say that the compulsory suspension of the railway service was a blow to the many dealers in Norwich, especially to such large firms as Mr. W. Rudd and Messrs. Mackley Bros., who of course, were unable to get stock away to their customers. Mr. Rudd informed us that despite the publicity given to the facts in every paper in the land, he had actually received several complaints from his customers concerning the non-receipt of birds.

Fifty Years of the Yorkshire Canary:

By D. MALLINSON (Huddersfield).

A highly entertaining and instructive Lecture given before the London Cage Bird Association on Sept, 11th.

The "good old days" when 2s. 6d. bought surplus pairs and 10s. secured a champion!

SINCE the introduction of the cinnamon marked into the Yorkshire circle, and the placing of it as a distinctive breed of Yorkshire, it has become as popular as any of its kindred varieties. No Canary surpasses this class of bird, the cinnamon markings mixing in harmony with the bright coloured feathers of the body, making it attractive, and pleasing to the eye of a lover of an up-to-date Yorkshire.

In giving my experience with this variety, I shall have to go as far back as the year 1860. I was made a fancier by my two uncles, who bred Canaries, some sixty years ago. When only a lad, I walked from Outlane to Queensbury, a matter of eighteen miles there and back, a thick fog prevailing all the day, with about three inches of snow covering the ground. My uncles had heard of a fancier of Belgians who was selling out, and being in want of a good yellow cock, we set off as stated. We got a very nice yellow Belgian cock, well shouldered and full of position.

We were just going down the stairs from the birdroom, when we met old Ned Blayde coming up. Old Ned was a very well known fancier, and he had come for the same yellow cock, so we were only just in time. I wonder how many of our best fanciers would walk that distance now. Old Ned had as far to walk as ourselves. I fancy it would be the train or tramcar nowadays, or do without the bird. There was a very poor train service in those days, and tramcars were unheard of. Besides, one of my uncles would always rather trust to his legs than trust the train! I have known him carry birds miles in his hat. Canary breeding was a real hobby, the cost of them was never calculated, so long as we had something good to look at.

Paying a Long Price—6s.!

About the year 1859 or 1860 I had saved up enough money to buy a decent bird. I got my two uncles to go to Golcar, a village about three miles from Huddersfield, where there were hundreds of Canaries bred every year—you could scarcely have gone to a wrong house. Most of the fanciers were breeders of the Yorkshire Cinnamon and Yorkshire Green, and most of the latter were nice straight birds, showing breed. You could see lots of nicely marked birds, both cinnamon and green. Those that were four-pointed were valued the most; some were beautifully marked, both four and six-pointed, almost marked to perfection, whilst nice uneven-marked birds were very numerous.

We went to an old breeder, calculated to have the best birds. He had them all well touched with the Belgian, some showing this cross more than others. I took a fancy to a nice young yellow hen, a quarter-bred Belgian, showing breed to perfection; the price was six shillings! This was a big price for a Canary hen at that time, as you could get hundreds of hens at one shilling each, and you need not have gone many yards for them. But I wanted something good, so I had to pay the price!

I brought her home, and put her into one of my uncle's cages, as I had not got a cage of my own. When she had got settled, she looked a picture, leggy and straight as a dart from the shoulder to the tip of the tail, the head, of course, slightly bending forward, showing her pedigree very distinct. I had no cock bird to pair her with, so I borrowed one from my uncle—a nice buff-green marked cock. She laid and sat all right, hatched out her young, but would do no more, only keep on sitting on them till they were flattened in the bottom of the nest. This was very disheartening for a beginning; my hard-earned savings gone in a wastrel.

How a Champion Hen Disappeared.

Now there was a curious old man who lived not far from us, and someone had given him a Canary and cage. I saw this bird, and asked if it was a cock or a hen. He said: "Well, lad, I think it is hardly likely to be a cock, as it has laid an egg this morning in the bottom of the cage." I asked him what he would take for it. He said a shilling, bird and cage. So I gave him the shilling and brought it home with me. We paired her up, and she laid all right and began to sit. We thought we would try an experiment with her. We exchanged the yellow hen's eggs for hers, and it proved a very successful ruse, for she was a good feeder, and brought up four nice youngsters first nest and four the second.

In the first nest was a beautiful four-pointed cinnamon-marked hen. I watched this, and thought more of her than all the rest, but I was doomed to disappointment, not in the usual way of losing her through disease, but in a more cruel manner. We used to sell all our surplus stock to a man named John Lees, of Newsome Scarr. This man fetched them every Honley feast Monday, that is, about the last week in September, and his price was 2s. 6d. per pair, cock and hen. We had all our breeding stock selected and placed on the top row, but John soon spotted the four-pointed yellow-cinnamon marked hen. We told him she was not to be parted with, but John evidently saw a bargain in her, so he deliberately told us he would not take the others unless she was included amongst the lot.

I was very much upset over this, as I had prized her so much, I did not want to let her go. I knew she was a better bird than the mother, and I had given six shillings for her. My two uncles, however, were wanting to sell their birds, and I was persuaded to let her go, they telling me I might breed another next year. I got no more like her. Had I but one like her to-day, she would not leave me for twice what he paid for the fifteen or twenty pairs. A bird she was, showing plenty of breed, of fine length and clean cut away, with grand quality of feather, and almost perfect in marking. Perhaps she was more snaky in head and neck parts than we like them now; still, she was a beauty, and one to be remembered, seeing she was sold at the exorbitant price of 2s. 6d. per pair.

Many fanciers will scarcely credit this to be true, but it is a fact, and what is more, we were paying sixpence per pound for canary seed. We did not breed birds intending to make anything out of them; they were an expense to us, but we liked the birds.

I may say there were more staunch fanciers in those days than you meet with to-day. A bad breeding season did not make us throw up the sponge, but you hear of lots of breeders selling out the first bad breeding season they have. These are of that class of people who expect to meet with straight sailing and go ahead and reach the goal without any obstacles whatsoever, but they find to their dissatisfaction they have hit on the fickle and whimsical Canary that will only go its own way. To attain success in the Canary world, you must be well weighted with patience and perseverance; you must throw the bad seasons in with the good ones, and always hope for better luck next time.

THE FLOODS AT NORWICH.

This general view of the waste of waters shows the Cathedral in the background. The river bed is normally but a few yards in width.

The Cinnamon-marked Yorkshire was then as good and typical a Yorkshire as the green-marked, being mostly got from the Green. My first even-marked hen was bred from a green-marked cock. Both would have a good percentage of cinnamon blood in them, how much I cannot tell; maybe it was mostly on the hen's side, as they threw all cinnamon-marked hens, no cocks, from this pair, being cinnamon-marked. The system of pink-eyed breeding for cinnamon-marks was never heard of. They were paired, generally, for marked breeding, a cinnamon cock to a clear hen, or a green cock to a clear hen. Some of the best marked birds I ever saw were bred this way, the mixing of the dark with the light bringing out, as it often does in mule breeding, birds marked eyes, wings, and sometimes tail

The greatest drawback to this method of breeding for markings is the awful lot of fouls you have to contend with. In most nests if there were, say, four in the nest, there was generally a decent marked bird amongst them. I have no hesitation in saying that I have bred birds with better eye markings, and I have seen more evenly-marked birds bred this way, than you can find to-day, and we are steering as much as possible away from the objectionable foul-marked bird, and only pairing the lighter marked birds. I think we are keeping on the right side to steer clear of the heavily-marked birds, except in cases where you need an introduction of the marked blood—when the markings are running too light. Then it is advisable to run in a bird on the heavy side, but to run too much variegation into a stock of cinnamon marks is almost sure to be disastrous. You would breed a large percentage of fouls, these being of little use, for even the wholesale bird dealers fight shy of too many dark birds.

Discarding the Old Method.

Some twenty years ago, I began to discard the old method of breeding to get marked birds. I only kept my best marked birds. I soon found I had begun on a dreary line of work. The old self-cinnamon blood was in my birds, and I argued that it must be bred out, and it was my intention to do so. I had many years of disappointment. The birds would insist on throwing back to the self-cinnamon, and for years after I had never used a self-cinnamon, one would come out unexpectedly to darken the room again, and very often from a pair one would least expect to do such a thing. After a few years of this careful breeding, I found when one did come it was not as rich a cinnamon colour as of former years. I was confident I had made progress, and as years went by the percentage of fouls became less.

I had never been a believer in in-breeding, as I had been taught by my uncles that nothing could be more detrimental to the stock. They said it made the youngsters weaklings. I believe neither of them would have bred with birds that were related if they knew of it. They would have let them run over a season rather than in-breed. I had heard of in-breeding with other kinds of live stock, so I thought it could be done with the Canary. I was sure of one thing, it would be sure to improve the markings, as you could pair more to the point—that was if it did not reduce the stamina of the birds. I was determined to try it—"nothing venture, nothing have."

Fears, and a Pleasant Surprise.

About a fortnight later I was horrified one morning to miss Mrs. Dayal. I searched high and low, but could see nothing like her, and I began to think that her lord and master had turned cannibal and eaten her, bones and all.

All of a sudden, as I was sadly considering the tragedy, I fancied I saw a long tail sticking out of a little cardboard box I had hung up for Waxbills high up on the wall. I could hardly think it was the hen Dayal, as the box was too small, and I feared if it were, she had crept in there to die after some murderous assault on the part of her companion. I accordingly got a pair of short steps and proceeded to investigate matters.

As I got on a level, I saw the tail move slightly, and I noticed the bird was breathing. Accordingly, I climbed down, for I knew from the way the bird was sitting that she was not wounded, and, therefore, I concluded that there was only one other explanation, she was calmly sitting. I knew that the only thing now was to possess my soul in patience and to watch for the moment when she came off to feed, and then take one hasty peep.

Next day I got my chance, and took it, while she was helping herself to mealworms. There, sure enough, were three eggs, big for the size of the bird, rather like those of our Missel Thrush in marking. I knew that to take them out and examine them would be fatal; and so, though I thought something in my inside would gave way, I came down the ladder and watched events.

The First English Dayal.

No old broody ever sat more steadily and composedly than did that hen. The long tail was always sticking out of the hole, and the cock sat on a bough and dozed, and no doubt dreamt of coming troubles and domestic cares. At the end of thirteen days I found a bit of egg-shell on the floor.

The obvious thing was to fill a generous sized saucer with fat mealworms and succulent maggots, for it is no good to expect Dayals to rear young without unlimited live food, any more than Pharoah was right in expecting the Israelites to make bricks without straw. I know some people tell you that Dayals will carry up pieces of egg flake to their callow young. All I know is mine never would.

And his Sad Fate.

For about eight days all things went well, and the Dayals behaved like model parents. Then one day I saw on the floor two little Dayals about eight days old, that seemed all legs. They had only a number of quills on them, and looked like little blue porcupines. Like Sisera, where they fell, there they laid down. I had a horrible feeling that they had "arrived too soon," as our French neighbours say, but there was no help for it. I must trust to luck. Alas, my luck failed me; for some reason, perhaps disgusted at such precocious behaviour on the part of his young, the cock Dayal refused to take any notice of them (the hen had never attempted to feed them) and the sad consequence was that they departed out of this troubled world for a better.

I hope my readers will feel sympathy for me. Sympathy is the wedding garment, lacking which none shall stand in the presence of God. Doubtless there will be many a rent in the garment before its owner passes to the Wedding Feast, for the highways are rough, and humanity is the weakest thing upon earth; but the Host will not be extreme to mark what is done amiss. The possession or non-possession of the garment is the difference between St. John and Judas. I hope my readers will take the moral to heart. If there was one thing I needed that morning, it was sympathy.

Further Misfortune.

The next winter was of terrible severity, and one day I found my beautiful cock Dayal cold and dead. Four years later I was looking in one of our London bird-shops. My readers will guess the name, though I am not permitted to mention it; but it begins with an "H"; and there in a cage of Indian birds, I once again spotted a hen Dayal, but oh, so dirty and dilapidated and miserable-looking. She had evidently come over in a big lot of softbills, and had been the weakling of the lot; hence her filthy condition. I asked the price, and was told that if I liked to try and save her life I could have her for "ten-bob." Need I say, I accepted the offer.

I took her home and washed and tended her with the care of a young mother for her firstborn, but alas, she was past human help, and though she lingered on for some months, her feathers never grew properly, and when winter came, she was so unclothed that one morning I found her dead on the cage floor.

As Mark Twain says somewhere, "I dropped a tear over it," and from that day to this, I have never been able to get a pair of Dayals, and so have never attained my ambition—to breed and rear them in England for the first time. Some day, I suppose, some miserable beginner will get hold of a pair and breed them straight away. These things do happen. The old story in the Bible is often repeated to-day. After waiting patiently by some Pool of Bethesda for years, another steppeth down before us.

I console myself with the thought that up to now no one has ever gone so far in breeding Dayals as myself. This is my opinion, "but I may be mistaken," as Gladstone once said!

Questions and Answers.

Queries will be answered under the following conditions:—

(1)—All questions must be clearly written in ink (or typewritten) on one side of paper, and must conclude with either the correct name of querist or a pseudonym, or initials.

(2)—The proper name and address in full of querist must always be written on a separate sheet of paper, and enclosed with the query. In no case must the address appear on the query.

(4)—Queries must not include or be included in orders for books, instructions re advertisements, or any other matter for publication.

(5)—The department to which the queries refer must be stated in bold letters on the left-hand corner of the query.

(6)—If an answer in the same week's issue is desired, queries must be posted to reach us by Monday's first post at latest. Queries will be dealt with in the order in which they are received, and only as space permits. The earlier queries are received the better attention they are likely to have.

(7)—Queries relating to illnesses of birds, except enquiries as to cause of death (for which see Post Mortems will be answered by return of post on receipt of a postal order for sixpence and on addressed stamped envelope. Queries of an ordinary nature will be answered by post, if desired, on receipt of a postal order for one shilling and a stamped addressed envelope.

(8)—All who require letters of complaints written to advertisers must state grounds for doing so clearly and fully, and enclose a fee of sixpence, otherwise their letters will not receive attention. All the fees received from this source will be handed over in full to the "Referee's" Poor Childrens' Fund (London).

NOTE.—If an answer is required concerning the proper mating, etc., of Norwich, Yorkshires, Crests, Cinnamons, Greens, Borders, Lizards, Scotch or any other variety of the Canary family, we shall, should the querist desire us to do so, be pleased to submit his questions for answer to some leading specialist of the day on the variety concerned.

Answered by CLAUDE ST. JOHN.

ONE OR TWO (S. H. A W.).—The Norwich Canary and the Norwich Plainhead are synonymous terms. In former times the Crested Canary, which originated as an offshoot or branch of the Norwich Canary, was invariably referred to as the Crested Norwich or Norwich Crest, and then it was the invariable custom to term the non-crested branch Norwich Plainheads or Plainheaded Norwich. But now the term Norwich is rarely, if ever, applied to modern Crests and Crestbreds, and the term "Plainhead," being superfluous, is gradually being dropped from the nomenclature of the non-crested Norwich.

THE YOUNG IDEA (Beginner).—If the father of the young Rollers has only recently died, and sang well up to the time of his death, it is probable that the young birds will sing a fair amount of the pure Roller song, assuming, of course, that they have not also been hearing the Norwich cocks singing. In the latter case now they are left with only the Norwich as tutors they will almost to a certainty sing only a kind of medley of the Rollers and Norwich song, and consequently will only be worth the price of good singing Norwich. The price you gave for the parents does not govern the value of their young unless they are equally well trained, and proficient singers. If you cannot get the young trained under pure Rollers your best plan would be to sell them off as songsters as soon as they are in good song. The price you get will depend largely upon the market you sell in, probably not more than 7s. 6d. each.

SITS HUDDLED UP (M. B. N.).—Keep the bird in a comfortable temperature, quite free from cold draughts, and sudden extreme fluctuations, and impure air. But do not overheat it. Coming from an outdoor aviary it should do very nicely in a room without fire. Give a staple diet of three parts Canary to one part summer rape. Every second day for two or three weeks give half-a-teaspoonful of crushed sponge cake with four drops of sherry and two of cod liver oil emulsion mixed in it and sprinkled with maw seed, and on the alternate days twice a week give a similar quantity of the mixed seed advised to "T. O. G.," and a scrap of green food four times a week. In the drinking water give six drops of syrup of rhubarb and as much Epsom salts as will cover a sixpence for three days, and afterwards give 20 drops of whisky, six each of glycerine and oxymel of squills, and two of eucalyptus oil well shaken in the water every second day for a fortnight.

A STOCK COLOUR AND SOFT FOOD (Cashier).—You are certainly running a risk of spoiling the colour of your birds by both altering your soft food, so as to make it a stock combination of egg and colour food, and leaving an inexperienced hand to dole it out whilst you are away on holiday. If there is no alternative, I advise you to adopt this method. Get half-a-pound of pure desiccated yolk of egg and one pound of maizena wafer biscuits. Crush or grind the biscuits and mix thoroughly with the egg yolk. Add to this mixture a proportion of the colour food equal to that you are now using. For example, if you are using four teaspoonfuls of colour to a teacupful of soft food, add that quantity to every teacupful of this mixture, and if there is no sugar, or very little, in your colour mixture, add sufficient soft brown sugar to give the whole a slightly sweet taste. Add three ounces of maw seed to the above quantity, or more or less in proportion to the quantity of stock mixture made, and again thoroughly mix and blend all together. Store this mixture in air-tight tins or jars in a cool, moderately dry place—not too dry, nor yet damp enough to affect the contents of tins or jars. Leave instructions for a teaspoonful of the mixture to be doled out daily to each bird—in the morning preferably. It would be an advantage if you could get the person left in charge to put the required quantity of food each morning in a basin and sprinkle with a very few drops of water—about a teaspoonful to a teacupful of food—and stir well with a fork to very slightly moisten the whole before serving it out. It would be best to mix the food at once, and begin to give it on alternate days for a week or so before going away, instead of the usual soft food. Then you would see how the birds took to it, and might also give the person to be left in charge an object lesson or two in moistening the food and serving it out.

LUMP ON WING (A. B. C.).—Thanks for sending along the lump. As you will see from reply last week, I had anticipated its early dropping off, which would have occurred in any case, but your cotton ligature would certainly expedite its separation. It was a small encysted tumour, and the actual cause of these growths commencing spontaneously is as far as I am aware, not clearly understood. Adopt the same treatment as previously advised for the growth commencing on the other wing. The painting with iodine may cut short the development, but if it does not it will follow the same course as the last, and you can do nothing—or should do nothing further to hasten the development. Put a ligature on it as you did the last, when it has a definite "stalk," so to speak, on which to tie it, so that it will not slip off, but not before that stage. Will you please send along the other lump when it drops off?

A LISTLESS YOUNGSTER (J. E. Conway).—The bird may be naturally a weakling, when the moult would quite account for its listless condition. You should have said how old the bird was, and whether it is plump or in an emaciated condition. Keep it rather on the warm side, and cover its cage for a time to expedite the moult. Give a staple diet of three parts canary to one part summer rape, and in addition to the soft food which you will be using as a vehicle for the colour food, give half a teaspoonful of the seed mixture advised to "T. O. G." every second day for a month. On the alternate days give a scrap of chickweed or a half ripe plantain stalk. Give not more than a small teaspoonful of soft food with colour, and every second day for a fortnight mix in it two drops of cod liver oil emulsion. In the drinking water add six drops of syrup of rhubarb, and as much sulphate of soda as will cover a sixpence, for three days, and afterwards 20 drops of whisky and three each of tincture of gentian and tincture of calumba every second day for a week. After this add 20 drops of Chemical Food to the water every second day for a fortnight. Give a supply of gritty sand in shallow tin on floor of cage.

HEATING, LAMP AND NON-FEEDING (Molly).—Hope I have your pseudonym correct, as I am not certain about it. It would have been best to give more particulars of the size, position, and structure of the outhouse. If it is in a fairly sheltered position, and your Canaries come of a healthy, hardy stock, bred and kept under normal conditions of temperature, I have no doubt whatever they would thrive very well in the place without any artificial heating at all, and the Goldfinches will certainly require none. I do not know which is the best oil-lamp for such a purpose, because I have not tried all kinds on the market. I have tried a few, said to be all that could be desired, and my experience is that all are as bad as one another. When a place is heated a temperature between 45 and 50 degrees is ample through the winter. The only rational thing to do with a hen which will not feed her chicks is to be provided with a pair of good feeding foster parents to bring up the young, if the non-feeding hen is really worth taking this trouble to get her chicks reared.

BREEDING QUERIES (A Fancier, Senghydd).—Decidedly, Canaries are not too old to breed at three years old. A small proportion of them may be worn out at that age, but they are probably in nearly every case birds which have been badly managed, or, perhaps, exhausted by overwork whilst young. I have no definite record of the limit of age at which Canaries will breed, but I have myself bred successfully with a cock between 9 and 10 years old, and I believe others have succeeded at a greater age than this, so that I see no reason to doubt the statement of your friend that he has bred with a bird 10 years old. As a matter of fact, so long as a bird keeps quite vigorous, healthy and active, it may reasonably be expected to breed, irrespective of age to a great extent. There must have been other reasons for your three-year-old cock failing to fill the eggs, as its age is by no means a sufficient reason. It is not necessary, nor always advisable, to mate together birds of the same age. A three-year-old bird of either sex is, as a rule, best mated with a one-year-old bird, and in the case of very old birds it is almost invariably best to mate with those in full breeding vigour—say, in their second breeding season. Birds of equal age may be mated together in their first, second and third seasons with every prospect of success, but it must not be taken as an absolutely essential rule.

AN OUTSIDE AVIARY (J.N.M.).—There is certainly a great deal too much glass in the structure, as it will render the place subject to very great extremes of temperature unless you intended to heat it during the winter. The only successful room I have known with an equal proportion of glass was not only heated on similar lines to a greenhouse, but had movable wooden shutters provided for use during severe weather in winter, which covered all the glass, save what was necessary to well light the interior. If you do not mind finishing the place in this way it would succeed well enough. Otherwise, as you do not wish to remove the glass roof, I would suggest that you lay a thin layer of boards over it, and cover the boards with felt, and provide movable shutters to cover the glass in the two ends when necessary in winter, leaving only the front portion of glass unprotected. For summer use only, provided there is good top ventilation, it would do nicely with only the top covered with "summer cloud." As regards the interior arrangements, the breedings cages should be arranged on a rack on the wall at the back in three or four tiers, according to what the height will allow, starting at about a foot from the floor. A double-tier large flight could be made along one end from the front of the house to as near as you can go to the front of the stack of breeding cages, and still leave room for the sand-tray to be removed from the latter for cleaning. The remainder of the front could be filled in by a flat-topped chest to serve as a table, and store away seeds, foods, and all surplus appliances not in actual use. If you instal heating apparatus aim at keeping the temperature between 45 and 50 degrees in winter, which is ample for any variety. If you want information on any other particular point do not hesitate to write and ask for it.

SCOTCH FANCY (B. W.).—Sorry I cannot give any address here. To do so would be obviously unfair to all the rest. You would find addresses of breeders in "Cage Birds Annual," and although you may see none advertised just at present, you will find them frequently advertised for sale in our columns in a very short time from now. The birds are not quite ready for sale yet owing to the moulting season being still in progress.

PANTING YORKSHIRE (Yorkshire).—The moult is evidently telling upon it rather heavily. Keep in on the warm side, and otherwise treat it the same as advised to "J. Robinson," except that you need give the rhubarb and salt aperient for one day only. In the week intervening between the two fortnights, give the chlorodyne, etc., mixture. You may also add 20 drops of Chemical Food to the water each day.

PREPARING FOR WINTER (A. R., Glasgow).—As the birds have been in the aviary outdoors since spring, and they are strong and healthy, and of a hardy breed, I see no reason at all why they should not thrive as well through the winter in the covered-in part of aviary—assuming this is what you mean by "the little house"—without any heating of any kind. If the aviary is divided into a covered-in portion and an open wire flight, and the birds fly about in it at liberty, there is really no need to restrict their freedom to the closed portion, unless the weather should become very severe during the winter, when it would be judicious to do so. I cannot give a more definite reply, as you have omitted all important details, such as breed of birds, how kept, size, aspect, and structure of aviary, and to what extent it is exposed to the weather.

BLIND WITH CATARACT (Anxious, Walthamstow).—Am sorry my surmise was only too correct, and you have discovered that the bird is blind. You can do absolutely nothing to cure it. If it is a cock it will probably sing very fairly when it gets accustomed to its condition, which sometimes takes a few months. The disease is not infectious at all, and I do not think there is much, if any, pain attached to it, but you certainly should not attempt to breed with it. Some of these blind birds are terribly worried by grey lice. Examine the bird, and if this is so try to get someone expert at the job to handwash it for you, and add a teaspoonful of creolin to each pint of the first and second waters used. Clean its cage thoroughly meanwhile. To try to bring it in song, feed for two or three weeks as advised to "J. Robinson," but give the aperient for one day only, and afterwards give four drops each of tincture of gentian and calumba, and aromatic sulphuric acid every second day for a week.

VENTILATING ROOM (Bowler).—You omit to say whether the room in question is on the ground floor or an upper storey, and whether the window is a fast one which cannot be opened. If the latter is the case you should remove the centre pane in the top row, fix it in a separate frame, and replace it on pivot or hinges, so that it might swing, and be opened or closed at will. For hot summer weather it would be best to have the window made in sashes to slide up and down, or at least the two top rows to be made to slide down. Then you might cut eight or nine inches off the bottom of one of the panels of door, and fix a piece of perforated zinc over the aperture on each side in such a way that the holes in the zinc sheets do not come opposite each other. A proper ventilator could, of course, be fixed under the window and another near the ceiling, but as this would probably entail structural interferences it requires a practical workman on the spot to give advice worth having on this point. Apart from this, the above suggestions are quite the best you can adopt, and they should answer very tolerably.

BIRD SHED AND MIXED SEED (T. O. G.).—(1) Half-inch boards are not really thick enough to make a good weather-proof structure. The oilcloth and paper covers will doubtless keep out wet and draughts if kept in good repair, but there will doubtless be great and rapid fluctuations at nearly all seasons, so that it is a pity you do not line the place with another layer of half-inch material and fill in the space between the layers with sawdust or wool waste. The shed is of good proportions, and seems to be built on a good principle, and if it is in a moderately sheltered position and gets a fair amount of sun, there is no reason why a perfectly hardy breed like Borders should not thrive in it without any artificial heat in the winter. At any rate, I should chance it. You might make a solid wooden shutter for the large window in front for use in severe weather in winter. That is all the protection that is likely to be really necessary. (2) For a good seed mixture for Borders mix by measure two parts each of millet and black rape, one part each inga, teazle, and maw, a half part each of hemp, gold of pleasure and sesame, and a quarter part linseed.

BIRDS DYING (Nil Desperandum).—There seems so little at fault in your treatment that I am inclined to think there is some ground for your suspicion about the seed, especially as the hemp in the mixture you send a sample of is stale, rancid, and musty, and quite unfit for a bird's consumption. If the birds ate much of this hemp, which, fortunately, is not present in large quantity, it would quite account for their condition and the deaths. Treat as follows for a few weeks, and I have no doubt things will soon improve. Give a staple diet of plain canary only. Every second day give in addition a half-teaspoonful of summer rape, and a spray of chickweed or morsel of banana, and on each alternate day for a month give a piece of bread and milk the size of a large hazel nut, with two drops of cod liver oil emulsion on it, and sprinkled with maw seed. Every third or fourth day give a small teaspoonful of a mixture of equal parts hemp (see that it is quite sound and white in kernel), inga, millet, teazle, and broken groats. Keep a shallow tin of gritty sand in one corner of the cage. Add ten drops of syrup of buckthorn to the water for two days. After this add just enough Condy's Fluid to the drinking water every second day for a week to tinge it a light pink, and on the alternate days add 20 drops of Chemical Food to the water. Above all else, see that your seeds are all perfectly sound and sweet.

VERY WHEEZY AND PANTING (J. Robinson).—I'm afraid this bird is quite past help. The most you can do is to alleviate its condition somewhat. Considering its age and the fact that it has been in this condition some time, mismanagement is to be suspected. Is it hung in a window, or in a place exposed to draughts? Keep it in a comfortably warm place—not too warm—quite free from draughts, or great and rapid fluctuations, and impure air (such as hanging near ceiling or near or over a burning light in the evenings). In addition to the staple of canary and rape, give half a teaspoonful of crushed sponge cake with four drops of sherry and two of cod liver oil emulsion mixed in it and sprinkled with maw seed every second day for a month; twice a week on the alternate days give a pinch of equal parts hemp, inga, millet, and teazle, and on each of the remaining days a half-ripe plantain stalk or sprig of chickweed. In the water give six drops of syrup of rhubarb and a pinch of Epsom salts for three days, and afterwards twenty drops of the following mixture every second day for a fortnight, then withhold it for a week and begin again and give it for another fortnight. Mixture: Two drachms each of glycerine and oxymel of squills, one drachm each of chlorodyne and ipecacuanha wine, and 8 grains of iodide of potassium. Any chemist will mix this for you.

FOREIGN BIRDS.

JAPANESE BUNTING, ETC. (Tanager).—I am in the wilds away from my books and notes, but will give you a full reply next week.

BUDGERIGARS AND FINCHES (E. H. H.).—(1) It is getting late for this season, and I should not encourage breeding this year; about March next take out the nest receptacles, thoroughly cleanse by scraping, scalding, exposing to atmosphere for forty-eight hours, and leave the birds to go their own way. It is the temperament of an individual pair, which I opine will ultimately settle down all right. (2) The Zebra Finches will breed, probably not this season now, but certainly next. A cage 2ft. long at least would be best, and a Hartz travelling cage with the fittings and perches removed would be better than the husk. Supply hay, grass, and a little moss, and they will build their own nest. Of course, you must cut away one of the chip bars of the cage to make an entrance hole for the birds.

GOULDIAN FINCHES ("Gould").—Your perseverance deserved a better reward, but if that be any consolation, you are not alone in your disappointment. Goulds are rather subject to egg-binding, much more so when kept indoors than when out of doors. The appalling weather conditions of this summer have caused many similar disappointments and losses; a bird is somewhat similar to ourselves in that it appears to feel almost every change of the weather indoors, which would be unnoticed under the conditions of outdoor life—restricted exercise, etc., plays so large a part. You have done really well to keep all your birds save the one in such a season. In the future, never attempt to pair birds which are not absolutely fit. The term is inclusive, and a bird in partial moult, though healthy, is not "fit," and should not be mated till it is. If steaming and other means fail on any future occasions, try dry heat. I should certainly say try again, but only pair "fit" birds, and have a roomy box cage, open at front only—neat, plain stained box cages are really "chic"—with nest receptacle at most secluded corner, and the twig perches at end of cage only.

GREY PARROT (C. Tompkins).—I prefer perches with the bark on for Parrots, one at least 1½ inches in diameter, and the other about one inch. Such procedure practically precludes cramp; but on the least signs of leg weakness, lameness, or cramp foment with hot water (not hot enough for discomfort), dry with a cloth, and then, while the skin is soft and moist, paint with whisky. Treat so daily while any signs of the trouble remain. The sore must be fomented and well cleansed with hot water, and dabbed dry with a cloth, but if there is any sign of pus this must be cleansed away before applying healing ointment. While a bird has a sore foot the perch can be padded with flannel, which, of course, must be changed as necessary. Get the following two mixtures:—(1) Canary and white millet in equal parts; supply in a separate tin, keep supply in cage, replenishing as necessary. (2) Two parts each oats and hemp, and one part each paddy rice, crushed maize, wheat, dari, and sunflower seeds; a few chillies and broken Spanish nuts (shelled); well mix and supply regularly. Also supply ripe fruit, plain biscuit, green food, and dry stale crust, but do not continue the milk sop. Keep a piece of cuttlebone in the cage, and add a pinch of grit (not sand) to the daily supply of seed mixture. Give one dose (see other replies) of Dinneford's Magnesia, and then others at weekly intervals for a couple of months, giving Chemical Food or Byno-phosphates pretty freely. Get our Nutshell, the "Grey Parrot"—you need it—2½d., post free from our manager.

MANNIKINS (Black-headed Nun).—(1) Certainly there is hope of curing the bird, and much satisfaction in relieving its distress. Before using the eye solution, well bathe and cleanse the eye with warm water that has been well clouded with milk, then dab off gently with a soft cloth superfluous moisture and treat with the eye solution. The bird must be kept warm and strictly out of draught, but do not on any account return it to the stock cage till the eye trouble disappears. (2) Yes, put the mealworms into a utensil with a little bran at the bottom. Mealworms are usually administered to such cage birds as a treat, and the birds soon become ready to come and take them from the fingers and then retire to some corner, or favourite perch to consume them, but some Waxbills are too retiring to do this, and for them adopt a small glass vessel (very smooth internally), about one inch deep, with about a quarter-inch of bran at the bottom. This will usually keep them still, but a mealworm for each, put in twice a day, should have no chance of escape.

TAME BIRDS (K. Kelly).—The symptoms you describe are rather those of internal trouble than bronchial. Some Foreign species, more especially some Grassfinches and Mannikins, are more or less lethargic under the conditions of cage life, and the cage should be sufficiently roomy to place a wiggy branch at each end, with sufficient distance between to force wing exercise in getting from one to the other. Their diet should consist of millet, white and spray millet, green food, grit (not sand), cuttlebone, and water for drinking and bathing. Green food (preferably weeds) is essential, and if not much is eaten, if it is supplied freely gathered, they get minute insect life, essences, etc., from it, which mean much to their general well being. A small turf, such as supplied to caged larks, is a very happy arrangement for caged Finches also. As regards your ailing birds, keep the bowels open—not watery loose by occasional doses of Dinneford's Magnesia (one teaspoonful in two tablespoonfuls of water); alternating these with half the quantity of Byno-phosphates in half the quantity of water. Tame birds should, of course, be better and worth more than those just landed—they have been in England longer, and should be over importation prostration, and, having lost their fear of man to a great extent, are likely to benefit to the full from wholesome food and treatment. The opposite is responsible for many losses with newly-imported birds. Some few Budgies talk; there is no royal road—kindness and patience and a tame bird. I believe directions are given in "Budgerigars and Cockatoels," 6½d. post free from our manager.

ROSEATE COCKATOO (Roseate).—(1) The legs and feet may appear rough, but unless they are also hard and horny it is not an aged bird. (2) Twenty years old is not an aged bird. (3) Seed mixture, ripe fruit, nuts, plain biscuit, stale crusts, green food, grit and cuttlebone, and of course water. (4) Yes, once a week sufficient in winter, daily in hot weather, and two or three times weekly at other periods, using "common-sense" discretion. (5) Put a few chilies in the seed mixture to check sneezing, if the nostrils are wet and running, spray or bathe with dilute glyco-thymoline till relief is given, and keep the bowels moving freely, not loose, with an occasional dose of Dinneford's Magnesia—one teaspoonful in the daily supply of drinking water. Tone up afterwards by a course of Byno-phosphates. (6) Touch any bleeding sores with Friar's Balsam, and very lightly anoint afterwards with a little healing ointment. (7) Yes, by avoiding all bustling movements in its vicinity, general gentleness, kindness, adopting any method that its demeanour suggests to win its confidence; but your methods at first should be still and quiet. Re Zebra Finches, leave nesting to take care of itself; results will follow, but do not expect them to act with the same precision as Canaries; when nest is complete, that is a domed structure, restrict the supply of building material. Zebra Finches and Silverbills (one pair of each) should agree in the cage you name.

BRITISH BIRDS, MULES AND HYBRIDS.

Answered by G. E. WESTON.

A WINDOW AVIARY (Mr. S.).—The place you describe is very small, and will not comfortably hold more than eight or nine birds, and these should all be cocks. A nice collection, which contains some fine songsters, would be: Goldfinch, Linnet, Siskin, Bullfinch, Saffron Finch, Green Singing Finch, Grey ditto, and Java Sparrow. Don't trust Lovebirds (Budgerigars) in the place. It is against the rules to recommend any particular advertiser; consult the advertisement columns.

CHEVERAL OR PEATHROAT (Whittenite).—Neither a Cheveral nor a Peathroat Goldfinch is eligible to compete in an ordinary Goldfinch class. One sometimes reads of a mismarked bird of this kind being awarded a prize; but it is always at a small show, and never under a specialist judge of British birds. If you exhibited such a Goldie at a big show (say the Palace or Horticultural Hall) it would get marked "wrong class," or be left unnoticed. It is in reality a rare-feathered (pied) bird.

SIBERIAN (J. Taylor).—I have never been able to trace any difference between Greenfinches and Linnets labelled "Siberian" and those which were being sold as British.

A GREENIE-BULLIE HYBRID (J.M.M.).—If you mean to convey by "buff" that the head and neck of the Hybrid are the colour of a clear buff Canary, then it is evidently a "sport" (a sort of rare-feathered bird), and would be of no use for exhibition purposes. Your letter does not leave me clear as to your meaning, and if I have not grasped this, perhaps you will kindly write again and explain. I hope you will have luck with the other bird.

ABOUT A LINNET (Yorkshire).—(1) The seed mixture seems to be an excellent one, taken all round. (2) It is a pity you bought a bird which is so wild and nervous in disposition, as such are always very difficult to steady, often remaining wild until after they have moulted in captivity; further, they take a long time before singing at all freely. If possible, keep the cage in a room wherein people are constantly moving about, and bang it about breast high, when the Linnet may possibly get over its nervousness, or, at least, get very much steadier.

A GERMAN NAME (Warbler).—My own impression is that the German word "Graemucke" is just the equivalent of our own word "Warbler"; for instance, Gartengrasmucke is the Garden Warbler, Monchgraemucke the Blackcap Warbler. However, I have no means of making certain of this at the time of penning this reply.

HEN MULES AS FEEDERS (W. G. Smithson).—My own experience has been that hen Mules sit well and are very reliable feeders. I know that others have had similar experiences with them, and have read of several cases in CAGE BIRDS. Anyway, seeing that you have had such atrocious luck (which I very much regret) you cannot very well lose by giving a trial to the hen Mules you possess. I ran a cock Mule with mine (partly for the sake of experiment), and they built and laid just the same as hen Canaries.

CONCERNING A BULLFINCH (Sirge).—I certainly do not recommend you to pull out flight feathers; you might break the wing in doing so, and, anyway, the process would not help to tame the bird. I think you have done very well indeed, seeing that he is already taking seeds from your finger. Can't you induce him to hop on the fingers of one hand and take seeds from the other hand? I have not found it difficult once a Bullfinch's confidence is gained; or entice him into the opening of the cage door, when it is but a step, so to speak, to getting him on your hand outside. You should not catch him in your hands (unless there is cause) as one is apt to scare birds through doing so. I have no doubt that the moult he is now undergoing will also assist as a steadying agent.

AN INDOOR AVIARY (Memo).—I should think 10 birds would be quite comfortable in the place you describe. I can recommend the following pairs, Goldfinch, Linnet, Siskin and Bullfinch, with the pair of Canaries.

POST MORTEMS.

Mr. G. Yates, M.R.C.V.S., 1, College Road, Harrow, Middlesex, will examine and report upon dead cage birds for a fee of 1s. 6d. each bird; for reply direct, 2s. 6d.; analysis, 21s. Subjects for post mortem examination must be sent packed in a box direct to Mr. Yates, with the fee, this and any accompanying letter being kept from contact with the dead bird. Send by letter-post; it is cheaper and quicker than parcel post. Any bodies sent to the office of this paper will be thrown away, and if a fee is enclosed the loss will be the sender's.

J. Gilbertson.—There was no evidence whatever of poison. Death occurred from pneumonia induced by cold.

M. E. B.—Acute inflammation of the bowels, the pain it suffered, was due to this. These acute cases are very rapid in their course, and invariably fatal.

Tom Turner.—Fatty degeneration of the liver. There is evidently something very wrong with your feeding. You have omitted to give details concerning this. Get an entirely fresh supply and administer three times weekly some glauber salts in the drinking water.

W. Hunter.—Death from absorption of ptomaine poisons generated in the intestines. The young birds would be more readily susceptible. Give only a minimum amount of egg food for a time, and try equal parts of bismuth and charcoal dusted over bread sop occasionally to ailing birds.

Thos. Charleton.—The remarks to W. Hunter apply exactly to your case. The foul marked bird was impossible of examination; the clear one showed marked inflammation of the bowels, whilst the spleen was abnormally large.

Rev. A. R. Runnels Moss.—Death resulted from fits. The surface of the brain was hyperæmic, and there was present a clot of blood causing pressure.

F. Ridler.—Hepatitis, or inflammation of the liver. This organ was much enlarged and contained a large amount of blood, far in excess of its normal capacity. Too stimulating a diet, colour-feeding, etc., are often responsible for these changes.

Moulting and Exhibiting the Border Fancy Canary.

A lecture by Mr. J. JOHNSTONE, of Wallsend, given before the members of the Northern Border and Scotch Fancy C.C.

Mr. Chairman and Fellow Fanciers,—To begin with I will have to crave your indulgence, and hope you will pardon any shortcomings. This being my maiden attempt at lecturing, I have no doubt you will understand my position. Now that the breeding season is over your attention will be centred on the moult and the show season which is close at hand, so I think I could not do better than confine my remarks to the moulting and preparing of our Wee Gems for exhibiting and give my ideas as to what constitutes a show specimen.

I am sure you are all aware of the fact that the moult is a very critical time in a bird's existence, so much so that should there be any weak spots in any of your stock it is sure to give you an anxious time, and it behoves us one and all to look well after the health of our birds, and have them fit for the trying ideal of the moult, as their whole career depends on it, either in the breeding cage or on the show bench. It matters not how carefully your birds have been bred, should they have a slow dragging moult your chances of winning that coveted ticket are very remote indeed. So you will understand quite clearly that should you intend going in for exhibiting now is your time to start to prepare your birds, not a week or two previous to the show you intend exhibiting at.

Differences of Opinion.

There are many minds as to the best way to moult a bird, and as to what is best to help them; some put their faith on saffron, others cochineal, and so on, but if you would be advised by me the less you dose your birds the better. I have practised all sorts of ways and means with mine, and have finally come to the conclusion that the best way is to keep the birds' quarters strictly clean, give them plenty of good wholesome food, and plenty of the bath. There need be then no fear, if healthy, as to their getting well over the moult. After the breeding is over, if my lot are all right, I turn them all into large flights, and let them remain there until they are about half through with their moult, when I cage them off, but before doing so I examine them, for if there should be any broken feathers or objectionable feathers to be seen that want removing, then is the time.

Should you have any that appear to have stuck in the moult just dust a little flowers of sulphur over their egg food every other day for a week, and I have no doubt that they will soon make another start, but you will have to be very careful of the cold, also the bath, when giving the sulphur; you would do better to withhold the latter and run no risks.

I strongly believe in covering birds up during the moult, in fact, right on throughout the show season. It keeps the strong light off them, keeps them clean, helps to hurry them through the moult, and minimises the plucking and fighting.

I feed during the moult with best Spanish canary seed with a sprinkle of German rape in the hoppers. Twice a week I give egg food, to each egg and bread I mix two teaspoonfuls of fresh linseed meal, twice each week I grate a carrot, and make it into a crumbly consistency with stale bread, and give it them, and another day I give them a mixture of equal parts linseed, inga, gold of pleasure, and maw seed to the amount of a teaspoonful for each bird. These seeds are very valuable during the moult, for the oil they contain greatly helps to put the bloom on the new feathers. For green food I give as much shepherds purse as I can get, and a few plantain stalks (rat tails). In the drinking water twice a week I put a half-teaspoonful of syrup of phosphates; this is a grand tonic, and helps to tighten the feather, and to my mind it is to be preferred to things like sulphate of iron.

After the Moult.

When you have got your birds nicely through the moult, cage off as many of the young birds as you can in show cages (young birds) so as to get them used to the all wire cage, as I take it for granted that most of you, like myself, prefer the box cage for stock purposes. When you have any friend come in to see your stock don't forget to let him handle them, it goes a long way in teaching young birds what is expected of them, and gets them used to strangers handling their cages. Providing you have kept your cages clean, and covered up to keep the dust from the birds plumage, you will be able to exhibit at one or two of the early shows without having to wash them, even if they are clear variety. Greens and Cinnamons, if given the bath freely, will go through a season without hand washing. In fact, the longer the tubbing is postponed the better (that is providing the birds are clean) for there is nothing takes the lustre out of a bird's feather more completely than the hand washing. The dry dull appearance most of the birds have near the end of the show season causes the reporters to use in their criticism the term "being washed out." I won't say anything here to-night as regards the washing operations, as I believe our worthy secretary has an exhibition booked for a future date when I have no doubt that you will learn a wrinkle or two. In the preparing of birds for the show bench a lot of fanciers, both young and old, spoil their birds by cramming egg food and such like into them. It is a mistake; what is wanted is birds in good, hard, firm condition, and how can you get that by feeding on soft food? My birds very rarely ever see egg food after they have got over the moult until the breeding season comes round.

Has Anyone Caught a Stray Grey Parrot?

Sir,—I have just lost a Grey Parrot through its escaping from its cage, and as it might lead to its being recovered I should be much obliged if you would mention it in the next issue of CAGE BIRDS.

Thanking you in anticipation.

An Idea to Improve Metal Seed Hoppers.

Sir,—I use glass fronted metal seed hoppers, but very often find that the birds shuffle the seeds into the corners where they are unable to reach them. To prevent this I cut a piece of perforated zinc to the depth of hopper, less thickness of glass. I bend it into a half circle, and drop it into hopper. This always keeps the seeds to centre of hopper, and acts as a sieve. By pressing the wire stop for glass through one of the holes the zinc cannot move.

Proposed Society for Farnworth and District.

Sir,—Kindly permit me space in your correspondence columns to announce that we propose forming a cage bird society for Farnworth and district, as a few fanciers here think it would be beneficial to our hobby. I should esteem it a favour if all fanciers in the above-named district would forward me their addresses so that I could send them a notice of the first meeting for the formation of such a society.

Bending Cage Wire.

Sir,—Many thanks to Mr. Frank Hasleden and Mr. J. Barber for the information how to make bends in wire. I have spent many hours, and made very poor jobs, but with their information I will do much better. I have tried to buy a book on wire-working, but all booksellers tell me there is not one published. If any of your readers know of one on wire working it would be a boon to myself and perhaps to other CAGE BIRDS readers. I also wish to tender my sincerest thanks to CAGE BIRDS for the able articles which are entertaining for the novice and expert alike. I am a cripple, and find cage making pleasant work. The little I make out of it allows me to buy more pets. Again thanking both gentlemen who replied.

Affairs of the Y.C. and C.B.S. of Ireland.

Sir,—In reply to Mr. Lattimore's statement that since my election on the committee I only attended one meeting. I have always assumed that the secretary should make himself acquainted with the minutes, when he would find that a mistake. The resolution he refers to may have been made and carried on the date he mentions, but it must be within his recollection that I attended on a subsequent date and proposed that Mr. Fry should be approached. I may assure the secretary that my signature is genuine, and that I represent no clique or cloak. May I ask the secretary why he refrained from answering "Provincial's" letter which would have obviated the necessity of "Committee Man" rushing into print? As long as I have been a member I have always had the affairs of the society at heart, but I did not find it encouraging to attend the meetings when I found a high official aggressive and discourteous.

PETER GILLEN.

Wake Up, Traders!

Sir,—My varied experiences in dealing with advertisers in CAGE BIRDS leads me to propound the query—Why advertise? A fortnight ago I wrote to eight persons advertising themselves in your columns as catchers with birds to sell, telling them what birds I needed, and asking them to let me know when they had good specimens for which I was prepared either to pay cash or exchange for Canaries. Not ONE of the eight has replied to my letters in any shape or form. On the same date I sent a postal order for birds to another advertiser, and after waiting a week and receiving neither birds, nor any acknowledgment of my order, I wrote again, receiving a rather vague reply about birds being soft, etc. I am still waiting for them. A month ago on returning from my holidays I found myself without colour food. I wrote one of your best known advertisers—a dealer, one who makes his living out of the hobby, and received a supply BY RAIL a week after. You can understand what the delay might mean to some fancier with some good birds moulting. These are recent experiences, though I could quote many others occurring during the past few years; and I am not alone in this respect. I do not doubt for one moment the honesty or the good intentions of any of the persons concerned, but what a lack of business capacity, and common courtesy it displays!

And Sir, it is a question in which you are also directly interested. If we cannot obtain through the advertisements what we desire without unnecessary trouble and delay, the inevitable result is disgust and apathy, a decline of interest, with a corresponding loss to the Fancy and the Fancy Press. By the insertion of this complaint the attention of advertisers may be drawn to what is, I can assure you, a real grievance.

South African Appreciation of a Tyneside Fancier.

Sir,—I saw in your popular paper, CAGE BIRDS, of July 27th, a photo of the committee of the South African Cage Bird Club, and a letter in which the writer referred to Mr. J. R. Cox as a judge, and said that if fanciers on this side of the Equator would be able to retain him for a few more years we would have some good birds, and a strong C.B. club. Well, Mr. Editor, I sincerely regret to have to inform you that this valued official has left us, and is at the time this will appear at his home in Byker, near Newcastle-on-Tyne. He should be a valuable addition to your English judges, and we envy you, more especially because we need him so very badly. I endorse Mr. Van Niekerk's remarks as to his capabilities, and take this opportunity of wishing Mr. Cox a jolly good time. He is happy amongst the birds, so he no doubt will be in raptures as he will arrive about the time when the early moulted ones are in the pink of condition, and the shows are beginning for the season. Although I have an idea that if presented with a suitable situation he will stay with you for a while, my firm conviction is that he will again return to our shores, as South Africa has a fascination which is hard to resist. We shall be glad to welcome him back.

How Can We Make Our Shows Pay?

An Old Hand Answers His Own Question.

Sir,—The time has come when every secretary and committee-man is asking himself the above question, and if he means to carry out his trust he will not rest until he has thought of some way which will make the difference between the balance on the right or wrong side. I know the unseen will happen, but how often we blame something we had not thought of for that which we did with eyes wide open. With a view therefore of reminding some of those who are at present in "harness" rather than laying claim to anything new, I venture to give some of the5 reasons why shows do not pay their way. No. 1. Extended classification. How often it has been brought home to us that when we gave say four classes for Yorkshires or four for Norwich, those classes were well filled? When we gave more, down we went bump. We said, "we clashed with so and so"; after all, whether we did or did not, the reason really was too many classes. Four classes are enough for ordinary shows, viz., yellows, buffs, hens, and unflighted. Of course if our club has the patronage of any of the specialist clubs we must give the required classes, but this patronage is a doubtful asset. No. 2, novice classes. The novice should have the same classification as the champion, and he will often be found the more profitable of the two. It is not fair to give him a couple of classes, and then blame him for not filling them. It costs as much for carriage for two exhibits as it does four, and the novice expects as good a run for his money as the champion. No. 3, Radius, County, or Limit shows are no good whatever. It is not fair to the local fancier to keep the best away, and the society cannot afford to be without the entries from a man just over the border. The cups and a full share of the specials can always be reserved for the members, the non-member does not expect to share equally; he knows who does the work. No. 4, Entry Fee. 1s. 6d. is ample, often too much. 2s. is absurd. Why not make the novice's 1s. 3d., and reduce the prize money one-sixth? Remember, the average fancier is a working man, and the novice often has the shallowest pocket. No. 5, Too Heavy Printer's Bill. Remember there is nothing received for the schedule, and the catalogue is nearly always a loss. This must be cut down to the absolute rock bottom. No. 6. Too Little Advertising. The most successful business firms are those who advertise most. CAGE BIRDS forms the best medium for this branch of the work, and if the classification be advertised therein it will save at least two-thirds of the cost of schedules, etc., to say nothing of bringing the show more prominently before the eye to the exhibitor, nor to mention the saving of wrappers, of postages, and of hard work for the secretary. The entry form can be cut out of the paper or a footnote can be added, "Entry forms and lists of specials on application." No. 7, too little being done for the non-fancier. You must encourage him to attend. You want him to be interested in your hobby, to join your society, or at any rate you want his gate-money. Give him a little concert in a side room or let his children in for a penny during the afternoon. This reduction will not cost you anything, and every penny is welcome. No. 8, one for the members to think about. You who don't do a stroke for your society; who take all you can get and yet will not sell a ticket for your club. You are not helping the fancy. Pull yourselves together. If you won't help the club for its own sake, think of yourself. The worst of reasons? Admitted. But even for this your secretary would be thankful. He does not ask you for much, but if every member sold, say, four tickets, we should hear of few societies being unable to make the show pay.

EX-SHOW MANAGER.

Harrogate Linnet Fanciers' Association.

Sir,—The President of the above has kindly given a challenge cup to be competed for by the members, to be won three times, not necessarily in succession. The member scoring most points in one season to count as one win. The final contest for 1912 was held last month, when Mr. W. Slinger had most points to his credit, and becomes the holder for the first year. Mr. A. Deitz was the runner-up. The season has been a most enjoyable and successful one, ending with each member declining his intention of having his name on that Cup next year. The headquarters are held at the Nelson Inn, Skipton Road, where fanciers receive a warm welcome by the members, who all subscribe to and are deeply interested in CAGE BIRDS and its contents. E. BAUL, Secretary.

Cage Fronts that are Easy to Remove.

Sir,—I have been much amused at the many ideas and suggestions for cage fronts which were easy to remove and replace. What is the matter with those now used by almost every fancier? Surely nothing can be simpler or quicker to manipulate than those punched-bar fronts sold in the ordinary way of trade. By the time anyone can count six I can take any of my cage fronts out and replace it, so I am quite content with the old-fashioned type until, say, some can be produced to work automatically by just pressing a button!

W. HAINSWORTH.

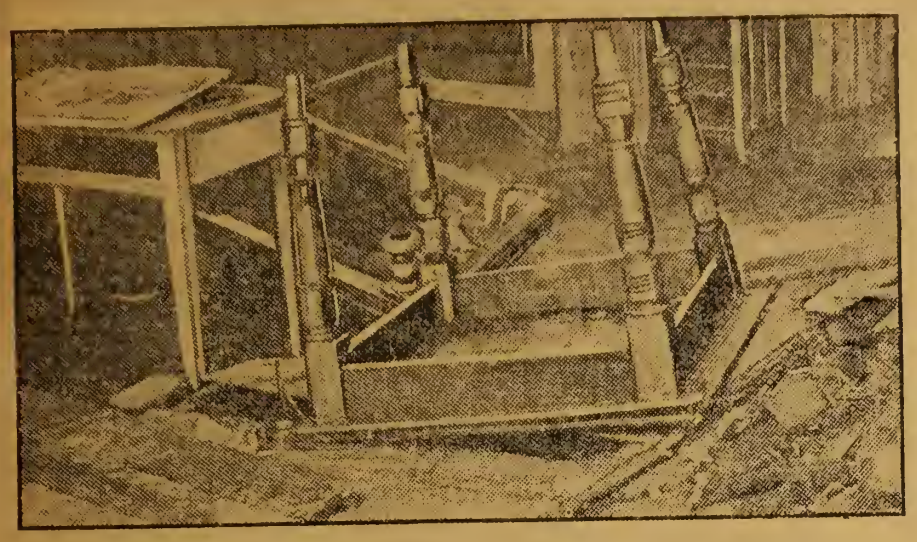
Are Canaries Too Old at Three?

Sir,—Would any of your readers kindly tell me through the correspondence column of CAGE BIRDS at what age they consider Canaries would be too old to breed. I myself have a cock Canary three years old, and have paired him up with a last year's hen, and he has failed to fill the eggs, also with a two years' old hen. Fanciers about here say they are too old to breed, and I should be grateful to have other opinions about it. Also, should the feathers around vent of both birds be clipped? Perhaps some of the numerous readers of our most valuable paper, CAGE BIRDS, would be willing to give us their views on the matter, as we have a big discussion here at times on this question.

A FANCIER SENGHEYDD.

Appreciation of the Bradford National Charity Show.

Sir,—I read with much pleasure and interest Mr. Fred Archer's appeal to Southern Exhibitors to support the above show, Dec. 6, 7, and 9. May I be permitted through the columns of our popular paper CAGE BIRDS, to voice my warm appreciation and gratitude of the great care and attention given my exhibits at Bradford; my birds arrived home in the pink of condition, and did credit to whoever packed them for the return journey. I received my prize money within three days of the close of the show, and speaking personally, I feel grateful to Mr. Archer for extending this hearty invitation to us Southerners, particularly those in London. If one will only consider the liberal way the provincial exhibitors support our London shows, I think it the least London exhibitors should do, is to return the compliment. In the past I am sorry to say this has not been the case, but I sincerely hope it will be rectified where Bradford is concerned. I sincerely trust Mr. Archer's appeal will not pass unnoticed; he has promised exhibitors all anyone possibly can for the welfare of their exhibits, and has worked very hard indeed in the interests of charity. I heartily support Mr. Archer's appeal, and beg every exhibitor down south to do his best to send a few birds to Bradford.



A. J. A. MARLEY.

Rare Hybrids and Their Breeding.

A Redpoll-Bullfinch doing well at Accrington.

Sir,—In CAGE BIRDS of August 31st a correspondent from Scotland states that a hybrid has been secured from the Siskin-Bullfinch. As a hybrid breeder with a little experience who has had the bitter cup of disappointment for a few years, not rearing a hybrid to maturity since 1908 up to this season, yet I have shown dogged determination to succeed, I feel glad that at a cottage home in Edinburgh has been reared so rare a cross. I feel sorry, however, that the statement regarding this hybrid should have been put over a nom de plume, as a great majority of fanciers will not believe a message of importance unless it bears the proper signature as a guarantee. I suggest that Mr. "Happy Result" signs his proper name, and then we can say, "Well done, land of Bobby Burns." Good fortune always seem to smile upon Scotland. My memory brings back that good Goldie-Bullie hybrid from Siberian parents bred by Mr. McLennan, which I hope to see in this district; also other notable crosses, including light and dark Mules. Now comes another sensation. I do hope it is moulted and put on the bench this season. Their is no doubt Scotland leads the way in Hybrid and mule breeding. Mr. "Happy Result" in his message states that large cages are not necessary. My opinion is that they are. I believe in large flights about four feet long where the birds can use their wings and get into that lovely condition and bloom which is so essential if you want fertile eggs. He also complains about the judges and their verdict on rare Hybrids. I do not blame the judge altogether. I attach most of the blame to the exhibitor. I have not yet heard or read of a genuine rare Hybrid which has not been acknowledged by a judge. Yes, the exhibitor who places a rare Hybrid under a judge who is a practical Canary fancier and very seldom keeps British birds or breeds Mules cannot expect him to look for the blending of colours and markings, the formation of the Bullfinch beak, or other features. I say put a rare Hybrid under specialist judges (there are some in Edinburgh, who know what they are composed of), and I do not think they can pass it, at least without making a statement that the bird is a Hybrid of certain parents. I may say that it has always been my desire and ambition to rear that rare hybrid the Redpoll-Bullfinch. I have had fertile eggs and young hatch out, but have never had the good fortune to rear one until this season. When going round the shows I saw the specimen of Mr. C. J. Ward's at Burnley (about four years ago), also Messrs. Martin and Archer's at Blackburn, which afterwards carried off Palace honours for season 1910 and 1911, and I felt I must persevere till I succeeded. I am pleased to say I secured one at the latter end of the season; the bird is five weeks old, and doing very well, and gives me the impression of being a cock bird. When my Hybrid was about a fortnight old my hen wanted to nest again, and I found a few small feathers which she had plucked from the youngster from off the top of the head; the feathers have now grown again, and they show a reddish tint which I think is the hall mark for a cock bird. However, I hope so, and I am living in hopes of putting on the show bench the beautiful Redpoll-Bullfinch.

HERBERT WALSH.

This photograph conveys some slight idea of the ruin worked by the recent floods, the soaked furniture being littered all over the place and the flooring literally torn up and washed away.

The Further Experiences of a Lady Enthusiast.

Some Mistakes to be Avoided Next Season.

Sir,—I did not succeed in rearing the one Hybrid out of the last set of eggs from the Greenfinch-Bullfinch. She has since then had four eggs clear, and she has now two more in the same nest, which she has relined each time. Meanwhile the Greenfinch has driven his old love, the Yorkshire hen, to nest with three eggs. I have not much hope of these last eggs, as the Greenfinch, though guarding the Bullie well, has not been so profuse in his love-making, and looks rather worn out; but if there should prove a good egg I shall take Mr. Weston's kind advice and hand-rear the young one almost from the first. I have my eye on some promising nettles for a supply of green fly. This will make her seventh nest this season with six good eggs. I am lucky as to green food, as the hop fields around here afford some happy hunting grounds for chickweed, groundsel, shepherd's purse, and plantain. My Canary hens are also still at nest, owing, I suppose, to the difficulty of keeping the egg-food from them, and the Greenfinch hen has two healthy young ones a few days old; this is her fourth nest. I suppose these captive-bred birds should be promising stock to try Hybrid breeding with next season. I have done lots of foolish things this time, that I shall be able to guard against next season. For instance, when the Greenfinch hen had her third nest of young, I turned into the room three young Greenfinches, brought me from a nest of birds just ready to fly, and they usurped the nest; the hen fed the aliens instead of her own young. Then three Canary hens must choose the seed-box to build in (a long narrow box, which had been used for boot-laces). They built side by side, and they quarrelled fearfully, as to whom the nests belonged. They only used two, and laid fifteen eggs between them. I took the empty nest away, and the odd hen built again in the little tree which is in the room. The eggs in the two nests were all full, but what with the hens' quarrelling and the cock bird turning them off to let the little ones from the last nest on (which I suppose I took away too soon) and making them feed them, in the end only four hatched out alive, one of which died. Two were hatched in each nest, so I put the odd one in with the two others and took the empty nest away. Then the quarrelling began worse than ever. I waited till the young were five days old, when at night I moved them, with the hen that happened to be on them, into a cage, and in the morning found she had deserted them. I could see no movement, and they were stone cold, so I was going to throw them away when I felt just a little movement, and as the eggs under the third hen were clear, I just took these away, and put the little stone cold chicks in her nest. Imagine her surprise when she came back and saw them! However, on she dropped, and called her mate (a little brown Linnet Mule) and soon the pair were feeding them. Now she has got to feed, besides these, a young brown Linnet Mule, who has found its way into the nest. It can fly well, but as often as I turn it out, back it goes, and its own mother stands and scolds at me, so I am afraid the smallest one of those young Canaries does not stand much chance; the other two are feathering nicely. The three that were hatched out on the kitchen shelf, as I told you in my last, are now in a cage, and the hen and the mules are feeding them through the bars. They are nice healthy little Canaries. It will be the trying month for my Cuckoos now, especially the two surviving young ones, but they are well up to the present.

In the Courts.

Summonses under the Wild Birds' Protection Act were heard at the Rushall, Staffs, Police Court on Sept. 2, the defendants being William Smith, William Sylvester, Charles Moffatt, and Ernest Walker. A police-constable stated that on August 25 he saw the four defendants with nets and decoy birds on some waste land at Daw End, Rushall. When caught they made the remark that they did not know they were doing any harm. Moffatt had twelve birds in his possession, and Sylvester two. Several of the birds had evidently been caught with bird-lime, for they could not fly, and had to be destroyed. Smith, who was the only one to give his correct name, was allowed to go, and the other three were ordered to pay the costs.

Sociable Birds.

In a bush bordering a South-country garden the nest of a Thrush, a Hedge Sparrow, and a Greenbird were found. All the birds were sitting, and rearing young ones at the same time. Unfortunately, a neighbour's cat spoilt this happy gathering.

Golden Oriole in the West.

That handsome bird the Golden Oriole has again reared a brood in a quiet spot in Cornwall. During the nesting time the birds were exceedingly shy and wary, and the female was more frequently seen than the male, although, in consequence of her more quiet colouring, she is not so quickly detected. This fact may be the cause of her doing most of the foraging.

How to Cater for Small Softbills.

By R. C. TOUT (Portsmouth).

It is not advisable to keep your birds entirely to this rich mixture, as it is of too nourishing a nature to be given to the birds unadulterated, so to speak. You can take sufficient for a daily portion and "adulterate" this by about a quarter the bulk of finely grated raw carrot or boiled potato. Green food should also be given as long as it can be obtained, for preference lettuce and dandelion. The tender leaves of these can be finely chopped and mixed with the food. As this mixture requires damping before being given to the birds, it is advisable to mix just sufficient for one meal, otherwise you will have the food turning sour, when you will lose the bird. I have in my cages and aviary about a dozen birds which I have kept for a period ranging from one to four years on this diet, and they are now in perfect condition, fit to be placed upon the show-bench at any moment.

The Importance of the Cage.

The food is not the only essential point to be considered, for unless you keep your birds and their cages thoroughly clean you will soon have them going out of condition, and a removable front fitted to the cage, and perches which may easily be taken out are a great convenience. For my cage bottoms I prefer moss, gathered, if possible, with a little of the mould in which it has been growing. I cut this about the same size as the draw board. I also like a sheet of blotting paper placed under the moss, so as to soak up any moisture which may get through. This will keep the cage free from smell in warm weather.

Some fanciers object that Softbills are dirty birds, and that is so when they have too small a cage. A bird kept in a cage of the dimensions I have previously given would require cleaning out about twice a week; the perches should be washed thoroughly every time the cage is cleaned, as this helps to keep the bird from getting sore feet.

Sore feet are one of our great troubles with freshly caught birds, as the perches are so different from the limbs of the trees. What I really mean is that the perches in the cage are rigid, whereas the boughs of the tree are of a springy nature, thus relieving the weight of the bird when he flies from bough to bough.

The Ever Necessary Bath.

A bath is very necessary, and should be given freely. Some birds will bathe every day, and nothing is a better conditioner for them. The bath should be placed in the cage every morning, and taken out again in the early evening, so as to prevent the bird from bathing late when it has no chance of drying itself; a bird remaining wet through the night would soon take cold, and probably die.

I do not think that is possible for me to give you any more information in regard to the feeding and management, as I have told you absolutely the exact method I adopt for my own birds. I have brought with me for your inspection a bird which I have had in my possession for the past four years, and which has been fed on exactly the same diet mentioned, and there is no reason why any fancier, if he would only follow my instructions, should not keep a bird in the same condition. This Blackcap Warbler, you will see, has got its tail damaged a little, but this was done through quarrelling with other birds in an aviary. Had the bird been kept in this cage, its tail would have been perfect.

Four Charming Softbills.

I will give you a little information in regard to the habits and feeding of a few of our best known Softbills which, I consider, most adaptable for a beginner. First and most prominent of all is the Nightingale.

The Nightingale is one of our migratory birds, arriving on our shores about the middle of April, and leaving us again in August and September. These birds are to be met with in our woods, coppices, plantations, shrubberies, and all timbered land where trees rise amongst dense and tangled undergrowth. Open land is not suitable, as they are of a somewhat timid and skulking nature. When you are out looking for these birds, it is no unusual thing to see this russet-coloured songster dart out from the edge of the covert, and, after an irregular flight of a few yards, disappear again amidst the thick foliage to pour forth the melodious song which makes him so famous, and with which he charms the country side by night and by day. In its habits the Nightingale greatly resembles the Robin, although it has none of the impudent confidence of that bird.

The nest of the Nightingale is generally found on or near the ground at the foot of an oak, pollard, or bramble bush, concealed by ferns, grasses or other short undergrowth. It is composed of dry grass, leaves, moss, and fibrous roots, loosely put together, and lined inside with fine grass and horse hair. The eggs number from four to six, and are of a brownish olive colour. The young are hatched at the beginning of June, after which the Nightingale gradually loses his song.

This bird can easily be kept in captivity, and you can obtain one which has been thoroughly meated off, from a good reliable man, for about 10s. to 15s. When you have obtained your bird, the more you can vary its food the better. Take a tablespoonful of the stock mixture and one quarter bulk of boiled potato, mix well together, and if this should not be moist enough, damp it just sufficiently to make it crumbly moist. I only feed once a day with stock mixture, but give live food three times.

Besides the stock food, give about a dozen gentles in the morning, at noon half-a-dozen gentles and half-a-dozen mealworms, and then no more until the bird is on the perch for the night; then you can give half-a-dozen gentles and three or four mealworms. The mealworms may be cut in halves to prevent them from crawling out of the pot in the night.

The next day use in the stock mixture, instead of potato, one-sixth of its bulk of cream cheese, and quarter bulk finely minced lettuce, and for live food—morning, half-a-dozen caterpillars; mid-day, a good pinch of live ants' eggs, and half-a-dozen gentles; at night, two or three beetles cut into quarters, with three or four mealworms cut in halves. The next day you can give grated raw carrot and finely-minced dandelion with the stock food, and vary the live food as much as possible, according to what is in season. I will send you round a sample of the stock food in the dry state, and also some that has been damped and fit for immediate use. This is mixed with cream cheese and lettuce. I should like you to handle the food so that you can feel how much to damp it.

As a show bird the Nightingale is much sought after, and a bird of good size and rich colour, with a large bold eye is necessary. One other great point is that you want your bird to have plenty of carriage, and to carry his wings below the tail, which gives him a very striking attitude. The show cage should be 16 inches long, 13 inches high, and 7 inches deep; the colour most suitable for background is dark green.

The Handsome Redstart.

The Redstart is another of our migratory birds, arriving here about the same time as the Nightingale. This is about the handsomest bird we have. The male bird in breeding plumage is very attractive, and its actions resemble those of the Robin. The upper surface is slaty grey with rufous-brown tips to the feather; the back of the head and an irregular line over the eye, white; rump and upper tail coverts chestnut brown; wing smoky brown; base of forehead, face, and ear coverts, chin, and throat black; breast, chestnut red. The female is altogether duller in colour, and without the bright hues on the head.

The Shows.

PENMACHNO.

Eighteenth annual show held Sept. 7. The cage birds were nicely staged on the Town Hall platform. Quality was good throughout, and entries very satisfactory. The stewards worked well considering the limited space that was given on account of the Horticultural Section being held in the same room. Messrs. R. W. Evans, D. Thomas, and Richards shared well in the work. Sec. T. R. Jones is a worthy official. Mr. R. Edwards (Llanrwst) made the awards, and gave general satisfaction.

The Critique.

YORKS (8): 1, R. Williams, cl. yell., good length and position, leggy, nice wings and tail, rich col.; shade open in feather; 2, res, J. O. Jones, field-mounted Linnet, good size and colour, requires steadying.

BRASTED.

Early September is not a good time for a cage bird show, therefore it was not surprising that the entry at this fixture, which was held in Combe Bank Park, September 4, was not a large one. Several nice exhibits were staged, however, and much interest was displayed by visitors. The arrangements for the show were carried out in splendid style by the following committee, all of whom are most earnest and enthusiastic fanciers. Messrs. M. Dalton, Cowap (chairman), F. Grinstead (treasurer), R. Dartnell, G. Grinstead, W. Jenner, B. Knight, F. A. King, J. F. M. Robinson, H. Smith, S. Strickland, W. E. Salmon, W. E. Stevens, sen., E. H. Threll, J. R. Wright, W. Wigg, C. Whitehead, and C. Young. In Messrs. J. Downie and W. Emery the society has a most energetic and obliging pair of secretaries, and everything was done that could be to make the venture a success. Mr. C. A. House judged.

BRUNSWICK (Australia).

The North Suburban Canary Society.

The 17th annual show held July 18 and 19, in the Town Hall, Brunswick. The number of entries (740) this year constituted a record, and in fact was the largest show held this year in Australia. The only question that worried the energetic committee was space to stage the birds, but everything went off merrily, and everybody was delighted with the fine exhibition (a miniature Crystal Palace). In Mr. C. F. C. Rose the society has a hard-working and efficient secretary, to whom great praise is due for the success of the show. The committee are all well-known fanciers, and did splendid work. Some very high-class birds were benched, and credit is due to the exhibitors. The George Whaley cup was won by Mr. H. Hagg, who also annexed the W. H. Stevens' Crest cup. The George Ward cup for Plainheads was won by Messrs. Warner and Rove. The Cinnamon cup by Mr. H. Kilner, and Mr. W. B. Poole won the Yorkshire cup, Mr. A. G. Boardman winning two specials, one for best pair of Australian Finches, and the other for the best collection of foreign Finches. Mr. Pile, of England, judged Yorks. and A.O.V., the other judges being Crest and C.B. Mr. W. Bennetts, Norwich Mr. W. C. Thompson, Cinnamons Mr. A. Warner, Australian and Foreign Mr. G. A. Heartland.

From the catalogue sent we gather that the principal winners were as follows:—OPEN CREST: Mason, Brew. C.B.: Mason, Brew. Club Reports.

NEWCASTLE-UPON-TYNE C.B.S.

Monthly meeting held Sept. 5, Mr. T. C. Crawhall in chair. Votes of sympathy were passed to Mr. R. Tindall on the death of his brother, and to Mrs Eastop and Mrs. Waugh on the death of their husbands. Correspondence was read from Foreign B.C. and Green C.A. granting patronage, and from Mr. Steel re catering for refreshments in the hall at open show on October 18 and 19. Proposed to ask Sir Joseph Baxter Ellis, our first Lord Mayor, to open show. Mr. Wilson and Mr. Young have kindly offered to guarantee foreign bird classes. Vote of thanks was passed to these gentlemen for same. Classes for the respective judges were allotted. I wish to impress upon the members the importance of trying to get as many specials as they can, and also to try and sell the tickets for the drawing, which are now ready. I have got a good number out already. Let every member do his best for the good of the society. Don't leave it to a few. Put self aside and make our annual show a record success. Special general meeting will be held Sept. 19, at 7.30, when we must have all specials in. I have had a fair response so far, and we hope to have the schedules out in good time before the show.—J. W. Reed, sec.

GREEN CANARY ASSOCIATION.

Monthly meeting held Aug. 22, Oldham Hall, Liverpool, Mr. J. W. Metcalfe in the chair. Messrs. Malone and Taberner were elected members, and Messrs. T. Cutts and J. Smith were nominated for membership. Decided to postpone arranging the syllabus until the September meeting, at which the specials will also be allotted, hence members are earnestly requested to turn up in full force. Notices re subscriptions have been sent out, but at time of writing there are still several outstanding. Will members kindly send them in forthwith, as it is delaying the committee in arranging the specials? —Geo. Green, hon. sec.

UDDINGSTON C.B.S.

Meeting held in the Reading Rooms, Uddingston, Sept. 5. There was a fair attendance. The Secretary intimated that as all the arrangements for the open show were well in hand it would not be necessary to hold another meeting till Oct. 2. Members, please note.—James Cosgrove.

HALTWHISTLE C.B.S.

Meeting held Aug. 27. Correspondence was read from the Border Fancy C.C. and the Northern Border and S.F.C. intimating that we had received their patronage for annual show. The following classes were fixed for open show:—Borders, 12 (1 selling), Norwich 9, Yorkshires 4, Scotch Fancy 1, British and Mules 7, Foreign 1 Selling 2, Members 5. A good number of new members were enrolled, and things are looking prosperous for our annual show.—Nicholson and Tallantyre, secs.

PAISLEY, TANNAHILL C.B.S.

Monthly meeting held Mr. Lockie's, 2, St. James St., Sept. 7, Mr. Robt. Neil (president) in chair. Messrs. Hamilton and Powell gave amalgamation report, which was not satisfactory in regard to birds and cages for amalgamation show. They also intimated that a smoking concert would be held in Mr. Lockie's on September 28, with the Old Burgh and Tannahill Society. Every member is expected to support same. Tickets can be had from secretaries. —John Stewart.

BURNBANK AND HAMILTON WEST C.B.S.

Meeting held in Co-operative Hall, Sept. 7. Mr. Wm. Clark, Larkhall, gave an instructive lecture on British birds, Mule, and Hybrid breeding. After the lecture Mr. Clark answered ably the many questions put to him, and an enjoyable evening was brought to a close with a vote of thanks to the lecturer for his kindness. The members who were absent missed a treat.—John Williams, Sec. Mr. Clark's lecture will be published in due course in our columns. (Editor).

NORTHERN BORDER & S.F.C.C.

Meeting held Sept. 2, Mr. W. Smith in the chair. A committee was drawn up to select special for competition at the allotted shows. The committee selected were Messrs. Johnstone, Montgomery, Afflick, Smith, Snaith, and Potts. Mr. Johnstone (Wallsend) then gave a lecture on the Border Fancy Canary, during which he explained his method of preparing for the show bench, leaving out the washing of a bird for some future occasion. Mr. Harvey moved, and Mr. Smith seconded, a hearty vote of thanks to Mr. Johnstone for his lecture.—M. C. Potts.

COLINTON AND CURRIE PARISHES O.S.

Monthly meeting held in the Drill Hall, Jumper Green, Sept. 7, Mr. Begbie in the chair, when a start was made with the show business. It was decided to make the price of admission to the show 4d. Decided to ask Mr. Roger Geddes to present the prizes at the first annual show. The chairman appealed to the members to try all in their power to get as many specials as possible, and it was decided to allocate specials at the next meeting, Oct. 5, at 7, in the Drill Hall, Jumper Green. It was also decided to get prize cards and posters from the Leith Printing and Publishing Co.—J. Napier, sec.

SHEFFIELD O.S.

Monthly meeting at Headquarters, Rose and Crown Hotel, September 3, the chairman, Mr. T. Down, presiding. There was a good turn up of members, which was very encouraging to the officials, as the meeting was a very important one, namely, arrangements for the All-England Show, Nov. 1 and 2. All those present were very enthusiastic, and the show is practically an assured success, two or three of the members taking 100 sixpenny tickets each, and guaranteeing to sell them. Those are the sort of members the officials appreciate. Grand classification has been fixed up as follows:—Yorks. 20 classes, Nor. 12, Crests 6, Lancs. 4, Lizards 4, Sell. 3, Brit. 15, Mules and Hyb. 5, For. 6. We are catering for the exhibitors, and we hope they will bear it in mind and patronise us. We are giving 22s. per class, specials every class, and 5s. special for most points in each class. All birds will be despatched as requested. We mean to make the Sheffield O.S. Show 2nd only to the Palace, and are relying on the exhibitors to assist us.—John A. T. Woodall, Press Corres.

CHELTENHAM C.B.S.

At a meeting held on Sept. 4 the members were indebted to Mr. Geo. Stevens for another paper on the speciality Britishers. This time it was "Preparing British birds for Exhibition." Mr. Stevens handled his subject in a masterly style, and dealt with the birds practically the year through. Being a firm believer in wild food for bringing the birds into exhibition form, Mr. Stevens spoke at some length on this, describing the effect the various seeds and plants have on the birds' plumage. The following species were mentioned: Goldfinch, Bullfinch, Linnet, Twite, Redpoll, Siskin, and Greenfinch, describing these and their food very fully. Unfortunately time did not permit him to touch on any soft-billed species. A hearty vote of thanks was passed to Mr. Stevens for again going to so much trouble and giving us the benefit of his experience. In the absence of the chairman and vice-chairman, Mr. Madagan filled that position. The secretary announced that we have the patronage of the following specialist clubs: S.Y.C.C., S.N.P.C., E. and W.B.F.C., N.B.B. and M.C., and were still waiting to hear from the Crest Club.—A. S. Treasure.

GRIMSBY AND CLEETHORPES ROLLER C.S.

Monthly meeting held Aug. 21, Mr. Ives presiding before a good attendance. Many preliminary matters in connection with our coming open contest were gone into. The chairman gave us quite an agreeable surprise by announcing that to encourage local fanciers to support all shows during the coming season, he purposes giving two specials, valued 25s. and 15s., as 1st and 2nd respectively, for the local members scoring most points throughout the season. Birds may be shown in any class, and at any show having the B.R.C.C. patronage. Competitors must show at not less than four shows to qualify. Now, brother secretaries, does not this make you beam with delight? There will be some competition, I can assure you, which will, of course, swell your entries, and the best way you can thank Mr. Ives is to ask your members to support our show in force. Since our last show we have met a good many fanciers who would have liked to have given a special if only they had been asked. Needless to say, I have a note of them all, and they will not be forgotten. If anyone else feels similarly inclined, any offers of specials will be appreciated. —H. Mason.—(Kindly write on one side of the paper only.—Ed.)

BLAYDON-ON-TYNE C.B.S.

At the usual monthly meeting of the above, there was a fair turn-out of members. The Secretary announced that they had again secured the patronage of the Northern Counties Norwich Club. The annual schedule was then finally adopted, there being in the open classes 13 classes for Norwich, 4 for Crests and C.-B., 9 Yorks, 7 Borders, 2 Chrysomos, 2 Lizards, 2 Scotch Fancy, 2 Mules, 5 Brit., 2 For., and 1 Hyde's, and 25 members' classes. Geo. Mavver, Sec.

GRANTHAM C B.S.

Monthly meeting at Brewers' Arms, Sept. 2, with a fair turn-up of members. Decided to have about the same classification for open show as last year with the addition of one class for Crests, one for Crest-bred, and two classes for Lizards—clear or broken cap Gold, clear or broken cap Silver. We are hoping that the Crest and Lizard fanciers will support us, as we have arranged for fanciers that are breeders of these varieties to look after same at our show. Next meeting will be held at Brewers' Arms, Sept. 16, at 8, to allot specials, etc.—W. E. Allen, Hon. Sec.

CHESTER C.B.S.

Monthly meeting held Nag's Head Cocoa Rooms, Aug. 27th. Mr. F. C. Parker presided over a fair attendance. It was decided to hold the annual members' show on Saturday, Nov. 16, at the Assembly Rooms, Newgate Street, and that the four silver cups to be competed for and won outright at the show be awarded to Norwich, Yorkshire, A.O.V., and British birds, and novices. Mr. A. G. Davies, Manchester, appointed as judge. The classification was gone into, which brought the meeting to a close at a late hour. Those intending joining can have full particulars from Hon. Sec.—R. L. G. Simpson, Hon. Sec., 33, Clare Avenue, Hoole.

SCOTTISH BRITISH BIRD & M.C.

A meeting held in rooms, 143, High-st., Sept. 7, Mr. Livingstone in the chair, before a large turnout of members. The application of 19 shows for patronage was gone into with the following result:—Scottish National, Cowdenbeath, Broxburn, and Musselburgh, getting trophies, cups, and medals; Lochgelly, Kelty and Blairadam, Cupar, Buckhaven, cups and medals; Forfar, and Haddington, medals only; Leith, Edinburgh and Dis., and Edinburgh Norwich and Mule Club, getting the novice patronage of two medals each. Mr. Livingstone kindly promised a gold medal to be won by a member who had not already won a gold medal, for most points at the following shows:—Cowdenbeath, Musselburgh, Broxburn, and Scottish National, and the runner-up a silver medal.—John Allan, Sec.

ORMSKIRK.

Monthly meeting held at Church House, Sept. 2, Mr. Johnson, jun., presiding over a good muster of members. Special prizes for the annual show to be held on Boxing Day, were arranged on the table for inspection, and they included silver and gold-centred medals and a handsome silver cup, value three guineas. Conditions for the latter aroused considerable discussion, and it was ultimately resolved that the cup be competed for with four nominated birds, and be won three times before becoming the exhibitor's own property. The chairman's gold-centred medal to be given to the best young Canary bred by a member. The services of Mr. J. W. Metcalfe have been secured to judge the birds, and it is hoped the members will find that gentleman plenty to do. The hon. secretary was instructed to submit schedule for annual show to the October meeting.—T. H. Tiffen, Hon. Sec.

JARROW, HEBBURN C.B.S.

Meeting held Sept. 4, Lockhart's Cafe. Mr. O'Hagan presided over a splendid attendance. Mr. Hutler introduced three new members: Messrs. Hedley, Renton, and Patterson. Mr. Bowen brought four; Messrs. Richardson, Metford, and Nicholls (Morpeth), and Metcalfe (Jarrow). The seven were duly proposed and elected. The Chairman impressed upon the members the hearty support and co-operation necessary to secure a universal success, and hoped all members would turn up in the present as they have done in the past. For our 6th annual show, open to the United Kingdom, which is not far distant, we have secured the Mechanics' Hall, with its splendid lighting and freedom from draughts, and this should meet with the support such a splendid hall deserves. We hope to be able to give out schedules in a few weeks' time. Judges were nominated and will be finally selected at next meeting. Mr. Hutler was proposed as treasurer and duly elected. Fanciers in the district are given a hearty invitation to come and join us next meeting, October 2nd.—W. Ayers, Sec.

ERITH, ABBEY WOOD, ETC, F.S.

Monthly meeting held at the society's rooms, Sept. 5. The attendance was not so good as might have been. After the correspondence had been dealt with, the secretary reported that everything in connection with the young stock show had been arranged, Mr. G. A. Evernden offering four medals (one for each section), members only. The offer was accepted with thanks. Messrs. W. Cox and A. Cripps were elected members adult section, and Miss R. May, Masters, R. Gaze, G. Evernden, and H. Stone juvenile section. The general business being disposed of, the chairman (Mr. G. Webb) introduced Mr. Meades, of Plumstead, who had kindly come down to give a lecture on the general management of Canaries. Members who were not present missed a treat. After the lecture several members asked questions to which Mr. Meades readily replied, and Mr. H. Bleeze proposed, and Mr. Wilson seconded, that a hearty vote of thanks be accorded Mr. Meades for the lecture and very useful information given. The proposition was unanimously carried.—Geo. A. Rickett, Hon. Sec.

SHEFFIELD C.B.S.

Monthly meeting held Sept. 5, at Wentworth Cafe, Mr. F. Jones (president) in the chair. Some most important business was transacted, dealing principally with the open show to be held in the Montgomery Hall, Dec. 14. An addition to our usual schedule is the inclusion of four unflighted hen classes, and one novice British hardbill class. The novices are specially catered for, as we are giving them ten classes. Now, novices, don't miss this chance. In addition, the champions are liberally provided for, with Yorks. 9, Nor. 6, Brit. 8, Crests 2, Mules or Hybrids 3, For., 2, Sell. and gift class, 4. Decided to pay as prize money, 10/-, 6/-, 4/-, 2/-, for 1/6 entry, with the exception of the foreign, which was increased to 15/-, 10/-, 5/-, 2/6, for the large class, and 12/- 8/-, 4/-, 2/- small. A number of birds were promised for the gift class. We are hoping the number will reach 20. 25/- is being given in prize money. The following members kindly promised to guarantee certain classes, Messrs. Furniss, Thorne, Jones, Woolhouse, A. Hobson, and Walsh. Mr. Walsh also gave an additional 10/- to be allocated later. The time of closing at our annual members' cup show, Oct. 26, was fixed for 9 o'clock, instead of 8 o'clock, as previously. Doorkeepers elected were Messrs. Jones, C. W. Hobson, Billard, Bailey, Holt, Lockwood, and Waters. Other business in connection with same was left over to October meeting, when we hope to have a full meeting, as the third special table show of young birds will be held. 12 classes (see syllabus). Prize money, 3/-, 2/-, 1/-. Messrs. Cowley, Hobson, and Tomlinson were elected stewards, the judge to be announced later. The secretary was instructed to get diplomas for cup winners.—J. Woolhouse, Assist. Sec.

ARDWICK & MANCHESTER C.B.A

Meeting held Onward Hall, Ardwick, September 3rd. Mr. W. Robinson presided over a fair number of members, assembled to hear Mr. A. E. Long's lecture on British birds. He dealt with the most popular of our British birds, namely, the Chaffinch, Goldfinch, Siskin, Greenfinch, and Linnet, dealing with them in their wild state, describing the colour and markings, description of nests and eggs. This was listened to with much interest. Afterwards questions were asked, to which Mr. Long answered with great ability. A vote of thanks was accorded to Mr. Long for his paper.

GLASGOW AND DISTRICT C.B.S.

Committee meeting held September 2, in Nelson's Temperance Hotel, Mr. J. F. Park presiding over a good attendance. Secretary intimated having received patronage of B.F.C.C. and Y.C. Club's of Scotland, and awaited results of S.P.B and S.C. Clubs' meetings. Estimates for schedule and catalogue were submitted, and decided upon. Several items of importance in connection with show were decided upon. A vote of thanks to the chairman terminated the meeting. Members present: Messrs. Park, Anderson, Barron, Brown, Sloan, Taylor, Heggie, Bowman, Maxwell, Priest, Sinclair, Webster.—Wm. Hutchinson, Sec.

READING AND DISTRICT C.B.S.

Usual meeting held Sept. 4, at Palmer Hall, before a very fair attendance. Messrs. Atkins, Roser, Nicklin, and Holliday were elected members. Decided to accept CAGE BIRDS' offer of reduced price for advertisements for show. Schedule for show was then gone through. Extra open classes were added for Norwich and Yorks. hens, and in members' Yorks. classes, making 47 classes instead of 42, as last year. Decided to have 9d. entry fee for all members' classes, with fixed prize-money of 5s., 3s., 1s. 6d., which ought to be very popular amongst them. Decided to throw all four foreign classes open to all, with entry 1s. 6d., members 1s.; prize-money, 10s., 5s., 2s. 6d. As H. D. Astley, Esq., F.Z.S., has consented to judge, we considered this a very wise proceeding. We trust foreign bird fanciers living in our radius will give us their support. Fanciers wishing to join are reminded that they must be proposed at next meeting (October 2nd) to be eligible to show in November. Why not send your name to me now and be in time. Secretary would also be glad of offers of specials.—W. H. Pyke, Hon. Sec., 102, Radstock-road.

NORTHERN BRIT. MULE & F.B.C.

Meeting held August 28th in Lockhart's, 65, Grainger Street. Chairman Mr. C. Petterson presided. After a great deal of discussion re placing the Mule and Foreign Birds cups, which have been won outright, it was decided to leave the matter over until a later date. Decided also to have a table show at next meeting. Classes: Linnet, and A.O.V. British, Mule or For. Messrs. Petterson and J. Mackenzie gave a pair of vases for most points and cheese dish for most entries over a series of shows, and Mr. Joe Scott a silver medal for the member gaining the least number of points, the same to be competed for at not less than three table shows. Mr. J. Maddison to be asked to judge the first, and also to give us a few words on the feeding and management of Linnets. Among the shows that Mr. Maddison is judging during the forthcoming season are Scottish National, Bradford Cinderella, Gateshead, and others. Letters were read from Blaydon Society re granting our patronage, and from Messrs. Martin and Archer about joining, but we were sorry that we could not accept them as members, owing to being outside our radius. The following were elected members: Messrs. R. Hope and J. B. Watson, Newcastle, and J. McGuire, Wrekenton. Subs. now due.—W. Curry, Sec.

DUNFERMLINE C.B.S.

Monthly meeting held in the Co-operative Hall, August 31st, when Mr. J. Rankine presided over a good turn-out of members. The judges for the fourth annual show, to be held on the first Saturday of November, were appointed as follows: Crests and Plainheads, Mr. A. Dickson (Kelty); Borders, Mr. T. Peel (Lochgelly); British, Mules, and Foreign, Mr. W. Malcolm (Dunfermline). The classification and exhibition rules were read over, revised, and agreed upon. A highly satisfactory report was given in by the collectors, which showed that a record had been made in specials and subscriptions. It was agreed to go on with the prize drawing, and admission tickets (the same will be in the hands of the members in a day or two). Model cards are being received, and will be given gratis at the annual show. Will members please note that the monthly meetings will be held on the last Saturday of each month in the Co-operative Hall at seven o'clock, and unless any alteration no post-cards will be sent to the members intimating these meetings. A discussion re holding a West Fife League Derby Show was considered, and the representatives to this body instructed how to vote. Mr. H. Kemp was appointed as representative to the W.F.L. Members are reminded, and should make a point of attending, the next meeting of the society, when Adam Kirkpatrick will give us his experience in hybrid breeding. A vote of thanks to the chairman concluded the business.—Robert T. Campbell, Sec.

MIDDLESEX O.S.

Meeting held Sept. 5, when the arrangements for members' show, to be held October 31st, were discussed. We are securing a good hall for the show; 3d. gate all day. The members have had a fairly good season, and some good birds will be on view. A letter was read from Mr. Jamison, who, owing to business pressure, has had to tender his resignation, which was accepted, but it was unanimously decided to ask him to become a vice-president.—Jeffery Jefferis, Sec. and Treas.

CHOPWELL C.B.S.

Meeting held in Club Hall, with a good attendance of members. Two new members were enrolled, Mr. J. Oxley, Burnopfield, and Mr. H. Creswell, Lintz. Specials for open classes were gone through and ballotted for, there being a special in every class except selling classes and gift class. Would intending members kindly communicate with me, and members please pay subscriptions, which are now due, or attend next meeting, September 21st, at 6, in club hall?—W. Tomlinson, Hon. Sec., 2, South View.

RUNCORN B.B.A.

Meeting held Sept. 6, at Mariners' Arms Hotel, Mr. J. W. Guy in chair. Good attendance of members. Agreed that members' show be held in Primitive Methodist Schoolroom, Runcorn, Nov. 16. Judge, Mr. B. Houlton, St. Helens. Mr. R. P. Bostock, of Flimby, Maryport, has given two specials towards same, and the secretary has promises of many more. Three new members were elected, namely, Messrs. Glover, Looker, and Poole. Next meeting Sept. 20; business: Fixing of classification. Will all members try to be present.—J. Fearnett, Sec.

STOKE-ON-TRENT C.B.A.

At a well-attended meeting held September 2, the classification for the open show was adopted; 38 open classes were scheduled, novices being particularly well catered for with 6 classes for Yorks. and 6 for Norwich. It is expected that novices will appreciate the action of the committee by giving us their liberal support. Decided to accept the patronage of the Midland Counties Yorks. C.C. for the champion and novice competitions. Subscription books were issued to all members present, who I hope will use them to the best advantage in the interests of the Society. If all members will do their best and work together, we shall have an exhibition that we shall all be proud of and worthy of the district. Next meeting, September 23rd, to proceed with further show arrangements.—J. Pitchford, Sec.

NORTHERN COUNTIES N.P.C.

Meeting held August 31, in Lockhart's, 65, Grainger Street. Chairman, Mr. R. Topping, presided over a good attendance. Letters were read from the following societies, viz.: Morpeth, Newcastle, Blaydon, Hartlepool, Haltwhistle, Gateshead, and Border City. After they had been discussed, it was decided to give our patronge to the following societies: Newcastle, Blaydon, Hartlepool, Haltwhistle, Gateshead, and the secretary was instructed to write Morpeth Society re novice class, as according to our rules societies must provide one or more classes confined to Norwich only. Failing their granting this I was instructed to write another society re same. The next item was re clearing off debt standing against the cup fund. After a great deal of discussion it was decided to get up a prize drawing, and the following gave a singing Canary for same: Messrs. Fletcher, Dobson, Lawson, Topping, Cockburn, McKay and Curry. Tickets to be a penny each. Mr. F. F. Lawson, Carlisle, kindly sent 2s. 6d., Mr. G. Dobinson 2s., and Mr. W. McGinn 2s. 6d. towards cup fund. I appeal to all Norwich fanciers to join, as our club was formed to look after the interests of the Norwich in the Northern Counties, re proper classification, and equal prize money. Last year, out of a membership of 21 we provided a £5 5s. challenge cup, gold medal, and 12 silver medals, no member winning more than one medal, which meant more than half of our members got a special. Seeing that our meeting was a success, we decided again to have it on a Saturday; date will appear in the clubs' notices of CAGE BIRDS.—W. Curry, Sec., 60, Grosvenor Gardens, Newcastle.

BORDER CITY (Carlisle) O.S.

Quarterly general meeting held at headquarters, September 4, with a fair number of members present. Correspondence was read from N.Y.C.C., N.B.B.M. and F.B.C., N.B.B. and M.C., re patronage for show and from various ladies and gentlemen granting us special prizes and donations. The King's Hall has been secured for open show on October 30 and 31. Final revision of schedule was made, 65 classes being allotted as follows: Scotch Fancy 2, Border 14, Nor. 10, Crest and C.-B. 2, Yorks 10, Mules and Hybrids 4, Brit. 18, For. 5, an increase of ten classes on previous year. All specials not being forward, it was decided to postpone meeting until Sept. 18, when allocation of same will take place. Schedules will be ready in first week of October.—John C. Bell.

Singing Contests.

LEEDS.

Weekly contest for quality held at the Old Bird House, King's Head, Shannon Street, Leeds, Sept. 7, when 14 birds sung for three good prizes given by Mr. Wm. Tillotson. 1, H. Wigfield; 2, Butler; 3, T. Stead. Judges, S. Hardcastle, J. Naylor. Also September 8, when 23 birds sang for four good prizes. 1, H. Wigfield; 2, J. Bland; 3, 4, shared by T. Stead and Kelly. Judges, W. Sisson, J. Thompson, and S. Hardcastle.—Walter Naylor, Hon. Sec.

Linnet contest at Prince Albert Inn, Newtown, September 8, for 3 good prizes given by Mrs. M. A. Saynor, only very poor singing being heard owing to majority of Linnets being in moult. 12 birds entered. Judges, J. Smith and N. Soloman. Result: 1, Clark; 2, Binns; 3, Chippendale.—E. Wood, Sec.

Linnet contest, Skimmer's Arms, Bushingthorpe, Sept. 7. 12 birds were hung: 1, Sellers; 2 and 3 divided between Ward, Chippendale, Sellers. Judges, Clayton and Lorriman. Also Sept. 8, 16 birds were hung: 1, Ward; 2, Sellers; 3, Grainger. Judges, Sunmers and Clayton. Next sing, Sept. 14.—C. W. Smith, Sec.

SALFORD.

Contest for time held Boat House Hotel, Sept. 7, when 15 birds entered for two good prizes. Some very good singing was recorded, the birds being so evenly matched that a sing off was necessary, which resulted as follows: 1, J. Green; 2, G. Bate. Timekeepers, A. Marshall and B. Wharton. Minutes: H. Cootes. Birdkeeper: J. Caswell. After the contest a very enjoyable evening was spent, and Messrs. C. Evans and E. Routre joined the club. The membership is increasing satisfactorily, and we hope to have a large membership. Novices are specially invited to join. Merit and highest scores for special prizes will be given at the next annual meeting. Next contest August 21, when a good entry is expected.—B. Wharton, Hon. Sec.

PREPAID ADVERTISEMENTS

UNDISPLAYED.—6d. for the first eighteen words. One Halfpenny per Word for each word over eighteen. Name and address to be reckoned. MINIMUM, 18 words 6d.

IMPORTANT NOTE.—Two or more Advertisements coming from the same advertiser, even if sent in different names, are reckoned together, and, after the first Eighteen words, are charged at two words a penny, but no single advertisement, even if accompanied by others, will be charged at less than the minimum price, viz., Sixpence.

Headlines or Footlines, 6d., 9d., 1/-, 1/6, according to size.

ADVERTISEMENTS UNACCOMPANIED BY CORRECT REMITTANCE WILL NOT BE INSERTED.

Postal Orders must be sent as far as possible. All moneys should be made payable to F. CARL.

The Proprietor reserves the right to refuse any advertisement, or to cancel any advertisement ordered for a series, at any time, without assigning any reason for so doing.

Advertisements must in all cases bear the bona fide name and address of the advertiser, and no advertisement will be inserted if addressed to a receiving office, or similar place of call.

Small prepaid advertisements of a general nature and not connected in any way with the Cage Bird Trade are inserted at the rate of ½d. per word throughout. Minimum 12 words 6d.

Advertisements close Tuesdays first post in each week, and should be sent to the advertisement Manager, CAGE BIRDS, 154, Fleet Street, London. Terms for Display Advertisements on application.

Advt. Manager. "Cage Birds."

ALWAYS USE OUR DEPOSIT SYSTEM.

We are not responsible for the statements made in advertisements, nor of the bona-fides of either buyers or sellers In all transactions the adoption of our Deposit System should be insisted upon

IMPORTANT.

SEND THE FULL COMMISSION.—If the full commission does not accompany the deposit, the vendor will not be notified of its receipt until the amount deficient, plus the extra postage incurred, has been paid to us.

HOW TO REMIT.—Under no circumstances will Cheques or Post-dated Money Orders be accepted as deposits. Uncrossed Postal Orders must be sent and the numbers taken for safety.

RULES.

1.—PROCEDURE.—The intending purchaser should send to this office the amount of the purchase (our deposit fee included), and at the same time he should communicate with the seller, stating what it is he requires sent on approval. We acknowledge receipt of the deposit to both parties. In all cases the depositor should give his name and address, and also that of the vendor, and must write same clearly and distinctly.

2.—END OF TRANSACTION.—The deposit is retained by us until we hear from both parties that the transaction has been completed. If a sale has been effected, we hand the amount deposited to the seller. If a sale has not been effected, we return the amount to the depositor. The transaction must be conducted by the parties themselves. We merely hold the deposit.

3.—AMOUNT OF COMMISSION.—The fee is 6d. for each £1, or fraction of £1, and it must be sent at same time as the deposit.

4.—IMPORTANT POINTS.—The depositor must decide within forty-eight hours of the receipt of the goods whether he will keep or return the same, unless, that is, some other period of approval (of which we must be advised) is agreed upon by both parties. The depositor must at the same time notify us of the fact that he has returned the goods. If the goods are not returned within the said forty-eight hours, we reserve the right to send the deposit to the seller after the expiration of that period. And should the seller fail within three days to notify us of the receipt of his goods back again, the transaction will be treated as ended, and the deposit will be returned to the depositor.

5.—A SATISFACTORY PURCHASE.—When a transaction has been completed to the satisfaction of both depositor and seller, both parties must at once return the deposit receipts as a guarantee of its completion. The depositor must at the same time instruct us to pay over the deposit to the seller.

6.—GOODS ALREADY SOLD.—If the goods are sold before our deposit note reaches the seller, or if for any other reason he declines to do business, he must at once return the deposit note to us. Failing its receipt, we reserve the right to return the deposit to the sender after the expiration of three days.

7.—FRESH TRANSACTION.—In case no sale be effected, a deposit is available for purposes of a fresh transaction, provided another deposit fee be paid.

8.—GOODS IN TRANSIT.—Goods in transit are at the seller's risk, and any damage or loss sustained on the journey must be borne by the seller. But goods not approved of must be properly packed and returned by the same means as were used in sending the same.

9.—PAYMENT OF CARRIAGE.—The payment of carriage must be a matter for arrangement between the vendor and depositor. We do not undertake to settle disputes affecting question of carriage. But in the absence of other arrangements the purchaser is liable for the carriage of the goods, and if the goods are sent on approval and returned, each party pays the carriage one way.

Please note, as the name of my lime is being copied by others, I beg to say I have no agents whatever, and it is of utmost importance that you should order direct from me if you want the genuine article. Loose thread netting, as used in my nets, ½in. mesh, 7ft. deep, 3d. yard, ditto 9ft. deep 4d. yard, ditto 12ft. deep 5d. yard; extra stout netting, for use on rough ground, ¾in. mesh, 5d. yard; Lark or Starling netting, 1¼in. mesh, 12ft. deep, 4d. yard; all netting post free. Flirt pegs and lines, 6d. each post free; Italian hemp pull lines, specially spun by hand, free from snarl, 60 yards long, and strong as boat lines, 1/4 each, post free; brace swivels, three 3d., twelve 6d., post free; birds' calls for imitating call and song of all birds, 2d. each, six 6d., twelve 10d., post free; absolutely every up-to-date article required by catchers always in stock and ready for immediate dispatch; send stamp for full descriptive list, which also gives hints on net-making. Following testimonials speak volumes for quality of my appliances. "Gedney, Holbeach, Lincs., September 3, 1912.—Sir,—The pair 12-yard clap nets safely to hand. They are an exceptionally good pair, and thread so fine they are hardly visible, and they match the ground so well. Rather different nets for Linnet catching to the herring and garden netting offered for sale by many netmakers, who ought to know better than send such rubbish out. Without doubt, yours are best fine thread nets extant. I shall want more shortly.—Yours, Charlie Cubley." "Wood St., Guildford, August 22.—Sir,—Received the two pairs nets safely. I am well pleased, and so is my friend. We shall not take the trouble to make them when we can get them so good as these for the money.—Yours, S. Bowen." "4, Castle Place, Scarborough, Aug. 25.—Sir,—Please send 1lb. lime. It is best lime I can get. I caught over 200 birds with last lot.—Yours, W. Whitehead." "64, Main St., Renton, Scotland, Aug. 13.—Sir,—Please send 1lb. lime, as the last pound I got from you was the envy of all the catchers here. I cannot say enough in its favour.—Yours, J. McKinn." "52, Silver St., Nenagh, Ireland, Aug. 17.—Sir,—Please send following. The net trap was best I ever saw for the money. I caught 38 Goldfinches with it first day.—Yours, Dennis Hayes." "55, Rockdale Rd., Tunbridge Wells, Aug. 23.—Sir,—Please send 24 yards netting. I had some from you 7 years ago, and am still using it.—Yours, H. England." If you want reliable serviceable appliances, send to the man who makes them; no connection whatever with any other advertiser.

A VITAL point in the successful keeping of Softbills (and particularly the smaller and more delicate species), is proper feeding. For that reason keepers of Softbills should not be without "Nutshell No. 25." If you study the hints given therein by H. J. Fulljames you simply cannot have feeding troubles. All the best-known of the smaller insectivorous birds are dealt with in this booklet, which also tells you how to collect ants' eggs and discusses the various cages and hand rearing, 2d. from agents (list frequently published), or 2½d. post free from "Cage Birds," 154, Fleet-st., London, E.C.

SOFTBILL keepers, take expert advice before proceeding to buy and keep the larger species of Insectivorous birds. You will then have no trouble in keeping your pets in the best of health. This advice is offered in "Nutshell No. 26," by H. J. Fulljames. It is a wonderful little work, dealing with most varieties in a highly interesting and instructive manner. Foods and their preparation, and the various styles of cages also receive full attention. Can you breed Mealworms? This booklet tells you how. Post free, 2½d., from "Cage Birds," 154, Fleet-st., London, E.C. Look at our list of agents; call on the nearest and get it for 2d.

THE Song Thrush and Blackbird.—Full directions how to keep these favourite songsters in the best possible condition; together with directions for hand-rearing the young and the selection of show birds, will be found in "Nutshell No. 4," 2½d. post free from "Cage Birds," 154, Fleet-st., London, E.C. 2d. from agents (list published frequently).

Unequalled Bargains.

Testimonials received by every post, which can be inspected. First-round selected Norwich or Yorkshire cocks, all guaranteed singing now, prices 6/6, 7/6, 10/6 each.

EXCHANGED OR MONEY RETURNED in full after three months, if not giving entire satisfaction as songsters, if returned in sound condition, and I pay carriage back. Surely this will be admitted a fair offer; and note—I distinctly say that all those birds offered, whether as Hartz, Norwich, or Yorkshires, at 2/6, 3/6, are common German hens and challenge denial. WHY have not the Charlatans the courage to deny my statements? Norwich hens to match above cocks for breeding, 2/-, 2/6, 3/6 each. Three nice hens for 5/-. Later hatched cocks, 4/6, 5/-. Hens, 1/9, 2/-; pairs, 6/6, 7/6. YORKSHIRES, same prices. Cages, 3d. extra. For all others send for Illustrated Price List. Easiest of easy payments by joining my Original Bird Club. Distance no object. Particulars on application.

IMPORTANT NOTICE.—Hartz Rollers now being booked—arrive next month. None yet worth having, or you may be sure I should be offering. So my advice is wait.

W. RUDD, The Bird Specialist, NORWICH.

Our Fund for the Norwich Canary Owners.

During the week ending Wednesday, 18th inst, £2 1s. has been received in aid of the distress from which the unfortunate bird owners are suffering as a consequence of the floods. With the amount of £9 17s. 6d. acknowledged last week, our total reaches to £11 18s. 6d. I hope that before our fund closes this amount will be many times multiplied. Nearly every donation is accompanied by an expression of sympathy with the unfortunate sufferers, and the feelings which have prompted the subscriptions that have come to hand will be shared by many thousands of our readers who have not yet subscribed. There is some fear that because the first reports of the losses sustained by the Norwich fanciers were exaggerated, there may be a feeling that there has been very little loss indeed. This is not the case, for very many of the fanciers of Norwich have suffered very severely, and an opportunity is afforded bird lovers throughout the country to extend a helping hand to their unfortunate fellow fanciers. All monies received will be handed over to a committee who are thoroughly conversant with all the facts, and I hope that CAGE BIRDS' readers will rise to the occasion, and make this fund worthy of the object for which it has been instituted. On behalf of the Canary lovers of Norwich I thank the subscribers whose names appear in the list which follows, and hope next week to have the pleasure of publishing a much longer list of sympathisers. Mr. C. A. House, 10s.; Mrs. Martin, 5s.; 4s. each, A.E.C., and Mr. A. E. Jeffries; "Two Canaries and a Rabbit," 3s. 6d.; T. Reeks, 3s.; C. Laceby, 2s. 6d.; 2s. each, Mrs. Parker and Miss Andrews; 1s. each, E.P., W. H. Strutt; collected by Mrs. Partridge (second list). Mrs. Cockshott 1s., Mrs. Muriel, 1s., Miss Muriel, B.A., 1s. Amount previously acknowledged £9 17s. 6d. Total, £11 18s. 6d.

A Book Episode, and a Warning.

In my capacity as Secretary to CAGE BIRDS LEAGUE, I have been called upon to assist many members in difficulties of one sort or another, but one of the most curious of my experiences is a case which has happened within the last few days. A member wrote that the agent of a book publishing firm had done his best to induce him to sign an order form agreeing to take an expensive book on birds, on the instalment system of payment. I give the rest of the story in my informant's own words: "After a long talk I said I would think it over, and he said he would write or call again in September. When he was going he asked me to write my name and address on a plain piece of paper so that he might remember the address, and I did so. A few weeks later his firm sent me the book, which I had not ordered, so I refused to take it in, and it was returned by post unopened. I heard nothing more about it until one day last week when I discovered that they had put me in the county court for the price of the book. On the summons the statement is made 'ordered, tendered, and refused.' I shall be very pleased if you will help me in any way."

On receipt of this letter I called on the firm mentioned by our LEAGUE member, and there they produced a signed order, the signature certainly being that of the member concerned. In the face of this I could do nothing but propose a compromise, and I am glad to say that the firm agreed to accept a small payment in discharge of the summons.

It is not for me to suggest how the signature, which my correspondent distinctly says he simply wrote on a plain piece of paper "so that the agent might remember the address," got on to the order form. All that is certain is that it was there right enough, and, without imputing sharp practices to anyone, for it is of course possible that my informant's statement is not an accurate one, it may be as well if CAGE BIRD LEAGUE members will be careful not to affix their names to plain pieces of paper if requested to do so by agents of instalment firms.

TERMS OF MEMBERSHIP.

PATRONS.—A donation of not less than Ten Guineas in one amount, or an annual subscription of not less than Two Guineas, shall constitute the donor or subscriber a Patron.

100 Sheets, Two Shillings and sixpence.
250 Sheets, Four shillings.
500 Sheets, Five shillings and sixpence.
1,000 Sheets, Eight shillings and sixpence.

All post free.

Members are entitled, if application is made at the time of joining, to a free copy of a sixpenny pamphlet on British Bird Culture, or a similar treatise on Canary and Hybrid Culture.

HENRY J. FULLJAMES,
154, FLEET STREET, LONDON, E.C.

How to become an Associate.

Many readers of CAGE BIRDS have written to say that they would like to join CAGE BIRDS' LEAGUE, but cannot afford the subscription. To meet their wishes we have decided to form, in connection with the LEAGUE, a body of Associates. All we ask of these Associates is that they will promise to give every possible attention to the wants of their birds. And they must induce others to see that their birds are kept happy and contented.

All that the intending Associate has to do is to sign the coupon herewith, get five of his or her friends to sign each a similar coupon, and send the six, together with a penny stamp, to the Secretary of CAGE BIRDS' LEAGUE, who will forward by return an enamelled Button Badge of the LEAGUE. There will be no other charge. NOW, THEN, BIRD LOVERS!—USE YOUR BEST EFFORTS IN THIS SPLENDID CAUSE.

THE BIRD LOVER'S PLEDGE.

I hereby promise to take every care of my feathered pets and to induce others to do the same

Particulars of the Norwich Fanciers' Relief Fund will be found this week in the LEAGUE Notes on page 743. We hope all readers will assist this deserving cause.

We hear that the cage birds at Southampton, Nov. 20, will be judged by Mr. C. E. Silk, of Emsworth.

Inverurie Show, writes Mr. Simpson, Sec., is fixed for Nov. 23. The judge is Mr. James Sandison, Aberdeen.

Muirkirk Show is fixed for Nov. 2, and Mr. Wm. Haddow (Hamilton) is appointed judge, Mr. Allan Loggie, the Secretary, informs us.

Kindly notify change of address, writes Mr. Alfred Jarvis, from Granville Street, to 29, Rider Road, Woodhouse, Leeds. Secretaries please note.

I have been a reader of your valuable paper, Cage Birds, for the last three years, and find it a great help, writes Mr. T. Clarke (Keighley).

Will show secretaries kindly note that applications for Ramsden's specials must be accompanied by coupons, and should be made early in October. (Advt.).

Will secretaries of shows where Border Fancies are catered for send schedule to me, writes Mr. G. F. Bates, 7, Rose Avenue, South Moor, Stanley S.O., Durham.

Many thanks for inserting my query "How to catch Hawfinches," and also to Mr. R. Sitten, who so kindly replied, writes Mr. W. Watson (Ashley). I wish Cage Birds every success.

Owing to so many members of the Metropolitan C.B.A. being on their holidays, writes G. Denham, Hon. Treas., the meeting for Saturday, Sept. 21, is postponed until October.

I have been engaged to judge Canaries at Cleator Moor Show, Dec. 14; also I have changed my address from Albion Street to 11, Woodville Terrace, Whitehaven, writes Mr. Jas. Stewart.

We have fixed our annual members' old bird show for Nov. 23 and 24, with Mr. J. W. Metcalfe, of Liverpool, as judge, writes Mr. R. Charleson, Hon. Sec., Leigh and District C.B.S.

We are sorry to tell you that Mr. E. Jordan, an old fancier, is leaving England for New Zealand this week, write Messrs. Barton and Barton, Secs., New Cross C.B.S. We all wish him good fortune in his future life.

We hear from Mr. Rae, Sec., that the judges appointed for Kircaldy Show on Oct. 26, are Messrs. D. Low, Scotch Fancy; G. Arnott, Crests; J. Hutchinson, Borders and Yorks; W. Hampton, Norwich; and J. W. Adams, British, etc.

The schedule in connection with South Co. Dublin C.B.A. November show is now being prepared, and any fancier wishing to subscribe a special prize might please communicate, writes the Hon. Sec., Mr. Smyth, 21, Eden Terrace, Kingstown.

Kindly inform those who have made application for schedules for Mumbles Show, that there has been a delay through a slight misunderstanding with the printer writes Mr. W. D. Eley, the Asst. Sec., but all applicants shall receive them in a few days.

A meeting of the council of the Yorkshire Union of Cage Bird Societies will be held at the Market Tavern, Godwin Street, Bradford, on Saturday, Sept. 21, at 6 o'clock prompt, writes Mr. Hill, Hon. Sec. Business very important. All delegates please attend.

We note that the well-known firms of exporters of German Roller Canaries, Messrs. Blumberger and Co., and Messrs. Richter and Schmidt, have amalgamated, and the business is now being carried on as the Internationale Kanarien, Leipzig. This establishment does a very large trade all over the world.

Hartlepool's C.B.S. are putting the finishing touches on the arrangements for their open show, write Messrs. Woodhead and Pyman, (hon. secs.). Patronage has been granted by the Y.C.C., the N.Y.C.C., the N.C.N. and C.C.C., and the N.B.M. and F.B.C. The exhibition is to be held in St. George's Hall, the finest room in the town. Judges, Messrs. Battye and Maddison. Everything points to great success.

OBITUARY.

On behalf of the members of the Grangemouth and District C.B.S., writes Mr. John Woodhouse, Sec., allow me to express our sympathy with Mr. J. M. Aitken (one of our members) at the great loss he has sustained through the death of his wife. We all tender Mr. Aitken our most sincere sympathy in his bereavement; may he be given strength to bear up under such trying circumstances.

Entries are rolling in for our young stock show, writes Mr. J. H. Priestman, secretary Ilford and County F. and F.S., held Tuesday, Sept. 24th, in the Recreation Hall, Manor Park. Fanciers and friends will be heartily welcomed.

We have secured the services of Mr. J. Steel, Dalkeith, the popular British bird lecturer, who will give us the benefit of his wide experience in the Arcade Temperance Hotel, Sept. 28, at 6, writes Mr. J. R. Reid, Sec., Cowdenbeath C.B.S. A novel competition has been inaugurated by Mr. Steel, who will give a British or Border show cage to the member putting the best question on paper relating to British birds or mule and hybrid breeding. Mr. Alex. Anderson will judge the questions. We extend a hearty welcome to all fanciers to be with us that night.

At the Portsmouth Fanciers' Society's Show, Nov. 27 and 28, there will be the following classes, writes Mr. B. Coffin:—Border Fancy 7, under the patronage of English and Welsh Border Fancy C.C., Norwich 7, Yorks 7, Mules 2, British 14, Foreign 3. Judges: Canaries and Hybrids, Rev. G. W. Joyce; British and Foreign, Mr. C. Prior. Specials to value of £5 for the Border Fancy classes. The late G. Coffin memorial cup value 20 guineas is offered for the best cage bird exhibited by a member of the Portsmouth F.S. The society is in no way connected with any other society in the town.

Club Nights at Leicester.

The club nights of the Leicester Cage Bird Society will be the first and third Wednesdays in each month from now onwards, at the Saracen's Head Hotel, writes Mr. J. Cook, the Sec. Fanciers are heartily invited.

Bell the Cat and Protect the Birds.

The instinct to hunt pussy cannot give up, no matter how blameless her life in other ways. But those of us who love to encourage the birds to come for food are often perplexed as to how a cat may be kept who will not hunt them. I have found, says a writer in the "Brixton Gazette," that a little bell attached to a collar, and put on when the cat is let out of doors, gives the birds warning of her presence and a chance to get away.

Birds Killed at Lighthouse.

Many reasons have been adduced as to how the dead birds which are constantly found at the foot of lighthouses meet their death. One is that the birds fall after dashing themselves against the lanterns, but some Dutch students, states a writer in the "Manchester Courier," are responsible for a new theory. It is, that the birds, becoming confused by the brilliant light, fly round until they are exhausted, and finally perish for want of foothold. The plan of attaching short ladders to the lighthouses to serve as perches would seem to support this theory, for it has so considerably reduced the bird mortality that Germany has now decided to adopt the plan.

Canary Supply at Norwich.

We are requested to state that the recent floods at Norwich will make practically no difference to the supply of Canaries available for the dealers in the "City of Canaries and Churches." One of the leading establishments informs us that in consequence of the sensational statements which appeared in the daily press (viz., that thousands had been drowned and the industry ruined) many letters have been received asking whether they had any Canaries left for sale. Buyers need be under no misapprehension on the latter score; the stock of the dealers has not, and will not, suffer in either quantity or quality.

Where Birds are Fearless.

Mr. R. Clyde in "The Field" speaks of the confidence of the smaller birds on Loch Ness. He says: "As we pulled to our fishing ground along the wooded shores of the loch a Chaffinch flew out to us and perched on the gunwale of the boat, his repeated call of 'pink, pink,' having clearly some meaning which I failed to gather. 'He wishes some of the lunch,' said the gillie. Being curious to see the result, I began to open the lunch-basket, and immediately the little chap flitted to the thwart beside me and waited expectantly till I extracted some crumbs of bread for him. He seized upon the largest morsel at once, and flew off to the shore with it. Some hundred yards or so farther on the same bird (or another) repeated the pretty performance, which I am told is a common one on the loch side. They say that the Tomtits are so tame that they will even take food from the lips of the wood-cutters."

A Choir of Canaries.

Canaries, carolling an unusual accompaniment to the organ and choir, were used in the Venice Union Church the other night, according to "Scienco Siftings." The pastor, the Rev. Fenwicke L. Holmes, decided to surprise his flock with the unique plan. The congregation accordingly filed into a church brightened by the melody of a dozen pretty yellow birds, imported from Germany, their cages swinging at advantageous points high above the heads of the worshippers. The Canaries interrupted the sermon very little. But when the choir and the congregation arose to sing hymns, the feathered songsters burst forth into a musical cadence which greatly enhanced the human praise of the Creator. Mr. Holmes does not know that Canaries were ever used before at church services, but he thinks them a great help to sincere worship. They will be used every Sunday hereafter.

Wild-Bird Life.

To Winter Quarters.

The weather has somewhat improved during the past week, and one has been able to get out into the country without the mackintosh which has been our inevitable companion for so many weeks. The Warblers have doparted from the hedgerows, all but a few isolated specimens, evidently stray birds from the north gradually working their way southwards. Resident birds are forming into flocks of various sizes, and during the coming winter months they will be met with in almost every field in the vicinity of woods and hedges.

One of the reasons why we do not see more of the migrating thousands that move at this season to summer lands is that many species journey by night. If one lives in the track of these moving armies one can distinctly hear them passing in the silent hours. The wild cry of the Geese, the plaintive wailing of the Plovers, and flute-like whistling cries of many waders and smaller birds, may be distinctly heard, though not a feather may be discernible against the dark vault of blue, even with the aid of strong night glasses.

Occasionally one is fortunate enough to get a sight of some of these larger birds moving in the daylight. One evening quite recently some half-dozen Curlews were seen wending westward, their peculiar cry of "cur-lew" was heard some time before the birds were seen. Like their cousins the Whimbrels, they fly much higher during migration than at any other time. While watching them one notices how quickly they pass overhead, and are lost in the distance. Their speed upon the wing is far greater than one would imagine; they fly straight and even, as though they know the extent of their journey and are sure of the way.

It seems quite out of place to mention the Cuckoo in the month of September, because the old birds have by now reached their winter quarters, but many young ones are still with us, one of which may be seen in the gardens of a Surrey village; he is quite at home among the fruit trees and vegetables, where doubtless he disposes of many harmful caterpillars during the day, for young Cuckoos are blessed with rare appetites and need a good supply to keep them at all satisfied. Evidently the Finches, Sparrows, Wagtails, Thrushes, Robins, etc., have got used to his little ways, as they do not in any way resent his presence, but then it is not now nesting time.

WHERE ADVERTISING PAYS.

AN EXCELLENT RESULT.

My last advertisement in "CAGE BIRDS" brought me no less than 18 replies, which I consider excellent, writes Mr. H. Moore (Lambeth).

TOO MANY TO ANSWER.

Kindly thank all applicants for Mules advertised, writes Mr. Criddle, Bath. I had so many that I could not possibly answer them all. They were sold by wire. Thanking you for your valuable paper.

Unprolificacy in Canaries

By J. STEEL (Dalkeith).

A well-considered and intensely interesting article which will cause Canary breeders to think.

A STUDY of all the causes which have comparative or absolute unprolificacy (i.e. producing few or no offspring) as their effect would lead the average bird-breeder into a maze of anatomical problems much too complex for him, or her, to follow. As a birdbreeder myself, I frankly confess that though I found the processes of generation and development a very interesting study, its value from an avicultural point of view was nil. But, like thousands who may read these lines, I was concerned as to the cause of a decline in reproductiveness which had become manifest in my stock to a degree which then threatened, and ultimately effected, its entire annihilation by sheer decrement.

A perusal of the correspondence columns of the Fancy press showed the doubtful utility of seeking a remedy there, inasmuch as hundreds labouring under a similar affliction with their birds were advised to take certain measures, and apply certain remedies which I had proved time and again to be of no use, the reason being that, though unreproductiveness is commensurate with an unhealthy state in many cases, yet a bird may be in perfect health and still be utterly unreproductive. My birds enjoyed robust health, so the futility of any treatment with a view to producing what they already possessed, was obvious. The other measures advised were manifold, anyone who looks over the advisory columns of his paper during the breeding season can scarcely fail to find scores, they may be summed up in a word—stimulation. A bird may be absolutely mad with desire, and be unreproductive to the degree of utter sterility (Hybrids are illustrative of this fact). My birds were not Hybrids, and being in that condition recognised as "forward," even to rankness, the folly of applying any treatment with a view to further stimulation, was obvious.

This photograph of a Crested Dove brooding its two young was taken in the aviaries of Mr. L. M. Grider's "Birdland," at Los Angeles, California.

Inherent Degeneracy and Its Symptoms.

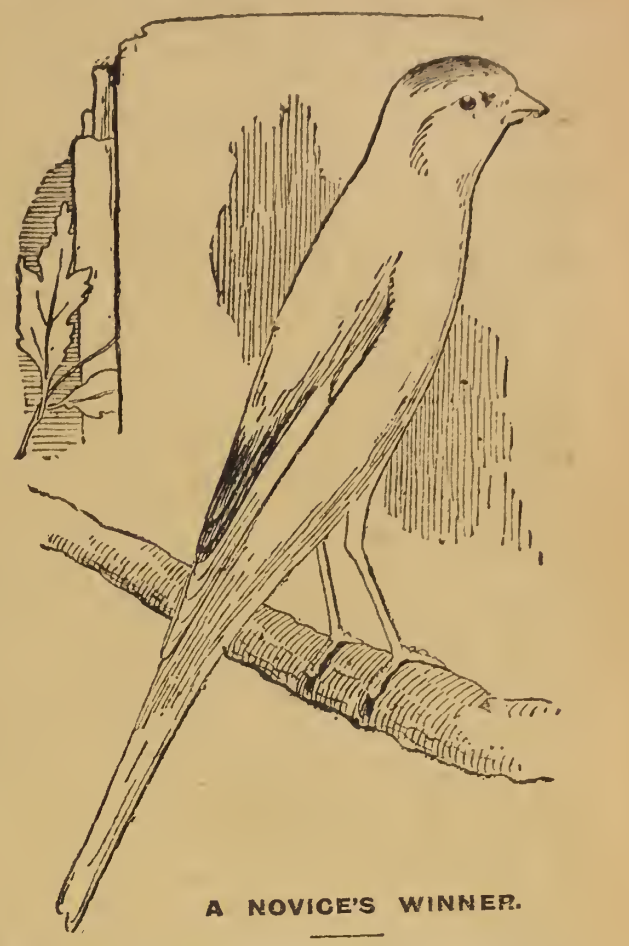
A study of these birds, and many hundreds of others I have bred since, observation of many other fanciers' stock, and a series of experiments, convinced me that they were subject to inherent unprolificacy. As I have never seen this subject discussed, I shall first express my opinion, viz., that this decline in reproductive power is yearly becoming more manifest, and that the standard of prolificacy in Canaries, as in any other cult, can only be maintained by elimination of those individuals which reveal such degeneracy.

The manifestations of such deterioration are various, but may be summed up as follows: Sterile eggs, perishing of the embryo before hatching, chicks perishing despite the best attentions of their own, or foster parents, barren hens, bad feeding hens, sweating hens, and small clutches of eggs, sometimes laid at abnormal intervals. Of these, the first second, and third may be attributable to the male, either by reason of a failure to fecundate, or an inherent weakness transmitted to the embryo or chick.

Understand, I do not say that these evils are invariably indicative of a deterioration. That any, or all of them, may be attributed to a chronic or temporary state of unhealthiness, other than inherent, and possibly amendable, is beyond question; but it is just as true that such unhealthy state may be inherent. In the majority of cases the symptoms are discernible, and elimination is the first method adopted to stamp out such unhealthiness in a cult. It has been seriously proposed to apply this as a method of stamping out an inherent tendency to insanity and consumption in mankind.

Nature's Methods.

Let us consider how nature eliminates the unfit, and maintains a standard of prolificacy in the world's avifauna when unsubjected to human control or influence. We find that each individual must be possessed of physique, energy, and intelligence in order to withstand climatic conditions, procure a subsistence, and evade its many enemies. Any which fail in these qualities must perish, and are thus prevented from reproducing such deterioration. Many naturalists have the opinion that another check consists in the conjugal state being competitive.



That the latter system obtains is apparent to anyone who has studied wild birds during pairing season, but whether such competition arises from a preponderance of males, or a varying in superiority of the females, not all the affaires du cœur I have witnessed have sufficed to elucidate. However, there are no mariages de convenance in birddom; the male, by postures, a display of finery (often embellished for the occasion) and powers of song, seeks to impress the female of his choice with the fact that he is a very beau ideal, and he must be prepared to prove his superiority by drubbing all rivals.

Now the Canary culturist has abrogated nature's methods. Provided, as his birds have been, for many generations, with food and shelter, the standard of fitness has naturally sunk, and indeed the standard essential to self sustenance is to them unnecessary, and, with existence made so easy, the practically unfit have been enabled not only to survive, but to reproduce their kind. Thus the way has been paved for a deterioration in reproductiveness.

Man's Own Standards.

Let us now consider the Canary breeder's standard. It may be summed up in four words—departure from the normal. Prolificacy has been ignored, and an opposite tendency engendered by breeding, and even inbreeding, with individuals obviously unprolific, in more or less degree. In producing varieties, the values of which are commensurate with the extent such variations differ or depart in certain features from the original or parent stock, the Canary culturist has set up a series of arbitrary standards, and, for competitive purposes, has made the approach to any particular ideal so difficult that any attempt to reach that artificial ideal while simultaneously maintaining a high degree of prolificacy were well nigh impossible, and I think such has never been attempted. In the view of the fancier, no quality of prolificacy can cover the fault of a departure from (so-called) type, and the idea of rejecting a "typical" individual on the ground of its being an obvious degenerate in reproductive powers would not be entertained for a moment. I cannot name another cult in which the line of departure from prolificacy is drawn at utter sterility.

Birds in a North Yorkshire Garden.

By the Rev. BERNARD WILTON (Middlesbrough).

A year's life in delightful surroundings delightfully told by a lover of our British birds.

BUT if the Skylark is a doubtful native," his first cousin, the Tree Pipit, does what he can to make up his deficiencies. There are generally at least three nests in various parts of the garden, and from sunrise onwards, all the morning through, from late April to the end of June, you may hear that little varied, but, to me, never monotonous song, uttered as the bird drops downwards with gracefully expanded wings to some convenient tree-top or paling.

The plaintive note of the Willow Warbler now sounds in the flowing willow tree; the delightful trill of the Greenfinch is heard from the thorn hedge; and the Bullfinch is busy, too busy, with the yet unfolded fruit buds. The Yellowhammer is building in the young plantation on the north side of the house; and the ribald laugh of the Green Woodpecker rings out as he devotes a few moments to the discomfiture of the bark dwellers on one of our oak trees.

Once the Spotted Woodpecker, conspicuous with his flaming red cap, paid a short visit to a rustic trellis I was erecting on the terrace. Apparently he drew a blank, for I never saw him again. Another bark searcher whom I see sometimes gliding round our oak trees, is the little Tree-creeper.

The Coming of the Martins.

At the end of this month and at the beginning of May the Martins are busy once more under the eaves. This is a new house, and for the first five years we lived here no Martins came. Then five pairs arrived, an overflow, I fancy, from a great ruined abbey in the neighbourhood, where they build in the high angles of the broken clerestory windows. The next year there were nine pairs, and the year following thirty-four. In 1906, for some reason there was a great falling off in the number of pairs, but last year we had nearly thirty again. The Swallows do not nest on the premises, but come to collect mud for their nests from the edges of my garden pools, as do the Sand Martins also. The Swifts inhabit the tiny hamlet on the other side of the river. I once saw one emerge from beneath the slates of my house.

It is generally the end of April before the Cuckoo reaches these northern wildernesses, but when he does come, he arrives in force. The Dale re-echoes with his name throughout May and June, but he is only a casual visitor to my garden. It is in early May that the Garden Warbler comes back to the hazel copse in the orchard, and it is a red-letter day indeed for us when we hear those rich, full notes once more. The Sedge Warbler is close beside him, but nearer to the water. There concealed amid the twigs he chatters to himself all through the summer night. Early May brings also the White-throat, his song full of the joy of living, as he dances on air above the garden hedge. The Redstart is here, too, inspecting one of my new rough stone walls, with a view to housekeeping. Last of all the small birds, comes the Spotted Fly-catcher, making up for his silence by the sprightly activity of his movements. A much rarer bird, the Pied Fly-catcher, is an occasional visitor to the orchard, a bird I never saw before I lived here.

Free Pensioners.

The woods about us abound with Tawny Owls, though I have never seen either a Barn Owl or a Long-eared Owl here. I have kept hand-reared Owls loose in the garden for years, and they never showed any disposition to leave us. One of these never ceased to cry for food like a young bird, when it was two years old, whenever it was hungry, being, apparently, too lazy to forage for itself. We treat our tame Jackdaws in the same way. They roam at will during the daytime; but always come home at night to sleep in a hamper in the scullery. One of the two we now have has been with us three years.

It is in late June that one of the most interesting visitors to our garden sometimes makes his appearance. At three o'clock in the morning I have been awakened by the churning cry of the Nightjar close to my windows, and looking out have seen the bird seated on the wooden fence for a moment, and then flitting to the ground beneath. He came on two or three successive mornings in 1905, and again in the two following years, but for the last year or two I have not seen him. Nightjars are, of course, fairly common here in the waste ground on the edges of the moors; but as garden birds they seem distinctly unusual. Another rare bird that I have once seen darting along one of the garden hedgerows is the Merlin, the smallest British Hawk. He also was, I presume, a casual caller from the moor. The Kestrel and Sparrow Hawks are common visitors, a chorus of disapproval from the shrubberies generally announcing their arrival.

As the year advances the Corncrake and the Moorhen creep stealthily through the long grass by the gate, and you may hear their harsh voices all through the summer nights. About the end of July Linnets and Redpolls make their appearance in little flocks or families, fresh from their nesting places in the gorse and broom patches. It is a pretty sight to see the latter clinging like Titmice to the ripe heads of the grasses.

A Joyful Surprise.

One summer a pair of Goldfinches spent most of the month of August near the lower pool. They are not common in the Dale, and it was a joyful surprise to hear the familiar note in our orchard. About the same time of the year I have occasionally disturbed a Snipe in the marshy ground by the water.

Then autumn comes again, and with it the Fieldfare and Redwings. The former descend on my big thorn hedge a score at a time, looking beautiful objects among the red berries in the sunshine, the latter more often hopping idly about on the grass before the house. The Rooks have been always with us; but it is in the autumn that they most make their presence felt as they wheel noisily overhead, or pass at nightfall to the big rookery a mile away.

So ends the list of my feathered visitors who here, in this remote valley, make, with their coming and going, a living calendar, by which we note the passing months, compensating us by their sweet voices and endearing ways for the absence of much human society, and the advantages and disadvantages it brings.

Questions and Answers.

Queries will be answered under the following conditions:—

(1)—All questions must be clearly written in ink (or typewritten) on one side of paper, and must conclude with either the correct name of querist or a pseudonym, or initials.

(2)—The proper name and address in full of querist must always be written on a separate sheet of paper, and enclosed with the query. In no case must the address appear on the query.

(4)—Queries must not include or be included in orders for books, instructions re advertisements, or any other matter for publication.

(5)—The department to which the queries refer must be stated in bold letters on the left-hand corner of the query.

(6)—If an answer in the same week's issue is desired, queries must be posted to reach us by Monday's first post at latest. Queries will be dealt with in the order in which they are received, and only as space permits. The earlier queries are received the better attention they are likely to have.

(7)—Queries relating to illnesses of birds, except enquiries as to cause of death (for which see Post Mortems will be answered by return of post on receipt of a postal order for sixpence and an addressed stamped envelope. Queries of an ordinary nature will be answered by post, if desired, on receipt of a postal order for one shilling and a stamped addressed envelope.

(8)—All who require letters of complaints written to advertisers must state grounds for doing so clearly and fully, and enclose a fee of sixpence, otherwise their letters will not receive attention. All the fees received from this source will be handed over in full to the "Referee's" Poor Childrens' Fund (London).

(9)—All queries must be addressed to the Editor, "Cage Birds," 154, Fleet Street, London, E.C. Only queries so sent will be answered. Postcards are not admissible.

THE following gentlemen represent CAGE BIRDS staff of ADVISORY EXPERTS. Queries must in no case be addressed to any of them individually, but to the Editor.

Canaries.—Claude St. John. British Birds, Mule and Hybrids—C. E. Weston. Foreign Birds—Wesley T. Page, F.Z.S., M.B.N.U.S., &c., Wild Bird Life—H. Norman.

NOTE.—If an answer is required concerning the proper mating, etc., of Norwich, Yorkshires, Crests, Cinnamons, Greens, Borders, Lizards, Scotch or any other variety of the Canary family, we shall, should the querist desire us to do so, be pleased to submit his questions for answer to some leading specialist of the day on the variety concerned.

CANARY QUERIES.

Answered by CLAUDE ST. JOHN.

SEED SAMPLES (J. S.).—There is practically nothing at all to choose between 1 and 2. Both are of very fair quality all round, except in size which is very small. If there is any difference in price get the one that is the cheaper. No. 3 is only just fair, though slightly better in size. It is a little inferior to 1 and 2.

TWITCHING LEG AT NIGHT (T. H. L.).—Quite a typical symptom. There is nothing wrong with the bird's health, but if you examine the cage closely you will find it is infested with red mites, and it is the worrying attacks of this pest that cause the bird's restlessness. Place the bird temporarily in another cage, and whilst there give a bath daily in which a few drops of quassia essence have been mixed. Clean out the other cage, raking out any open joint or crack of any kind with a pin, and burn debris at once. Then go over cage entirely and saturate it with paraffin, in a teacupful of which you have dissolved a cube of camphor. Use a small paint brush and work it well into the joints. Place cage in open air to dry and repeat process next day. If you can do it again on the third day, so much the better. When dry run into any cracks or open joints a drop of pure Jeyes' Fluid, and if there are many of these harbours for mites about cage, you might fill them at this stage with putty softened with oil varnish and coloured to match wood of cage. Then repaint or distemper and varnish, etc., if necessary, and when quite dry bird may be returned. When doing cage with paraffin remember each time to go over the nail or hook and surface of wall surrounding it where cage has been hanging.

PIMPLE ON TAIL (Pipp).—All birds have "something like a pimple" on the tail. It is the oil-gland and a quite necessary and natural organ, but is the cause of many curious and false ideas of some indefinite complaint named like your pseudonym. I hope you have not been pricking or squeezing the supposed swelling, as you will only have been causing the bird unnecessary pain and suffering. If the gland appears really abnormally swollen or inflamed when compared with that of any other healthy bird, anoint it sparingly twice at an interval of two days with cold cream or lanocyllin, but interfere no further with it. Give the bird half a teaspoonful of crushed sponge cake every second day for a week, slightly dusted each time with flowers of sulphur and sprinkled with gold of pleasure seed. On the alternate days give a pinch of maw and a pinch of mixed seed twice a week. Give a small spray of green food four times a week. In the drinking water give 20 drops of whisky, as much Epsom salts as will cover a threepennypiece, and the same quantity of chlorate of potash for two days.

MORE DEATHS (B.B.H.).—If any more deaths occur I would advise you to send a body to Mr. Yates for post-mortem, as early as possible after death, and thereby settle all doubts about the nature of the trouble. See our post-mortem replies for rules. The deaths are doubtless all due to the same exciting cause; hence it is no matter for wonderment that all should show similar symptoms. I am still of opinion the seed was at the root of the mischief, and now you have altered this I think, under the treatment advised in last reply, no more deaths are likely to take place from the same cause. I fancy the discoloured tongue theory you mention would not bear much investigation, but as I have not made a point of examining this feature in every available case, I cannot be dogmatic on the point. The sample of food you sent seems to be a good wholesome biscuit food, and this, or a similar food, is used rather largely by many fanciers in place of egg-food. For occasional use, and as a conditioner or pick-me-up, it is most useful, but I do not approve of employing these medicated foods as articles of general diet. As regards moving birds to the other room, do not do so until you are assured on the point of possible fever infection. I am not quite clear now what aspect your present room commands, but I have an idea it is quite as good as a Southern one. Good clean sawdust is in no way harmful to birds, but they should have access to gritty sand when sawdust is used on floor. Please let me hear how birds are doing in a month hence.

CHICK DYING (Crest).—In the first place you are keeping the birds together a great deal too late, and you will be really lucky if you get this youngster reared before the parents drop into moult, and by having the birds moult so late you are probably spoiling your prospects with them for next season. If you feed the pair as directed in the article in the "Annual," you cannot go far wrong. I cannot tell why the hen refused to feed the last young one after giving it a first feed of lettuce at three days old, except that she was too forward with the following brood to go on with the solitary chick. As regards your reference to what I say in the "Annual" and in "the book," you ought to have been more definite and said to which book you refer. I am responsible for more than one, and in "Our Canaries," the latest and best, there are many opinions besides my own. If you will write again and tell me to what book and page you refer, I will endeavour to make matters clear for you.

BIRDS DYING AND SEED (W. Norwood).—The Canary seed is a nice bright clean sample, quite sound and sweet, and of good quality, though small in size. The rape is also a very good sample of summer rape. Whatever may be the cause of the birds dying, it certainly is not the seed that is at fault. If you had given me some particulars of your general treatment, and how the birds are affected, I might possibly have detected some probable cause. As it is, I would advise you in the event of more birds dying, to send a body on without delay to Mr. Yates, for post-mortem, so that you may be prepared to deal with any possible infection before it goes too far. (See p.m. column for rules.) Give the bird a morsel of bread and milk sprinkled with soft sugar every second day for a fortnight, and on the alternate days a pinch of maw seed, and a half ripe plantain stalk. Add six drops of syrup of buckthorn to the water for two days, and afterwards 20 drops of Chemical Food every second day for a fortnight.

A BAD WHEEZE (M.J.R.).—I'm afraid the bird will never do much good. Alleviation is probably all you can hope to do for her. The complaint is in no sense infectious. Place her in a fairly warm and equable temperature, quite free from draughts; cover over the cage, and add five drops of syrup of buckthorn to the water for two days. Afterwards give 20 drops of whisky and five of syrup of saffron two days in every three for a week. This is to try to set the moult going. For the wheezing give, in addition to the usual seed diet, half a teaspoonful of crushed sponge cake, with four drops of sherry and two of cod liver oil emulsion well mixed in it, and sprinkled with gold of pleasure seed, every second day for a month, and on the alternate days give a pinch of maw and a spray of chickweed or green plantain stalk. After the first week's treatment, as mentioned above, add 20 drops of the following mixture to the drinking water every second day for a fortnight, then miss a week, and repeat it again for a fortnight. Mixture: Two drams each of glycerine and oxymel of squills, one dram each of Ipecacuanha wine and chlorodyne, and eight grains of iodide of potassium. Any chemist will mix this for you.

RARA AVIS (J.X.).—I have never heard or seen a Canary that could talk, and until I actually have oral proof I am afraid I shall remain a doubting Thomas. I have read of dozens of them, but that is a very different thing to having reliable proof of the existence of such a phenomenon. I have heard many Canaries which their admirers or fond owners have honestly asserted could articulate the words "pretty dick" quite clearly, but when I have heard the performance it has been merely the natural "che-chee-chees-ick," and so on with other so-called words. The talking Canary really exists only in a rather too fertile imagination, and crops up periodically in a certain section of the Press as a rara avis. A specimen was reported in a nature journal, in my possession, about 40 years ago, so it is no new thing. I have had a pet Canary that whistled a few bars of music of a tune composed for a nursery rhyme, and did it in a tone that was quite indistinguishable from the whistle of the man who taught it to him. But even this is a very different thing from talking. The white Canary is an actual living fact. It is, however, of quite recent origin—in its last appearance at any rate—and consequently is still very uncommon. You might have seen some advertised in our columns three or four weeks ago.

VARIOUS (A.C.S.).—(1) If you have a number of birds flying together, and wish to give them Chemical Food as a pick-me-up, you must not, of course, add to the drinker a given number of drops for each bird. In such circumstances it is quite possible to foresee a point when you would need to put on the pure drug in place of drinking water. Add ten drops of the Chemical Food to every tablespoonful of water in the drinker. Three teaspoonfuls in half a pint of water will, for all practical purposes, amount to the same thing. This is the best strength for you to use; whether a single bird or one hundred use the same drinker, will not affect the matter at all. You should read article on moulting in issue of Aug. 3rd. (2) This query is very vague. You omit to say whether you wish to breed Greens, whether your bird is the yellow or buff type, and if the looseness in feather is natural and due to long profuse plumage, or merely owing to the bird being out of condition temporarily. If the latter, the looseness should disappear as soon as it is quite over the moult. Otherwise, for breeding Greens you should select a very tight short-feathered, cobby hen, with short flights and tail, and not too leggy, of the opposite type to the cock; thus, if he is a yellow-green, the hen should be a buff-green, and vice versa (3) In feeding you should give a little mixed seed, as mentioned in article referred to above, two or three times a week. Also give a greater variety of green food and wild seeds, and discontinue giving apple for the present. It will be very useful later on, but at this season it is but a poor substitute for the excellent variety of wild seeds and green foods you could obtain with scarcely any trouble.

FOREIGN BIRDS.

Answered by WESLEY T. PAGE, F.Z.S., M.B.N.U.S.

WHAT BIRD? (C. Brown).—It was a Pintail Nonpareil; probably a male in immature plumage.

WHAT PARRAKEET? (S.T.P.).—Your details point to your having a hen of one of the races of Ringnecks, of which newly-imported specimens can be procured for 7s. 6d. each, but an acclimatised specimen in good plumage 20s. to 25s., or more if a good talker. The Ringnecks take more teaching than a Grey Parrot, but many of them become quite talented talkers.

FOOD FOR COCKATOO (Mrs. Ralph Smith).—Give this bird a seed mixture of one quart each canary seed, white millet, and oats, one pint each hemp, paddy rice, and wheat, half-pint each maize, sunflower seeds, and shelled nuts, one gill each chillies and grit (not sand), the whole to be well mixed, and a supply kept in the cage. Also supply ripe fruit, plain biscuit, green-food and water regularly. Keep a piece of clean cuttlebone hanging in the cage. If you report how the bird eats, freely or otherwise, and state what it leaves, etc., a few weeks hence, I can then judge if any modification is necessary.

BUDGERIGARS WITH YOUNG (Budgie).—(1) A few oats, unlimited green-food, a few pieces of plain biscuit or stale crusts of household bread, but some individuals will not touch the latter. (2) I should not encourage breeding so late in the year, but in an outdoor aviary it is best to leave them to go their own way. I should not remove the husks as these are frequently used as sleeping quarters in severe weather. (3) You could keep pairs of Madagascar and Blue-winged Lovebirds, Red-crested Cardinals, and Cockatiels with the Budgerigars, that is, if the aviary be large enough. (4) The books you name fully cover the ground, but a chapter is given to them in "Foreign Birds for Beginners," 1s. 1½d., post free, from our manager.

CAGE FOR ROSELLA (S.).—If for a room, then I fear you are reduced to the largest Parrot cage you can conveniently accommodate, or a box cage about 3ft. square at base, and the same height—a cage of 2ft. proportions would accommodate them, but there is always the danger of broken and frayed tail and wing feathers in restricted quarters. If you keep your birds in an outhouse, then a roomy, empty packing case, fitted with a wire-netting front, will meet the case in every way. Diet: A seed mixture of one quart each white millet and canary seed, one pint oats, half a pint each hemp, paddy rice, and sunflower seeds, one gill each shelled nuts and grit (not sand), well mix and keep supply in cage. Also supply green-food, fruit, plain biscuit, cuttlebone, and water for drinking and bathing.

HOW MANY? (S. Jordan).—I regret to damp your ardour, but if I read your dimensions aright—4½ft. long, 13in. broad, 2 2-3ft. high, with a flight 2½ft. long, 16in. broad, and 1½ft. high—you cannot keep a lot of sorts therein; you have barely room for three pairs of Budgerigars to have comfortable breeding quarters. You can try your luck with one pair each Budgerigars, Madagascar Lovebirds, and Blue-winged Lovebirds, and as you require variety an odd cock Red-crested Cardinal could be with them. You had better get our Nutshell "Budgerigars," 2½d., post free, from our manager—the treatment given therein will suffice for all the species named, but the Cardinal should receive in addition a piece of ripe banana and two mealworms or other insects twice a day.

BUDGERIGARS BREEDING (G. W. T.).—The general advice "leave them alone," is quite correct, but, inasmuch as the painter must compound his colours with common sense, even though he has learned that certain combinations give a certain tint, so in like manner the aviarist must apply the "general advice" of his text books. I will try and make it clearer, if all is going on well, the calling of the young will grow more lusty, and the death of one or more young should soon be evident, and then an examination should be made, and the body removed. Again, it is often easy, when the old birds are off, to see the interior of a nest by the aid of a hand-mirror, and after the young are a few days old, to get a peep inside while the old birds are foraging. In a table aviary there should be no difficulty.

THE CUBAN MOCKING-BIRD (C. Harrison).—There is all too little known of the outward sexual distinctions of many species; however, so far as our knowledge goes, there is little or no difference in the plumage of the sexes, but the males, as a rule, providing ages of specimens compared are about equal, are slightly purer in colour and richer in hue, but the difference is slight indeed. With the American species, M. polyglottus, the Rev. Farrar observed that the eye of his cock was gravel colour, and that of the hen green; but this observation stands alone. Some such feature may hold good with regard to Mimus orpheus, but I am not aware of it. As regards the mocking capacity, the reputation of polyglottus stands first, but orpheus comes very near, and is ahead in mocking capacity of the other birds you name; the comparison, however, is barely a fair one, as the cases are barely parallel.

JAVAS AND WAXBILLS (W. F. D.).—It is not right to say that almost anything can be kept together unless one knows something about the size of the aviary, certainly I have kept these together, and so have them now, breeding in the same aviary. Some have found Javas quarrelsome. I opine your Waxbills died from the exhaustion following importation. Again, if you want to leave them out all the winter. September is too late a month to put them out; very probably the cold inclement weather we have been having had something to do with their shuffling off. Certain British Finches are dangerous with small birds. You do not say what kind yours are? The bird dealer is a salesman not an aviculturist. Waxbills live almost entirely on millet, and should be supplied with both white and spray millet. You should get our Nutshell booklets on these species.

ROCK PARROT (Wild West).—(1) A seed mixture of one quart each canary seed and white millet, one pint each oats and hemp seed, half pint each paddy rice, wheat and sunflower seeds, one gill each shelled nuts and grit (not sand); well mix. Also supply ripe fruit, plain biscuits, green food, cuttlebone, and water. (2) Put half a teaspoonful of byno-phosphates into the usual supply of drinking water every other day. (3) You can only overcome this by kindness, finding out what it is specially fond of, and accustoming it to take this from your fingers. The same applies to screaming; it is mostly fear that prompts this. You must be quiet and steady while attending to it, and an entire absence of bustling movement in its vicinity till it is thoroughly accustomed to its quarters, and you all. (4) You can do nothing till it is quite tame, but it will hear talking going on, and when tame you can teach it by constant repetition, and it should soon prove responsive. You can check the screaming by covering the bird up when it is noisy, and then removing the covering when it is quiet again, but the covering up must be done steadily, and the bird must not be scared in the process—a Parrot soon recognises a punishment.

Pekin Robins Ill (A. M. Case).—In cases of this kind you should secure a reply per post at once (see rules). I am much afraid you will lose the birds, but if they should still be living when reply reaches you, there is still hope for them. Bathe the eyes with warm water, dab dry with soft cloth, then again bathe with a dilute rose-water and zinc eye solution. Keep the birds warm and out of draught, but not out of reach of light and air. Get a box of honey and borax and well mix a saltspoonful into the soft food mixture daily. Till the bowels are moving freely, give one teaspoonful of Dinneford's Magnesia in the usual supply of drinking water; follow this by a course of byno-phosphates, half teaspoonful in the usual supply of drinking water. Diet: Some good soft food mixture, ripe fruit, and live insects. Mealworms are the usual standby, but two or three garden spiders per bird daily will be excellent at this juncture. Also give some milk sop, prepared as follows: Neatle's milk one teaspoonful, crumbled sponge cake one tablespoonful, half teaspoonful Scott's Emulsion, mix just sloppy with boiling water; this will prove beneficial while the trouble lasts.

SHOW CAGE (Bert).—(1) The cage should be about 22in. long, 18in. high, and 11 to 13in. broad, with the perch or perches so placed that the bird is least likely to rub head or tail feathers. Pale sage green is a good colour for the interior. (2) So long as they were not so placed as to form a distinctive feature, there would be no objection. The zinc tray would be quite unnoticeable if fastened to a bar of wood fitting into the front of cage. The cages used by foreign bird exhibitors are so variable that each one is more or less distinct from another. You need not fear disqualification. (3) The food you refer to would be rather expensive for so large a bird, and the following will answer equally well: 1 part each ants' "eggs," fine ground crissel, game meal (without grit), and cod liver oil and cage bird food; these are all easily obtainable. After the mixture has been made crumbly moist, a portion of boiled potato, that has been passed through a masher, can be stirred in. Ripe fruit and some live insects should be given daily.

FOREIGN BIRD QUERISTS

should consult Page's "Foreign Birds for Beginners" (1/1½); Arthur's "Budgerigars and Cockatiels" (6d.); Arthur's "Parrots for Pleasure and Profit" (7d.); "Aviaries, Bird-rooms, and Cages" (2/3); "Seeds, Foods, and Wild Plants" (1/2); Dr. Clarke's "Septic or Bird Fever" (7d.); Dr. Creswell's "Hygiene of Bird-keeping" (1/1); "Colour-feeding" (3½d.); or the "Nutshell" booklets (2½d. each): No. 6 "Ailing Birds and How to Cure them," No. 9 "The Disinfection of Cages, Bird-rooms, etc.," No. 14 "Gouldian Finches," No. 16 "Avadavats," No. 17 "The Grey Parrot," No. 18 "Budgerigars," No. 19 "The Pekin Robin," No. 20 "Waxbills." All thoroughly practical and instructive. Prices quoted are post free from "Cage Birds," 154, Fleet St., London, E.C.

Boiled rice, milk puddings and milk sop may all be given—table scraps and leavings (vegetables and meat) may be given it to pick over. Of course, you must keep a caged bird under observation, as it does not get the exercise of a wild bird, and see that it does not get too fat. The wild diet is, as it were, a pattern for us to go by, but to give the full wild diet in unstinted quantity would soon kill it, under the conditions of cage life.

TREES, ETC., FOR FLIGHT (C. E. Johnson).—(1) I have had no experience with the tree you name, but I should say it would be all right; however, the common laurel, fir, box, and privet all make good aviary trees, and the evergreens named form excellent shelter in wet weather. (2) So long as hay seed is fresh it will answer well enough, or ripe grass seed gathered from meadow and hedgerow may be used, but I also advise the planting of one or two tussocks of coarse grass, and a few old crowns of dock, mallow and cow-parsley. (3) Clarke's syphon gas stove I prefer to any other, but I always prefer to have a pipe to outside for the exhaust products, though the makers state this is not necessary—all stoves should be placed out of reach of gusts of wind. I never recommend oil apparatus for such purpose. (4) Some husks should be outside in the most sheltered positions obtainable, or a shelf put up, and the husks hung up under same. I should not confine myself to husks entirely, but use boxes, Hartz travelling cages, etc., as well.

JAPANESE BUNTING, ETC. (Tanager).—(1) The Japanese Bunting may be sketchily described as bright chestnut above and yellow beneath, with a brown patch on the throat. The hen is much duller and lacks the throat patch of the male. It has the average Bunting song. (2) The Finch-Larks are mostly ashy-brown washed more or less with rufous, with patches of black or dark rufous in the respective species. They are ground feeders and nesters, living on seeds and hard insects. In captivity, supply seed, soft food and insects (especially beetles), and green food. (3) I have not taken as much notice as I should have done of popular names, neither have I handled any of the species sold as Nonette Finches, but I have seen specimens of one of the races of Spice birds, that had been bought as such, but I will look the matter up and insert the result in this column later. (4) I think the small Dove you have is a Passerine, but if you care to send me a full description of its plumage, I will confirm this or otherwise.

BRITISH BIRDS, MULES AND HYBRIDS.

Answered by C. E. WESTON.

BABY MAGPIES (Joan Edwards).—The trouble you mention may have been due to the raw meat, which I should give us seldom as possible, and see that it is sweet (fresh) and good. Trapped mice sparrows, and the like, in my opinion, are much to be preferred to raw meat obtained from the butchers. The Magpie ought to winter very comfortably indeed in the large place you describe. Dig the ground over well and then wait seven days before you return him. The perches should be of a good thickness; ordinary long broom handles are excellent. Feed on these lines: Puppy cakes, or dog meal or food (such as "Melox") thoroughly soaked with hot water and reduced to a kind of pulpy consistency, will rear Magpies, Jays, etc.

splendidly; very cheaply too. Minced hard-boiled egg can be added or given separately. As the birds grow, give some meat chopped into tiny pieces (beef or mutton), or rabbit flesh, which I prefer to the others. When adult, the "Melox" or similar dog food, answers admirably, though, of course, not made so "sloppy"; add table scraps of meat, vegetables, gravy, and the like; also give dead mice, sparrows, bettles, small snails, gentles, etc., frequently. They are very accommodating in the matter of appetite.

A THRUSH'S TROUBLES (Paddy).—Stir three or four drops of Condy's fluid into the bird's drinking water (give it fresh twice daily) for a time. This will quite likely put an end to the symptoms you describe. Use only a glass or earthenware water vessel (not tin or zinc), one that holds about four tablespoonfuls—not less. I take it that you are quite sure the symptoms are not those of a cold?

A TRIO OF BERRIES (J. Smith).—The large berry is that of the dog rose, eaten by Mistle and other Thrushes, but not, I fancy, much liked, being devoured only when other berries are scarce during very hard weather. The small, deep red berry is that of the hawthorn, popular as a food with many species of birds. The very bright red berries are those of the woody nightshade (or bitter-sweet), and as this plant is a close relative of the deadly nightshade (very poisonous) I should be dubious about offering them to birds.

AN AILING LINNET (G.B.).—Give one more dose of the syrup of buckthorn; leave it on the cage for 24 hours. Follow with a course of the citrate of iron and quinine, as advised G. Pittis this week, but use only as much as will cover a threepenny bit, and in two tablespoonfuls of water. Am afraid it is doubtful whether your bird can hope to recover, as it was very queer when you penned your letter, judging by the symptoms you mention. Offer it plenty of seeding shepherd's purse and plantain, and thistle heads broken open to expose the seed.

AN OLD SUBSCRIBER.—The biscuit meal (a mixture of coarse crissel and broken dog biscuit), of which you send a sample, would be suitable only for large, coarse-feeding softbill birds, such as Magpies, Jays and the like, and would need thoroughly soaking in hot water before being given to them. In its present state it has only a very limited field of use so far as cage birds are concerned. I cannot speak as to its monetary value; it seems to me identical with the hound meal sold very cheaply by the majority of corn and forage stores.

TWO BULLFINCHES (Canary-Bullie).—It sometimes happens that a bird when moulting throws off its plumage so suddenly as to exhibit patches of bare flesh (on breast or head) and maybe this is all that has happened to your two Bullies, seeing that the other two kept under similar conditions are moulting so nicely. Are they all together, or caged separately? Anyway, it would be best to keep these two birds in a place free from damp and draughts and not too cold (it is very unfavourable weather at the moment) until their plumage returns to a normal state. Don't give hemp seed as a regular thing; I am continually saying that it is not a good thing for Bullfinches. Substitute teazle seed (one pint). Drop the egg-food now, but give seeding greenstuff freely. If you suspect the presence of insects, consult the chapter on parasites in the article on "Diseases" which appears in CAGE BIRDS ANNUAL. It will tell you how to detect them and how to treat both birds and cages. If there are no insects, spray the birds very lightly once daily with a solution of boric acid (half an ounce in a pint of water). A scent spray can be utilised for this purpose. Don't make the birds very wet and bedraggled; direct the solution chiefly on the bare parts.

CONCERNING THRUSHES (G. Pittis).—There is a good deal of difference 'twixt Mistle (or Missel) and Song Thrushes. The former is considerably the larger of the two; the markings of the breast are different, being shaped like a spear-head near the throat, but becoming broad (almost crescent-shaped) on the abdomen and flanks; the outer tail feathers are tipped with white underneath; the under wing coverts are white (golden orange in the case of the Song Thrush). It is possible the older bird you mention is a hen. Hens will "record," but in a more disjointed manner, and not so loudly. You seem to be feeding the birds very well indeed, though I should advise you to add half-a-pound of meat meal to the quantity of powdered biscuit and packet Thrush food which you mention. Stop all vegetable ingredients in the case of the bird whose excrement is watery, and add a teaspoonful of ground rice to its soft food every day. In the drinking-water (three tablespoonfuls) dissolve as much crystals of citrate of iron and quinine as will, when crushed, lie on a sixpenny piece. Get half-an-ounce of the crystals from a chemist. Mix this fresh daily and continue for five or six days, as may seem necessary,

GENERAL.

Answered by THE EDITOR.

H. Boothman.—Kindly note that club notices must reach us on Tuesday (or first post Wednesday at latest) to secure insertion in our issue of the same week.

W. Clark.—We have forwarded your communication on to Mr. Rudd.

E. Travis.—We think that the firm you require is the Wire Wove Roofing Company, 108, Queen Victoria Street, London, E.C.

J. Rukin.—We have the names correctly on your letter.

R. H. Gardner.—We have given this method of ventilation several times before, and it is described and illustrated in some of our books.

Enquirer.—Kindly note rule 8 under heading "Questions and Answers." We cannot publish a letter such as yours; it would render us liable under the law of libel. If the conditions of sale were as you state, you can easily recover the value of the birds through the County Court. With regard to the aviary, submit a rough design and specification to various makers, and get their prices for the work (there are makers in your city, we fancy). By the way, you do not sign your name to your letter.

T. C.—In the West Riding of Yorkshire the close time is betwen the last day of February and the 12th day of August. Except in a few districts Sunday catching is prohibited throughout the year. Further, many of the species kept by bird-keepers are protected all the year round, including the Bullfinch, Buntings (all), Chaffinch, Crossbill, Cuckoo, Dipper, Goldfinch, Larks, Linnet, Nuthatch, Pipits (all), Lesser and Mealy Redpolls, Shrikes, Siskin, Song Thrush, Tits (all), Twite, Wagtails (all); also practically all of the insectivorous birds (Nightingale, Woodpeckers, Warblers, etc.).

Practical Handbooks for Bird Lovers.

AVIARIES, BIRD-ROOMS, AND CAGES, 2/3 (cloth gilt).—By H. Norman. Contains ten lovely full-page photographic plates. A practical guide which deals thoroughly with the proper Building, Fitting, and Management of Aviaries and Bird-rooms, and the making of Cages.

YORKSHIRE CANARIES, 1/1½.—By H. W. Battye (Past President of the Yorkshire Union). Absolutely the very best Handbook dealing with the Yorkshire and its sub-varieties. Contains complete instructions upon Pairing, Breeding, Moulting, and successful Exhibiting, also how to treat in both health and disease.

NORWICH CANARIES, 1/1.—By C. A. House. Tells the fancier all that he needs to know to enable him to become successful as a breeder and exhibitor of the Norwich Plainhead. The chapters on "Forming a Stud," and "How to Produce the Ideal" are worth the cost of the whole book many times over.

THE SECRETS OF HYBRID BREEDING REVEALED AND EXPLAINED.—By many notable Mule and Hybrid Breeders. Among the contributors are such well-known breeders as Messrs. R. Colton, W. H. Vale, C. Houlton, C. J. Ward, J. Beswick, G. Lander, T. H. Kinch, T. Smith, etc. This Handbook, which contains 212 pages, 7 inches by 5, is brimful of the most practical information on the highly interesting subject of Hybrid Breeding. Price 1/-, post free 1/2.

PARROTS FOR PLEASURE AND PROFIT, 7d.—By C. P. Arthur. A practical handbook, dealing with the keeping, feeding, and general treatment of the Grey, the Amazon, etc. It explains how to sex these birds, the treatment of newly imported specimens, and cures for their various ills.

SEEDS, FOODS, AND WILD PLANTS FOR CAGE BIRDS, 1/2. — By various leading authors. Full information on the seeds suitable for all cage birds, their food values, uses, etc., with descriptions and illustrations of the wild plants indispensable to the successful keeping of British and other birds.

HOUSE'S CANARY MANUAL, 1/2.—By C. A. House. A thorough, practical guide to the general management and breeding of Canaries, dealing fully with the breeding, etc., of every member of the Canary family, including the Roller (or Singing) Canary. An illustration of each bird, by the master Canary artist, Mr. H. Norman; exhaustive chapters on aviaries and cages, breeding procedure, moulting, exhibiting, diseases, and seeds—a compendium of knowledge.

BUDGERIGARS AND COCKATEELS, 6d.—By C. P. Arthur. The breeding of Budgerigars and Cockateels is recognised as one of the most profitable and pleasure-giving sides of foreign bird-keeping. This eminent authority gives very full details upon how to keep, feed, breed, tame, and teach them to talk.

FOREIGN BIRDS FOR BEGINNERS, 1/1½.—By W. T. Page, F.Z.S., etc., Foreign Bird Expert to "Cage Birds." A highly instructive Manual. It contains a magnificent coloured plate and a number of black and white illustrations. Indispensable to all keepers of Foreign Birds. Replete with useful hints.

BRITISH BIRD MANUAL, 2/3 (cloth bound).—By H. Norman; or may be had in two parts. Part 1: "Hardbills," and Part 2: "Softbills." Either Part, price 1/1, post free. Each part contains a beautiful and life-like coloured plate and numerous illustrations of birds and cages. Up-to-date information on the keeping of British Birds; full of extremely valuable hints.

THE STOCK BOOK, 7d.—By G. E. Weston. Of our invaluable "Breeding Room Register" a well-known fancier has said:—"It makes bird-breeding easy." No breeder of birds can possibly afford to be without it. It simplifies the operations in the bird-room and makes it possible for everyone, even the veriest novice, to breed his birds as they should be bred. Contains both Pedigree, Breeding, Young Bird, and Show Registers of simple and unique character, in addition to useful account pages, and many invaluable "Hints for Emergencies."

BIRDS OF THE COUNTRYSIDE, 5/4.—By Frank Finn, B.A., F.Z.S. A handbook to the wild life of all our familiar British birds; their appearance and habits accurately described. With 12 beautiful coloured plates, and 118 photographic illustrations. A charming gift book.

PETS, AND HOW TO KEEP THEM, 5/4.—By Frank Finn, B.A., F.Z.S. Gives the correct method of housing, feeding, and managing every kind of pet; all sorts of animals are dealt with—monkeys, dogs, cats, lizards, tortoises, also gold and other fancy fish, while there is a large section devoted to birds. Contains many coloured plates and photographs. Another charming gift book.

FANCIERS' PRINTING.—Fanciers requiring business notepaper, postcards, trade envelopes, etc., should write us for a quotation. We are now in a position to supply these at specially low rates combined with first-class work. Artistic memos., with block of any desired bird, and fancier's name, address, and 12 words of description, 250 2/-, 500 2/6, carriage paid.

CAGE-BIRD HYBRIDS.—Published in 8 Monthly Parts at 6d. each, post free 7d. Complete bound in cloth, 7/6 carriage paid. This great work is written by Charles Houlton, an authority with a reputation extending over 25 years as a leading exhibitor and a leading expert and judge; (associate editors, G. E. Weston and C. A. House). Magnificently illustrated by that great bird artist, H. Norman. There are no less than sixteen coloured and sixteen art plates in this work. Each plate is a perfect study of an individual Hybrid. Every plate shows the correct colour, the correct shape, the present day type and general characteristics of a modern Hybrid. The practical and comprehensive work for which all Hybrid breeders have been waiting.

COLOUR FEEDING OF CANARIES AND OTHER BIRDS, 3½d.—By J. W. Ramsden. Tells you how to mix the colour-food, and how to moult the birds to get the richest possible colour.

CANARY BREEDING FOR BEGINNERS, 7d.—By Claude St. John. A Practical, up-to-date guide to Canary breeding, designed specially for the use of the beginner. Deals very fully with the choice, sexing, and mating of the birds, feeding for condition, the cages and their fittings, the bird-room, egg-food, nest-building, rearing and moulting the young, colour-feeding, training for show, and all the difficulties likely to confront the breeder.

Wild Birds which Carry Marking Rings.

A Mistle Thrush from Yorkshire.

Sir,—I think it might interest readers to know that a Mistle Thrush was shot here (Hebden Bridge, Yorks) to-day (Sept. 16) with the enclosed ring on its leg bearing this inscription: Witherby, High Holborn, London.

Fancier.

[The number on the ring is 17458. We hope readers will send us particulars of all birds caught or shot which carry marking rings on their legs, and give the number (this is most important), or forward the ring. By so doing they will be lending valuable help to the study of bird distribution and migration.—Editor.]

New Society for Boscombe and District.

Sir,—At a meeting held Sept. 11th with reference to proposed new society for Boscombe and District, Hants, it was decided by a good attendance of fanciers to form a society with a membership radius of 15 miles from Boscombe Station, L.S.W. The subscription to be within the means of the working man fancier, namely, 2s. 6d. per year and shilling entrance fee. Our next meeting will be held at the Railway Hotel, Holdenhurst Road, on Tuesday, Sept. 24th, at 8 p.m., to elect members and officers for the year. Those wishing to join kindly accept this invitation to do so. There is a separate entrance apart from hotel entrance for those wishing to use it, the clubroom being a seperate building.

Wake Up, Traders!

Sir,—I can thoroughly sympathise with Mr. Oglethorpe with regard to the unbusinesslike methods adopted by some traders. I have written to several myself offering surplus stock, either for cash or exchange, but I have only had one reply. A London dealer asked me to send on the birds, and he would exchange me to value, either a dog, rabbits, or other live stock. I despatched two Canary hens to him, which, he said, were worth 4s. 6d. to him. I then wrote and told him to allow himself a reasonable profit and send me cash instead of live stock, and I was willing to accept whatever amount he was prepared to give. Imagine my disgust when two days later a hen Bullfinch arrived, carriage forward, and inside the box, which contained the bird, was a note which read:—"Dear Sir, I am sending you a hen Budgerigar, which is in grand breeding condition.—Yours, etc. ——." (I won't give his name). Needless to say, he will not get any more birds from me, and I shall do all in my power to prevent others from being so swindled. I immediately gave the bird its liberty. I am glad to say I have not seen his advt. lately. Of course, all dealers are not like this one, by any means. I have found one dealer at Norwich to be a thorough businesslike gentleman, and if others would follow his example we should find fewer advts. with the words added "No dealers," which gives me the impression that a good many fanciers have been similarly dealt with to myself.

W. Hainsworth.

Sir,—Replying to your correspondent re "Wake up Traders," perhaps this will explain a little. I quote my own case in point. On August 31st, I advertised a stock of British, which I had had on hand for weeks, at a cheap rate for quick disposal, and the replies, orders, and personal calls I received far and above exceeded my expectations. The result was that by first post Monday all I had on hand were accounted for, and all surplus orders which came afterwards (and these were numerous) I took the trouble to write the senders personally and explain that I had sold out, but that having a further consignment due to arrive that week-end, I would dispatch as early as possible the following week, asking for a day or two's grace to allow for these birds getting on to hard seed, which is a most important point before sending on a railway journey, otherwise the result is loss to the buyers, and unless replaced, loss of custom to the sender. Mr. Oglethorpe ought to know that this latter point is one which the dealer has to seriously consider (if his reputation is to be maintained). Personally, I have always made it a rule to keep all British species from ten to fourteen days before offering them for sale, in order to save disappointment on both sides, and if unable to execute an order within two days of its receipt, I have notified the senders promptly to that effect, and enclosed explanation. If all dealers, catchers, etc., large or small, would inform their customers in this way (the cost is little) I personally think the grievance Mr. G. O. complains of would be greatly mitigated, but I rather fancy that it is the extra trouble and expense that fears them. Another point: The largest dealers are the worst offenders in this respect; I have personally proved this. Note: I stopped my advt. in consequence of being sold out.

Has 1912 Been a Good Year for Breeding?

Sir,—I should like to read the opinion of our large (or even small) breeders on this season's breeding. As regards the weather, I think that cannot be blamed very much for any failures. It has not been too hot so as to cause the "Mite" to be troublesome like last year; neither too dry, though I believe this year there have been more reports of young dying in the shell than usual. I believe, however, that on the whole, there are not so many complaints of hens not feeding.

A "Tip" for Keepers of Insectivorous Birds.

Sir,—Fanciers of Softbills all know the difficulty there is in keeping the feet of their birds clean; also the perches. I get four thin strips of wood, a little less in length and breadth than my cage, so as to fit in nicely, and nail together as a frame (see sketch). This I cover with ½-inch wire netting. Get a pennyworth of binding wire and bind tightly round the wood. Then get four pieces of stout wire and bend to shape of S, for the corners, to hook on inside cage. Take out drawboard and push in frame, and fix, and your Softbills will always be in show condition. The netting does the feet no harm, as I know from long experience.

Josephine's Strange Baby.

A Dove Hatches Out a Bantam.

Sir,—I have a tame Dove which has succeeded in hatching a bantam's egg after two failures. On the 21st day of incubation I could not hear a sound, so concluded this third egg was a failure. On the 22nd day "Joey" (my Dove) was off the egg fully eight hours, when towards night she became restless. Imagine my surprise on hearing a slight sound in the egg; "Joey," too, in fact, evidently thought before long she was to have a live chick, for she started trying to feed it through the shell! It hatched late at night on the 23rd day, so I now think that the other two eggs would have hatched if only we had had patience. Josephine was very proud of her baby, but could not understand it not letting her feed it. She brooded it for the first fortnight, but now the naughty little bantam chases his mother round, and more often nestles down with my little Yorkshire Terrier, or on my shoulder, than he does with the Dove. I should very much like to know if any other reader has had a Dove succeed with a similar hatch.

Does Hemp Seed Ruin Canaries?

Our correspondent holds that it causes old birds to go out of condition and kills young birds by making them "go light."

Sir,—An expert some time ago wrote on the dangers attending the use of hemp seed. It is a most popular seed during the breeding season, but it is nevertheless a dangerous one to use, according to my experience of it. The 1910 season was the best I have yet experienced. I put together nineteen hens and seven cocks, and I bred from these 138 youngsters. This was accomplished without the use of hemp seed. It came about like this. I put my birds together on March 17. All were then in good condition, and kept so until the first round of youngsters appeared. Then my hens started with looseness of the bowels, and though I tried hard to keep them clean I found myself utterly beaten. What was the cause? I had been feeding on three-parts Spanish canary and one part German rape before the youngsters came, and then in went the crushed hemp. I had 12lbs. of this in the room at the time, and I made up my mind to get rid of it. I opened the window and threw the lot out; the fowls that came nibbling my rape seedlings had a banquet. The looseness in my birds continued for a week, when it gradually stopped, and I had no further trouble on that score. The excreta of my birds now became small, whitish, and of a hard nature, while my birds threw off their dumpiness and put on something like the appearance of Yorkshires. I have never known or seen a case of "going light" when the young are being fed by the parent birds. It is when the young are seven or eight weeks old, and are just about to drop into moult that the disease starts. The young bird is very hungry, and is hardly ever away from the seed box for the first two days, and the more they eat the thinner they get, often emptying the hopper and then getting bodily into it in their eagerness to satisfy their hunger. They get very dumpy and hang their wings down in a twitching manner, and their beautiful eyes lose their black lustre, and "wink" very quickly. In three or four days the birds settle in the corner of the cage, where you find them dead. I am quite satisfied in my own mind that hemp has a lot to do with this disease, and never again will a grain of it enter my birdroom. Last year, owing to an accident with my stock, I only bred 83 birds. This year I have bred from nineteen hens and six cocks 118 youngsters. During these three seasons I have lost only three birds with the "going light" disease, and this season I haven't lost one. I have had a few young showing symptoms of the disease, but I have got them right by the following method:—As soon as I see the young bird ailing I put it in a large cage by itself, give it access to plenty of Spanish canary seed, and milk sop sweetened with honey, and fill the cage with wild seeds, such as dandelion heads, shepherd's purse, and chickweed, also scatter amongst the grit Quaker oats, which I rub between my hands. My birdroom is packed with birds that have been seen by a good many Leigh fanciers, and "going light," the worst disease the fancier has to face, holds no terrors for me.

Are Canaries Too Old at Three?

Sir,—I thought it might interest "A Fancier Senghenydd," to know that I bred my winning Norwich at Harlech Show of last week from a six year old cock (a big winner himself). The hen was ten months old. He fertilised 16 eggs this season. Re clipping them around the vent, personally I have been successful in breeding without doing this. I wish our fancier friend better luck next season. If he will follow the information given in Cage Birds, I say he, like myself, will succeed.

Harlech. J. E. Jones.

Sir,—With regard to your correspondent's letter I have a cock Canary nine years old. Last year I bred from him with one hen 22 young ones (four nests), and this year 13 (three nests). He has just finished his moult, and is in fine condition, singing all day long, and I hope to breed from him again next year.

Suggested Cage Bird Society for Buckinghamshire.

Sir,—I think there are so many fanciers in Bucks that it would be quite possible to run a good society, and to hold a show once in a year with such societies as Maidenhead, Aylesbury, and High Wycombe. Perhaps some abler fancier could offer some suggestions through your valuable paper, such as Messrs. Hawes Brothers or Mr. Botoler. I for one should, providing the secretary be willing, be glad to join in a meeting for same at Maidenhead Show, which I believe is to be held in November. I should like to hear the views of the secretaries of the above-named societies, as I think such an association is bound to benefit their shows. I think a good classification for the first show would be: British Finches, one class for large and one for small; Softbills, one each large and small; Norwich, four classes; Yorks, four; A.O.V. Canary, one; and two for foreign, one large, one small. Perhaps we could find room for one novice class in each Canary section, and I hope to see this taken up.

The Breeding of Rare Hybrids.

Sir,—I am pleased each week to read notices of success from fanciers who are trying for the rarer Hybrids. One of the most interesting crosses is the Bramblefinch-Canary. Now if a bird from this cross can be raised, it will solve a very interesting problem. Perhaps it will be accomplished at the first time of asking. I have tried, however, for over ten years to get the Bramblefinch to pair with a Canary, using both green, clear, yellow, buff and cinnamon. But I could never get a fertile egg. Even this failure, though, does not convince me that it cannot be done. Where one fails, another can succeed, and often at the first attempt. I am also pleased to see that some fanciers have raised Greenfinch-Bullfinch young. I should like to ask if anyone has yet had any success, or fertile eggs, from the Chaffinch-Bullie? I expect it will come before long; also that supposed impossible cross, the Chaffinch-Canary. I hope breeders will give their experiences and their luck in Cage Birds. Perhaps some fanciers may have been fortunate in getting fertile eggs, or raising a Hybrid from insectivorous birds in aviaries where their species are kept.

An Old Hybrid Lover.

Is the Reported Siskin-Bullfinch Hybrid Authentic?

Sir,—I read with great interest the letter signed "Happy Result," in which the writer stated that a working-man in Edinburgh had produced two genuine Siskin-Bullfinch Hybrids. As an Edinburgh man myself, I was delighted and proud. But on making enquiries amongst fellow fanciers of the city, I find that the report is about that they are doubtful—in fact, a good judge who has seen them considers that the youngsters show no trace of Bullfinch parentage at all. This is a sad blow to me, I can tell you; but, anyway, it is better that we should know at once whether our swans are merely geese than to go on in the belief that this good cross has been produced. It is impossible that a genuine Siskin-Bullfinch could be mistaken; it is bound to show the cross plain enough, the same as the Greenfinch-Chaffinch did, and all genuine Hybrids do. Can "Happy Result" give us any more information; also, will he please sign his name, so that we may know whether he is a judge of a Hybrid, or not?

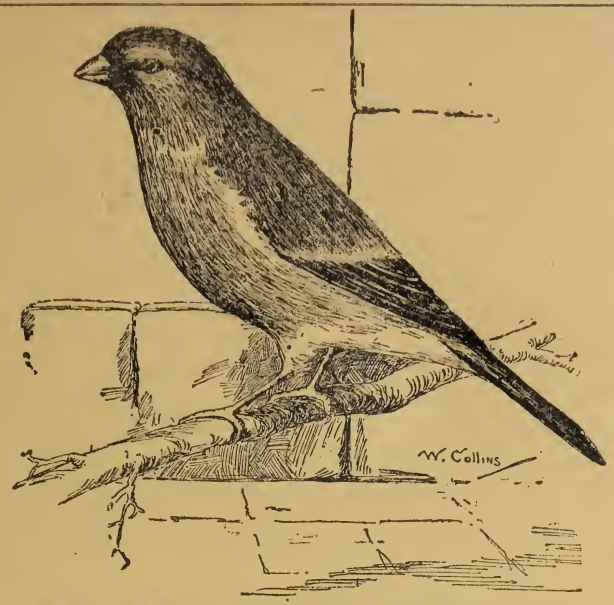
Some Absurdities of Bird Protection Orders.

A correspondent says that other counties are less sensible than Surrey.



Sir,—As one much interested in the question of bird protection, I feel compelled to take up arms in defence of the Surrey County Council, whose schedule—to my mind a very sensible one, as county schedules go—has been held up to ridicule in the issue of your excellent paper for Sept. 7, in the column entitled "Some absurdities of Bird Protection Orders." The grounds of attack appear to be that, in the first place, the schedule is incomplete, and should have included Greenfinches, Tree Sparrow, Larks, Blackbirds, Thrushes, Bullfinches, Chaffinches, Hawfinches, Jays, Magpies, Jackdaws, Starlings, Blue and Great Tits, Pipits, Tree-creepers, Hedge-sparrows, Buntings, Bramblings, Ring-Ouzels, Waxwings, and Blue-headed Wagtails. Out of this list, however, it seems to me that the only perfectly harmless species which are at all common in Surrey, and might therefore have been expected to have been granted protection, are Pipits, Tree-creepers, Hedge-sparrows, Bramblings, and Buntings. None of the first fourteen in the sequence in which I have placed them can be considered completely free from destructive propensities, and a few are very bad indeed—even the Great and Blue Tits sometimes work sad havoc in the orchard during the late winter months, sound and diseased buds being alike pulled to pieces in wholesale fashion. And why, above all, protect that pilferer of eggs and slayer of nestlings, the Jackdaw, whose ever increasing hordes are steadily driving from their last strongholds our few remaining Choughs? Then as to the Ring-Ouzels; I may be wrong, but surely Surrey knows these birds only as infrequent visitors on migration! And lastly, Waxwings and Blue-headed Wagtails—beautiful birds undoubtedly, and worthy of protection, but not more so surely than Black Redstarts, White Wagtails, and a hundred other equally rare wanderers whose omission from the list is not apparently considered a reproach. The Crested Tit, it is true, has so far proved strangely unwilling to establish itself anywhere but in the valley of the Spey. But there is no real reason why a colony, started perhaps by migrants from the Continent, should not take up its abode in Surrey pine-woods, and if it did, it would be a sad pity if it were exposed to the unchecked ravages of collectors. Similarly, the extension of the close time for summer migrants may not do much good, but surely, on the other hand, it does no harm, and is it not conceivable that the names were allowed to stand merely to avoid the unnecessary and cumbersome addition of a second schedule? Lastly, what harm does it do if a few birds are killed out of the vast winter flocks of Fieldfares and Redwings? And if by some chance a pair of either did, for the first time on record attempt to breed, surely a most interesting and satisfactory result would be attained, if they were able to rear their young in peace. Such then are my reasons for considering that Surrey has been very hardly treated in being held up to derision for its bird protective legislation, a fate far better deserved by certain Midland counties (such as Beds) which protects under the most outlandish names certain seafowl never met with within its confines! My own opinion, which you may perhaps share, is that no efficient bird protection will ever be secured until all the existing laws are repealed, and new enactments passed by which the killing of any bird is made illegal throughout the year, with, however, numerous exceptions in the case of destructive species or those providing sport for the wildfowler. These should receive such measure of protection as circumstances demand.

A Bird Lover Who Does Not Live In Surrey.

[The above letter was referred by us to our contributor, and his reply follows.—Editor.]

Sir,—I am sorry that your correspondent seems to have misconstrued the meaning of my note. It was a matter of no regret to me that the schedule was incomplete. What I intended to point out was the absurdity of making a partial list of birds for protection and leaving out without rhyme or reason quite an equal number, with the result that, among other instances, the Coal Tit was protected and the Blue Tit left unprotected. Further, I called attention to the fact that many of the birds which were in the protected list were not in this country at all during the period covered by the extension, while birds which were in this country only during that period were omitted. I quite agree with your correspondent that many of the birds are open to the charge of being destructive to crops. Indeed, I would go further, and say that with very few exceptions all birds are injurious to crops at one season or other of the year. But the injury that birds do during the season covered by the extension order, September to February, is infinitesimal compared with that effected by them during the spring and summer, and its consideration need not enter into the argument at all. As for the Jackdaws, I think if they were exterminated altogether no one would grumble, least of all the dwellers in the north country towns whose chimneys get choked up by the sticks carried by these birds. Your correspondent is, of course, correct in saying that Surrey knows the Ring Ouzels infrequently. The same is true of some of the birds which are especially protected by the extension order. Why include the Crested Tit, for instance, and leave out the Ring Ouzel? Referring to the Crested Tit, my critic says, "There is no real reason why this bird should not take up its abode in the Surrey pinewoods." Might I suggest as a reason the fact that in our northern hemisphere birds live as far north as possible, and that while the Crested Tit can find its sustenance in our northern pine-woods it will not come south for it? This again, however, does not affect my criticism of the Surrey schedule. I am not suggesting that more birds should be added to the schedule, but only wish to emphasise the lack of knowledge apparent on the part of those who drew it up. That there are, according to your correspondent, other county councils which deserve greater criticism, does not alter the matter at all. It is just a matter of degree; some bad, some worse. I agree that all the existing laws should be repealed and new enactments passed, but I cannot imagine who is to decide which birds are destructive and which are not. There is, after all, only one portion of my critic's letter with which I am at variance, and that is the concluding portion. Why in the name of goodness should a person be debarred from catching a bird to keep as a pet, or a number of birds to sell to those who desire them as pets, and thus earn food for himself and family, while a man with a gun should be free to enjoy his sport on account of birds "providing sport for the wildfowler" being left unprotected simply because someone wants to kill them? "These should receive only such measure of protection as circumstances demand." Who is to decide the measure? The Wildfowler?

Pussy Defeated.

A fledgling Blackbird in a garden at Peterborough had alighted on the garden walk, and was making vain attempts to fly up again when the parent birds, who were watching it with evident concern from the top of the wall, observed a black cat stealing towards their offspring. They promptly flew to the rescue. One perched on the cat's head and pecked it vigorously, while the other alighted on pussy's back and tore out beakfuls of fur. The cat beat a hasty retreat.

*A Rude Remark.

One day my mother went for a walk with her little Yorkshire terrier, and when looking into a garden she saw another little terrier with which she tried to make friends. She was annoyed to hear a voice saying, "Look after your own dog, Missus." But when mother looked round she saw it was only a Parrot talking, which hung in a cage. A Humorous Parrot Chaffs an Old Man.

The other day a man was working in one of father's fields, when a Parrot that had escaped flew up to him and started saying "Come on, come on." Out of curiosity the man followed him. The bird flew from one place to another still calling, "Come on, come on." At last he flew up on to a telephone pole and shouted, "Come on." The man could not follow him there, so he started to call to the Parrot, "Come on, come on." At this the bird flew down and dropped close by the man's feet, who tried to catch him, but the Parrot did not want to be caught and flew off, and nothing more was seen of him. It seemed quite a joke to play on an old man.—Sent by Beatrice Bayliss (age 13), 14, Tibbington Terrace, Prince's End, Tipton, Staffs.

*Where Did He Go?

Listen whilst I tell you
My sad, sad tale of woe.
Oh, where, oh, can you tell me,
Where did my Robin go?
We found him one cold morning
A year or more ago.
"Tweet, tweet"! he chirrupped sadly,
As he shivered in the snow.
We took him in and fed him
All through the winter long.
He used to be my playmate,
And cheer me with his song.
But when the long bright spring days
Returned, he restless grew;
And one bright morning, flew away,
To where—I never knew.
I often wish I had him
When falls the white, white snow.
Oh where, oh, can you tell me,
Where did my Robin go?

To Remove Birdlime.

Some people like to catch a few birds, and don't know how to clean them. I find a handful of flour will clean quite two dozen birds.—E. Sadler (Bottom Cliff Road, Sheringham).

To Teach Bathing.

[Winner of Half-crown Prize.]

Get a piece of coker matting, about three feet square, or according to size of flight; place bath in centre and some tit-bits (chickweed I use) on matting, which will entice all down. In this way those that do not take to bathing get splashed by others; it teaches them; the matting is a good foothold.—R. Brett (New England, Sible Hedingham, Essex).

When Hens Pluck Young Ones.

If Canary hen start plucking tails from youngsters, take them away, put in a roomy cage. If they go dull and will not pick up egg-food, try milk sop, also boiled rape-seed, drained and cold; put into small vessels in the cage; also water well coloured with chemical food. I have tried this remedy, and saved a lot of youngsters; they start picking up at once.—A. Eddy (6, Bellevue Terrace, Penzance).

Perch Ends as Reens.

The following will be found useful for keeping the bills of birds in good condition. Make some thin glue and put the ends of your (clean) perches into the glue-pot for about 1½ inches. Sprinkle with fine sand (silver sand is excellent) and put aside to dry.—W. J. Morgan (16, Moira Place, Cardiff).

Plaster of Paris v. Red Mite.

Old cages can be made very serviceable, and one need not be afraid to use them. Get some plaster of Paris and mix with water, making a fairly stiff paste; brush well into the joints and crevices, with a small brush, and place cage out of doors. It will dry very quickly and be a bit too hard for Mr. Red Mite. Only one dressing is necessary if fairly stiff. Unlike ordinary paint, it will not rub off.—John W. Harrison, Houghton, Walsingham, Norfolk.

In Colour Feeding.

Birds sometimes leave bread or biscuit that is impregnated with colour, and both are thereby wasted. By the following method the birds will eat 100 per cent. of the colour-food: After mincing the egg thoroughly, add your usual quantity of colour food. Mix, then leave for about twelve hours, afterwards adding bread or biscuit. You will then find that the birds eat the whole of the egg, which has the colour food, also the bread or biscuit, which is only slightly tinted by the colour.—F. G. Ball (Shotton, Chester).

The Length of the Exhibition Norwich Plainhead.

Fanciers of Canary City favour abolishing 6½ inch Standard

THE correspondence which recently appeared in our columns concerning the type of the present-day Norwich Plainhead will be fresh in the minds of our readers. It was then mentioned that a meeting was to be held in Norwich to consider the matter. At this, it was decided that so far as the shows in Norwich were concerned, judging by the length limit (six and a half inches) should be abolished. The following notes on the proceedings are taken from "J.E.N.'s" column in the "Eastern Evening News":—

The meeting convened for the purpose of discussing the standard of the Norwich Plainhead Canary has been held, and as I anticipated, the length limit is to be abolished, and fanciers are destined to breed birds larger proportioned, the length of them not to be so much considered as heretofore. But the result of this meeting cannot really be called very definite either way, there being but a meagre majority of five. The large room of the Orford Arms was not crowded as one would have wished to have seen, but there were representatives of the Canary industry who fully realised the importance of the question including Mr. Jacob Mackley, Mr. C. P. Pickup (Yorkshire), Mr. A. Payne, Mr. S. Roberts, Mr. A. Woollard, Mr. F. Cullington, Mr. J. Mitchell, Mr. W. Harl, Mr. G. P. Gilbert, Mr. G. Campling, Mr. R. Mallett, Mr. W. Herring, Mr. B. W. Pill, and many secretaries and other officials of various local clubs. The chairman was Mr. H. E. Dunham.

Winners at a Discount.

Mr. Frecstone (vice-chairman) said that the L. and P.O.S. formulated the standard of the 6½ inch limit, but the judges did not all recognise the fact when judging, especially if birds slightly over the limit were in the same class. If the breeders in Norwich acted with more uniformity in showing, all well and good.—Mr. Pickup declared that in Yorkshire the breeders of the Norwich Plainhead strictly observed the length limit, 6½ins., in the same way as they adhered to the Yorkshire 6¾ins. Mr. Pickup advised the fanciers of Norwich to keep to the length limit, believing that it would be the better for them in the future.—Mr. G. Campling (breeder of the Queen's Canary) said that the members of his society did not all believe in the 6½in. bird, for when they exhibited their specimens at the club show, the over-length birds were sometimes out of the running, but when the sales commenced the over-length birds were sold, and the smaller ones were sometimes left over. The result was, perhaps, that a trifle less was given for them than if a prize ticket had been attached to the cages.

Mr. Harl thought it was detrimental to go on with the 6½in. system. He maintained that the Norwich Plainhead should be judged more for its properties, and as regards the length of the bird that matter should be left to the discretion of the judge.—Mr. Woollard considered that if two birds shown were of equal merit, the shortest bird should win. He desired to say that if Canaries were judged by the points that had been laid down it would be impossible for these large stock birds to win. He concluded by quoting many breeders' views, one declaring that type and quality was never more to the front, and colour less.

Buyers Want the Big Birds.

Mr. Payne said the question of the standard had hung about long enough, and he hoped the breeders would put something on the show benches better than they had in the past. Why should a bird be thrown aside just because it was a trifle over the 6½in.? If we were compelled to show birds of this length, and these self same birds are sent to shows away, what became of them? He seldom saw a schedule from other large bird centres that mentioned the length limit at all, and he quite agreed as to the question being left to the judge concerned.—Mr. Roberts said that at our cage bird show every bird that looked large was handled, and should his services be required to judge Canaries, he should do the same. The words "Norwich Properties," were wanted more prominently on their schedules, and not the words "6½in. limit." They must all endeavour to meet the market, and what was wanted for these markets was big birds. Still, if one had a good bird at 6½ inches, one that carried a share of "Norwich Properties," that was the bird that would catch the eye of the judge.

Mr. Eagleton said that he did not believe in the Norwich fanciers fighting the question out alone. Why should not other cage bird fanciers in the various bird centres assist? His idea was that it was too much trouble on the part of many judges to measure specimens that were thought to be a trifle over length, and that was the cause of the difficulty.—Mr. Cullington said that he knew of three societies at least in England that had adhered to the limit.—Mr. Payne said that on one occasion one judge at a show asked another to measure a specimen, which he readily consented to do, but he pulled the bird's tail out.

An "Old Hand's" Opinion.

Mr. Jacob Mackley said in his opinion there must be a standard length laid down for the Norwich Canary. Many years ago he had drawn up the standard for the L.P.O.S., which was still worked to. Many a prize winner, even in the Yorkshire section, was very little over the 6½ inches. A Norwich Canary could not be too plump, but it could be too long. A bird at 6½ was good enough for him, and he would rather see one with good properties of that length than one over it. It confused him sometimes in judging, when the schedule read "no length limit to be observed, but Norwich properties strictly." In conclusion, said Mr. Mackley, they could not get a bird too broad in the shoulders and back, and also with good large head, and these properties combined made the true Norwich Canary. He maintained that he could tell a bird by his eye if it was over length, but if he had a doubt he put that bird on the measurement rule.—After Mr. Mackley had concluded the resolution was put to the meeting, the result being as I have mentioned.

EASTVILLE (Open) F.S. (Bristol)

Monthly meeting and table show held at the White Swan Hotel, Sept. 11, Mr. R. Ewens presiding over a good attendance, in which cage bird members predominated. Some nice specimens were staged well through the moult. In the absence of Mr. T. Keegan, Mr. H. Bryant was asked to place the cards, which he did with satisfaction to all. ROMFORD AND DISTRICT F.A.

A very nice display of cage birds was benched at the young stock show, held in Corn Exchange, Sept. 12. The quality of exhibits was excellent, and under the careful guidance of the secretary a great future is anticipated for this important section, which has lately been dormant. The cage bird men are to be congratulated in securing the first cup the society is providing for all sections. The cup will be again put up for competition at the grand annual, December 12. All cage bird men in Essex receive a hearty welcome, and should join. Mr. Geo. Stares took sp. for best bird with a neat little Yorkshire. In the absence of Mr. W. L. Rae, Mr. H. Patience judged. From catalogue received we gather that the principal winners were: YORKS: Stares, Britton, Mumford, Hayman. NOR.: Hasler, Garling. CHILDREN'S CLASS: Carr, Ives.—(Ed.).

EALING AND HANWELL F.S.

Young stock show, Sept. 14th, at St. John's Memorial Hall, West Ealing. Owing to a very bad breeding season we dropped about 100 entries compared with last year, but the few that were shown were very good type and quality. Mr. G. Gardner judged. YORKS., YELL. OR VARIEG.: 1, spl, 2, 3, Carr; res, hc, Crockett; vhc, Bollin. BUFF: 1, 2, 3, Carr; res, hc, c, Bollin; vhc, Crockett.—Rowland Bamber, Hon. Sec. and Treas.

HARLECH.

The forty-fifth annual show of Merionethshire was held at Harlech, September 13th. The cage bird section was in a marquee, staged at a nice height, and the quality exceeded that of last year, while the entries were very satisfactory, averaging over ten per class in the open. Mr. R. Roberts ably held the secretarial reins once more. The arrangements were carried out in splendid style. The committee, Messrs. J. E. Jones and W. Jones are most earnest and enthusiastic fanciers, and everything was done to make the fixture a success. Mr. W. Nolan won the cup for most prizes, also special for most entries. Mr. Muscott being the runner up. Yorks. held pride of place in numbers and quality, and most of the birds were very fit. Norwich were very fair, and some few good birds were through the moult. Goldies were a treat, also the variety British, and there were some rare specimens in foreign and Mules. Much interest in the birds was displayed by visitors. Mr. J. O. Williams (Bangor) judged.

Club Reports.

YORKSHIRE CANARY ETC., SOC. OF IRELAND.

Meeting held Sept. 9th, Mr. Dowling in the chair; fair attendance. Correspondence was read. It was proposed that four classes be given for non-feds at the annual show Oct. 31st and Nov. 1st. Also some other show matters were passed regarding arrangements of hall, etc. It was also proposed to hold a draw class, which I hope every member will do his best to support.—C. Lattimore, Hon. Sec.

LOANHEAD C.B.S.

Meeting, held Mason's Arms, Sept. 14th, Mr. A. Jardine presided over a large attendance of members. Of three new cups on approval, one was selected, and secretary instructed to get another similar one. This now gives a cup to each section. Gold medals were next considered, 12 being on approval. One was selected, and secretary instructed to get other two the same, after which the Chairman read a letter from an old friend and fancier, namely Thos. Briggs (late secretary for Dalkeith Club), and everyone present was very well pleased to hear of his success in Canada, and asked Mr. Jardine to remember them to Mr. Briggs when writing. The Secretary then moved our next meeting be held on first Saturday in October, seeing there was no show in Dalkeith this year, and this met with the approval of all present. A hearty vote of thanks to the chairman brought the meeting to a close.—Walter B. Smart, Sec.

CITY OF BIRMINGHAM C.B.S.

Monthly meeting held Crown Hotel, Hill-street, Sept. 4th, Mr. Broadhurst in the chair. The committee's suggestions for classification, etc., for young stock show October 23rd were adopted, and Mr. J. H. Roe engaged as judge (classes total 37). Two new members were elected, including our first lady member. A discussion regarding the open show was suggested. Messrs. Broadhurst (vice-pres. and chairman), de Maillet (vice-pres.), F. Peace (vice-chair), Harvey (treas.), Burke, Derry, and Jeffreys took part. It was felt that the only way to make the show a success—notwithstanding that our's appears to be the only open show in the immediate district this year—was to curtail the classification, many pounds having been lost on previous shows owing to entry fees being insufficient to cover prize monies, while the large number of classes added considerably to the cost of printing. Many members wanted classes for members only; this proved a knotty point, the difficulty being that unless the price limit in these classes was made sufficiently low the open section would suffer. However, the feeling of the meeting was that members' limit classes must be included, and the committee will meet on the 18th inst and deal with the matter. The oak smoking cabinet is up for competition at the young stock show, and the donor looks to the exhibitors to provide keen competition.—J. H. Jones, Hon. Sec. (per J. H. de Maillet).

ROSSENDALE AND DIS. C.B.S.

A "free and easy" and potato-pie supper were held at the Commercial Hotel, September 3. There was a very good attendance, and we spent one of the very pleasantest of meetings. Will members kindly note next meeting is October 1, at 7.30 p.m., at the Commercial Hotel, Stacksteads.—H. Wantling, Hon. Sec.

SPRINGBURN (Possil Park) C.B.C.

Usual monthly meeting held Reid Hall, Sept. 11, Mr. A. Sloan presiding over a fair attendance. Ordinary business was gone through; washing competition for champions on next monthly meeting, same to be judged by members by ballot, on Oct. 9; and visiting committee to visit members, and report at next meeting.—J. Waugh, Sec. and Treas.

GRANTHAM C.B.S.

Meeting Brewers' Arms, Sept. 16th, to allot specials for open show. There was a good turn-up of members. Decided to give 2s. 6d. most points in Nor., also 2s. 6d. Yorks., 2s. 6d. best Gold or Bullfinch, 2s. 6d. Mule or Hybrid, 2s. 6d. Linnet, Siskin, or Twite class, 2s. 6d. most points Lizards, 2s. 6d. best Crest, pipe best Crest-bred, 2s. 6d. A.O.V. Hardbill. Other specials were allotted, also members' specials. Schedules ready in a few days; all last year's exhibitors will have one sent, other fanciers should see that they send for one, as we have an attractive classification and a well-known judge.—W. E. Allen, Hon. Sec.

BURTON-ON-TRENT C.B.S.

Monthly meeting held Sept. 3rd, at the Staffordshire, Knot. Mr. Hathaway presided over a good muster of members. After the correspondence was read, the schedule was confirmed. Several classes have been added to our usual list, which now reads: Nor. 12, Novice 3, Yorks. 4, A.O.V. 1, Cinn. 4, Clnn. Nov. 1, Brit. 9, Mules or Hyb. 3, Albino 1, For. 2, Sell. 2, Members 4, with a large number of specials. We have again secured the Victoria Hall with its splendid lighting and freedom from draughts, which should meet with the support such a splendid hall deserves. All members are requested to attend the next meeting.—A. Wood, Sec.

LEITH O.S.

First monthly meeting of the season held in Liberal Club, Hope Street, Sept. 14. The President, Mr. Jas. Lumsden, presided over a capital attendance of members. Several important items in connection with forthcoming show were dealt with. The handsome silver cup (for the best British bird, Mule or Hybrid) presented by Councillor Robert Kiddie was on view and all present were unstinted in their praise of it. The Secretary was instructed to convey the thanks of the members to Mr. Kiddie for his generosity. The Committeemen, Messrs. John Baxter and David Layers, were also thanked for their services in connection with same. The President then referred to the loss the Society had sustained by the death of Mr. Wm. Graham, who was a very generous supporter of the Society, and it was agreed to insert in the minutes an expression of sympathy, and to send an excerpt of same to the family of the deceased. The meeting was then introduced to Mr. Steel, of Dalkeith, who spoke for fully an hour and a half, his subject being The Natural Food of British Birds, the members were treated to a highly instructive discourse of the various wild plants and seeds suitable for the feeding of the many species of British birds which now grace the show bench. At the close Mr. Steel answered several queries by the members. The members awarded the lecturer a hearty vote of thanks for his kindness in giving them such a treat.

SCOTTISH PLAINHEAD CLUB.

Committee meeting held in Good Templars' Hall, 122, Ingram-street, Glasgow, Sept. 7th, Mr. W. Hitchison (president) in the chair, others present being Messrs. E. Barron, W. Grewar, A. Harris, R. Martin, J. McLay, A. Sloan, J. Smeaton, and J. Young. Decided to hold a general meeting at each of the three shows, City of Glasgow, Musselburgh, and Aberdeen. There were 21 applications forward for the club patronage, and after careful consideration the same was granted to Lochgelly, City of Glasgow, Forfar, Cowdenbeath, Glasgow and District, Musselburgh, Aberdeen, and Scottish National, the Club Show to be held at Aberdeen December 13th and 14th. Patronage also granted to Edinburgh Norwich, Edinburgh and Dist., Falkirk, and Glasgow and West of Scotland, and the secretary was empowered to grant the patronage to any other club show applying provided the necessary qualifications existed. Agreed that eight classes—four cl. or tkd. and four variegd.—be provided at the club show this year. Mr. Barron offered a sealed prize for competition amongst novices at the open patronage shows, and Mr. McLay offered a gold medal to runner-up to winner of above. Both offers were accepted, and the gentlemen thanked for the prizes. Messrs. J. Stormont, H. Brash, J. Hardie, J. Hillson, and P. Gray (Edinburgh), J. Woodhouse (Grangemouth), W. Carson (Leith), J. Wilson (High Blantyre), G. Morgan and D. Hannah (Glasgow), W. Burns (Prestonpans), C. Watt (Musselburgh), J. Philp, J. Taylor, D. Young, P. McQue, J. Stirling, W. Duff, and M. Smith (Lochgelly), J. Mitchell, J. Baxter, P. Lungan, A. Robertson, T. Cowan, and J. R. Murray (Cowdenbeath), T. Wildridge (Cardenden), and J. Anderson (Forfar) were elected members.—J. Brown, Sec.

FALKIRK (Good Intent) C.B.A.

Meeting held Oddfellows' Hall, August 31st, J. Muir presiding. Five new members were admitted. As the year is advancing, members wishing to join please do so at their earliest convenience. Next meeting, Sept. 28th, Oddfellows' Hall, 7.30.—Walter Clarkson, Sec.

WEST OF SCOTLAND O.S.

Monthly meeting Sept. 7th, Nelson's Temperance Hotel, Mr. P. Thom (president) in the chair. Business in connection with annual show was taken up and decided upon. Mr. C. Hunter kindly consented to give a washing exhibition for next meeting, Oct. 5th, when large attendance is requested. Will members kindly note that annual subscription is now due.—Wm. Hutchison.

LEIGH.

General meeting held at the Globe Inn, Sept. 13th, when there was a poor attendance of members. Will every outside member note that every member must pay twopence per week, starting from Sept. 6th. There will be a special general meeting Sept. 19th, when every member must be present, or send an acknowledged reply with a sixpenny P.O. for three weeks' contributions. Otherwise, all their funds in the club will be forfeited. Apply to me for all information.—R. Holcroft, Sec., 12, Tunnicliffe New-road, Leigh.

WOLVERHAMPTON C.B.S.

The annual show meetings started Sept. 12 at the Duke of York, when Mr. F. J. Weaver presided over a splendid atendance, which I must say is very encouraging to the officials. As we have done so well in the past, at our all England show, by increasing the classes, we have done so again:—Norwich 15, Yorks. 10, British 6, Mules 3, Border 3, Sell. 2, A.O.V. 2, For. 2. We hope exhibitors will bear it in mind and patronise us, for we are giving fourth prize money this year; we mean to keep up our reputation if exhibitors will only assist us.—J. Gibbons Hon. Sec.

EAST HAM C.B.S.

Special meeting Sept. 12. Amateur section adopted and added to the rules. A lovely rose bowl was presented by Mr. E. Oakes (of English rabbit fame), a member of the society. Mr. Oakes has allocated the bowl for three nominated birds. In replying to a most hearty vote of thanks, he said that if the society added fifty new members to the list he was perfectly willing to give just such another trophy during the coming year. The chair was taken by Mr. Marley, who concluded a most pleasant evening by compiling queries from members, being answered by changing them over. Next meeting not Oct. 24, but 17, one week earlier, for annual show business.—F. Fox, Hon. Sec.

NEWCASTLE NOVICE C.B.S.

Meeting held at Mr. Purvis' Cafe, Clayton-street, Newcastle, Sept. 5th, A. Gordon, Esq., in the chair. Proposed that South Shields should get the patronage of our first venture in an exhibition as a novice, and in the full anticipation that our first venture will be successful, anyone desirous of joining us will be heartily welcome. It was suggested, to give each member a chance, to confine each member to one special, in the hope that the different specials would be fairly distributed amongst the members. South Shields show is held October 25th and 26th, Ocean-road, Congregation Hall; Mr. J. Wilcocks and Mr. F. Marwood will judge. The secretary debars himself from the Newcastle novice specials. I am very sorry to hear that we have had bad luck in breeding this year, but we have the luck in health. We are extremely sorry that the Newcastle C.B.S. has lost so many valuable members by death this year; we hope in the coming winter those remaining will all have the best of health.—T. W. Lumsden, Sec.

NOTTINGHAM AND NOTTS O.S.

Meeting at Mechanics' Institute, Sept. 10th, G. C. Ley, Esq., in the chair. Schedule for open show November 9th and 11th was arranged:—Norwich 14 classes, Crests 19, Lancs. 4, Lizards 4, Yorks. 6, British 12 (including two for novices), Hybrids 3, Foreign 6, Selling and Gift 4, making a grand total of 72. The show will have the patronage of Norwich Plainhead Club, Crested C.C., Lancs. and Lizard F.A., N.B.B. and M.C., and F.B.C. We are desirous of making this the most successful show ever held, and in addition to 22s. prize money in each class we are offering a valuable lot of specials, while specialist judges have been engaged for each section. Fanciers can reply on every care being taken of their exhibits, the show being held in one of the best lighted, heated, and ventilated rooms in the kingdom. Schedules will be ready shortly, and the committee have every confidence in asking for such liberal support which the management in the past has so well deserved. Will all members endeavour to be present at the next meeting, Tuesday, Sept. 24th, 8 p.m.? Business: Show arrangements.—J. G. Royce, Asst. Hon. Sec.

LEEDS C.B.S.

Monthy meeting held Sept. 7 at Headquarters, when a good muster of members turned up to discuss business of our forthcoming open show; classification was approved of as follows: Open classes—7 Yorks., 7 Norwich, 7 Brit., 4 For., 2 Sell., 1, A.O.V.; Novice—4 Yorks., and 4 Norwich, with 7/6 money specials in each section. We are having a prize draw in connection with our sale of tickets, and have seven birds and cages promised for same. We are anticipating a record show, having secured the patronage of the O.N.P.C., Y.C.B.B. and M.C., and F.B.C. and have engaged the Salem Lecture Hall, Hunslet Lane, for the event, exhibitors can confidently send their most valuable exhibits, as this Hall is most suitable in every respect, being large, lofty and well ventilated. The following gentlemen kindly contributed towards special fund: Messrs. H. J. Minnard, 2/6; J. Smith, 2/6; E. Norton, 2/6; W. Johnson, 2/6; F. Farrar, 2/6; J. Chambers, 2/6; C. E. Hall, 2/6; J. Owen, 2/6; W. Bristow, 2/6; T. Baldwinson, 2/6; Chew, 2/6; J. Sykes, 2/6 and A. Robbins, 2/6. 1,000 Tickets were distributed among the members present and if enthusiasm is any criterion I am not afraid of having any returned. Our President, F. Somers Esq., M.R.C.V.S., has kindly offered for competition in the Foreign bird classes a handsome gold medal for the best bird, and Vice-President, M. Kitchin Esq., a gold centre medal for runner up. In view of this fact, we can reasonably expect to see some rare species. Members kindly note that Rule 7 will be strictly enforced at this show. Several members kindly volunteered to act as Stewards to receive birds on Friday night previous to show. Decided that no member be allowed to pack his birds till all birds for away are packed and in the hands of the railway company. Prize money will be despatched within 24 hours. Mr. H. Read was unanimously elected a member.—W. A. Wilson Hon. Sec.

DERBY C.B.S.

Monthly meeting held Derwent Hotel, before a good attendance. Arrangements for open show were proceeded with, and it was decided to purchase a special prize for each class, the winner to be the exhibitor who scores most points in each class. We decided to hold annual members' show on Saturday, Dec. 7, and we trust members will make a special note of this date; judge will be announced shortly.—Wharam and Bamsey, Secs.

NATIONAL BRITISH BIRD & M C.

Committee meeting held at headquarters, the Feathers Hotel, Great Chapel-street, Westminster, Aug. 29th. Present, Messrs. J. Dewhurst (in the chair), T. R. Trower, O. Puck, A. J. Marley, A. C. Askew, S. Grahame, H. Goodchild, G. Crabb, C. T. Maxwell, and J. P. Carr. Letters were read from Messrs. G. Lawrence, A. Coffey, and F. Archer. The following shows were granted the club patronage: Nottingham (silver), Gateshead (two silvers), Manchester (silver and bronze), Brighton (gilt medal). Mr. O. Puck very kindly offered a silver medal for the best cage-moulted Blackcap, Larger or Lesser Whitethroat, or Garden Warbler exhibited by a member at the L.C.B.A. show, if not less than six entries in the class. Donor not to compete. A vote of thanks was accorded Mr. Dewhurst for presenting a case for the diploma. Arrangements were made for hanging the diploma in the club room. Mr. James Lane (Bradford) was elected a member. A vote of thanks to the chairman concluded the meeting.—J. P. Carr, Jt. Hon. Sec.

PARTICK AND DISTRICT C.B.C.

Monthly meeting held in Trades Hall. Owing to illness of Mr. Henderson, Mr. Priest is taking up secretary's duties till Mr. Henderson feels fit to resume. Mr. Park (president) in the chair. Decided to have five open classes for Yorkshires at annual show November 2nd. Entry 1s. 6d. Prizes, 10s., 5s., and 2s. 6d., with sixpence off for prize cards. Prize money in these classes is guaranteed. Entries to close three days previous to show. We have again engaged the Subway Hall, which is handy for North British or Caledonian Railways, and has plenty of floor space, free from draughts, and plenty of top light. Fanciers sending birds need not be afraid; they will be well looked after. Decided to have a catalogue. Agreed that prize cards be the same as former years. Secretary was instructed to write Mr. R. B. Gibb and get list of Yorkshire members so as to forward schedules to same. Mr. Bruce (Coldstream) will judge open classes. Schedules will be fowarded on to all known exhibitors in the course of ten days.—Wm. Priest, Sec. (pro. tem.).

GATESHEAD AND DIST. C.B.S.

Monthly meeting held Sept. 11, Mr. R. Tindall in chair. A vote of sympathy was tendered Mr. Tindall in respect of the death of his brother. Proposed and carried that Mr. T. Davison, of "Ye Old Talbot," Gateshead, become one of our vice-presidents. Mr. J. Davison's resignation as secretary being read and accepted, it was proposed by the committee that Mr. J. G. Greason take up the vacancy, and that Mr. R. Tindall, take the position of show manager in place of the new sec., Mr. A. Holden to be auditor in place of the late Mr. T. Taylor. On being put to the meeting, this was carried. The following patronages have been received:—Northern Norwich C.C., Northern Yorks. C.C., Northern Border and S.F.C.C., Northern British M. and F.B.C., Northern Lizard C.C., Border Fancy C.C., English and Welsh B.F.C., National B.B. and M.C., Silk's cup, etc. The schedule as proposed by committee was accepted:—Nor. 12, Cinn. 2, Crest 5, Scotch 3, Yorks. 10, Bord. 11, Liz. 2, Selling 6, Hybrid 7, Brit. 14 (foreign being left over for next meeting), Members' 20, Novice Members 9. There are still tickets to be accounted for from Nest Feather show; will members please forward these at once? A number of subscriptions are due; will members kindly look to these before it is too late? Mr. McGinn was accepted as a member.—J. G. Greason, Sec.

LANCASHIRE AND LIZARD F.A.

Meeting held, Church Inn, Oldham, Sept. 14, Mr. Garner in chair. Secretary read correspondence re patronage, great satisfaction being expressed at fresh ground being broken at Sheffield and Bradford National, though in the case of Sheffield it is only going back to the old order of things, Lancs. and Lizards playing a prominent part there a few years back. A discussion took place in regard to the unsatisfactory way members returned coupons to Secretary last year, some failing to send at all, hence a decrease in value of special. A resolution was passed that members intending competing for Ramsden's special, must send their coupons in to Sec. not later than first week in October; any failing to do so will not be eligible to compete. As the value of the special depends upon the number of coupons returned, it behoves every member to send as soon as possible. We have great pleasure in making Mr. Geo. Thurling, of London, a member, and trust it may not be long before more follow his good example, as we have still room. I should be pleased to hear from any members if they can give any specials for the coming shows to try and make them more attractive. We had a generous offer from Messrs. Maitland and Vickers, of Shaw, of 10/-, to be given at Sheffield, Nov. 1 and 2, 2/6 in each of the four classes, in each case for the best bird, the donors not competing. A hearty vote of thanks was given them. Patronage Shows:—Manchester, Oct. 25 and 26, Mr. S. R. Compston, judge; Sheffield, Nov. 1 and 2, judge, Mr. Nadin (Rochdale); Nottingham, Nov. 9 and 11; Rochdale, Nov. 23, Mr. C. A. House; L.C.B.A., Nov. 28, 29 and 30, Mr. J. Robson; Bradford National, Dec. 6, 7 and 9, Mr. C. A. House. Decided to leave question of Club show, over till next meting, at the Old Boar's Head, Manchester, Oct. 12.—John Rukin, Hon. Sec.

ROTHERHAM C.B.S.

Special meeting Sept. 14, at College Inn; Mr. W. Brotherton in chair. There was a poor attendance, seeing that the meeting was important. We have decided to again have the St. George's Hall for the annual show, which is very central, and a very nice place. We are having 20 classes for the open section: 4 Yorks., 4 Nor., 2 York. Novice, 2 Nor. Nov., 2 Yorks. Greens, 4 Brit., 2 Selling; prize money, 4s., 4s., 2s., for 1s. entrance fee. We also decided to have a few members' classes.—B. Bailey, Sec.

SHETTLESTON AND DIST. C.B.S

Monthly meeting held Johnston's Rooms, Sept. 14, Mr. Hendrie presiding over a good turnout of members. Date of annual show fixed for Dec. 14. We have secured Mr. R. Livingston, Rutherglen, and Mr. M. Craig, Tollcross, for judges. Three handsome silver cups and other valuable specials are to be competed for. All fanciers in the district wishing to compete must send in their names at an early date, as October meeting is the closing date for enrolment. Mr. Livingston gave an instructive lecture on moulting and colour-feeding. After the lecture he had a number of questions put into a hat, and every member had to draw a question and answer it. We spent a very enjoyable evening, and the members who were absent missed a treat. The president proposed a hearty vote of thanks to Mr. Livingston for his kindness in giving us the splendid lecture.—A Berry, Sec.

NORTH WALES C.B.S.

Committee meeting of the above was held last week. Present: Messrs. James Jones (chairman), R. E. Griffith (treasurer), J. L. Sweeney, J. O. Parry, R. Green, and J. Wynne Parry (hon. sec.). Decided to hold a "draw" in aid of the society. Open show fixed for December 7th. A small committee was appointed to write to judges.

Advt. Manager. "Cage Birds."

DEPOSIT SYSTEM.

We are not responsible for the statements made in advertisements, nor of the bona-fides of either buyers or sellers in all transactions the adoption of our Deposit System should be insisted upon

IMPORTANT.

SEND THE FULL COMMISSION.—If the full commission does not accompany the deposit, the vendor will not be notified of its receipt until the amount deficient, plus the extra postage incurred, has been paid to us.

HOW TO REMIT.—Under no circumstances will Cheques or Post-dated Money Orders be accepted as deposits. Uncrossed Postal Orders must be sent and the numbers taken for safety.

RULES.

1.—PROCEDURE.—The intending purchaser should send to this office the amount of the purchase (our deposit fee included), and at the same time he should communicate with the seller, stating what it is he requires sent on approval. We acknowledge receipt of the deposit to both parties. In all cases the depositor should give his name and address, and also that of the vendor, and must write same clearly and distinctly.

2.—END OF TRANSACTION.—The deposit is retained by us until we hear from both parties that the transaction has been completed. If a sale has been effected, we hand the amount deposited to the seller. If a sale has not been effected, we return the amount to the depositor. The transaction must be conducted by the parties themselves. We merely hold the deposit.

3.—AMOUNT OF COMMISSION.—The fee is 6d. for each £1, or fraction of £1, and it must be sent at same time as the deposit.

4.—IMPORTANT POINTS.—The depositor must decide within forty-eight hours of the receipt of the goods whether he will keep or return the same, unless, that is, some other period of approval (of which we must be advised) is agreed upon by both parties. The depositor must at the same time notify us of the fact that he has returned the goods. If the goods are not returned within the said forty-eight hours, we reserve the right to send the deposit to the seller after the expiration of that period. And should the seller fail within three days to notify us of the receipt of his goods back again, the transaction will be treated as ended, and the deposit will be returned to the depositor.

5.—A SATISFACTORY PURCHASE.—When a transaction has been completed to the satisfaction of both depositor and seller, both parties must at once return the deposit receipts as a guarantee of its completion. The depositor must at the same time instruct us to pay over the deposit to the seller.

6.—GOODS ALREADY SOLD.—If the goods are sold before our deposit note reaches the seller, or if for any other reason he declines to do business, he must at once return the deposit note to us. Failing its receipt, we reserve the right to return the deposit to the sender after the expiration of three days.

7.—FRESH TRANSACTION.—In case no sale be effected, a deposit is available for purposes of a fresh transaction, provided another deposit fee be paid.

8.—GOODS IN TRANSIT.—Goods in transit are at the seller's risk, and any damage or loss sustained on the journey must be borne by the seller. But goods not approved of must be properly packed and returned by the same means as were used in sending the same.

9.—PAYMENT OF CARRIAGE.—The payment of carriage must be a matter for arrangement between the vendor and depositor. We do not undertake to settle disputes affecting question of carriage. But in the absence of other arrangements the purchaser is liable for the carriage of the goods, and if the goods are sent on approval and returned, each party pays the carriage one way.

10.—DISPUTES.—In case of a dispute, the decision of the Editor is final.

Following testimonials speak volumes for quality of my appliances. "Gedney, Holbeach, Lincs., September 3, 1912.—Sir,—The pair 12-yard clap nets safely to hand. They are an exceptionally good pair, and thread so fine they are hardly visible, and they match the ground so well. Rather different nets for Linnet catching to the herring and garden netting offered for sale by many netmakers, who ought to know better than send such rubbish out. Without doubt, yours are best fine thread nets extant. I shall want more shortly.—Yours, Charlie Cubley." "Wood St., Guildford, August 22.—Sir,—Received the two pairs nets safely. I am well pleased, and so is my friend. We shall not take the trouble to make them when we can get them so good as these for the money.—Yours, S. Bowen." "4, Castle Place, Scarborough, Aug. 25.—Sir,—Please send 1lb. lime. It is best lime I can get. I caught over 200 birds with last lot.—Yours, W. Whitehead." "64, Main St., Renton, Scotland, Aug. 13.—Sir,—Please send 1lb. lime, as the last pound I got from you was the envy of all the catchers here. I cannot say enough in its favour.—Yours, J. McKinn." "52, Silver St., Nenagh, Ireland, Aug. 17.—Sir,—Please send following. The net trap was best I ever saw for the money. I caught 38 Goldfinches with it first day.—Yours, Dennis Hayes." "65, Rockdale Rd., Tunbridge Wells, Aug. 23.—Sir,—Please send 24 yards netting. I had some from you 7 years ago, and am still using it.—Yours, H. England." If you want reliable serviceable appliances, send to the man who makes them; no connection whatever with any other advertiser.

GOOD REASONS WHY YOU SHOULD OWN THIS NEW BOOK ON CANARIES.

Because it tells you how to make a success of your birds; how to select them; how to feed and treat them; how to breed from them; and—if you go in for owning valuable specimens—how to wash and dress them for Exhibition, and how to care for them while they are at the Shows,

This book tells you when to mate your Canaries; when to breed, when to feed; when to doctor them and when to let them alone; when to strengthen your stock and when to weed out the poorer birds; when to buy and when to sell.

There is an Index of some 600 items in which you can turn up in an instant any point relating to your birds on which you need immediate guidance. At the same time the sections are written by such genuine Bird Lovers and practical Fanciers that they prove interesting reading for everyone who is concerned with Cage Birds and who opens the pages at random and reads right on.

The book is admirably planned so as to help the beginner equally with the experienced breeder. Each section begins at the elementary knowledge on the subject treated and all the processes are clearly explained. With this soundly practical work in his possession many an owner of only one or two birds will be led into the delightful hobby of Canary Breeding.

And it gives the results of years of patient experiment on the part of Specialists in this difficult business of Canary Breeding and embodies rules for success that have never before been published. So that "Canaries & Cage Birds" is equally necessary for the man who has been long at Canary Breeding as for the novice. It tells him of the crosses that have never yet been achieved and will help him to excel in those points he is most uncertain about.

"Canaries and Cage Birds" is the newest, the best and the fullest work on the market dealing with this important subject of Canary Breeding. It covers the whole wide field of information concerning British Birds in Cages.

But we do not ask you to take our word for this. WE ASK YOU TO SEND FOR THE WORK FREE OF COST, and to

Thanking you all for patronage: Fred Allen, Bird Specialist, 548, Queen's-rd., Sheffield.

HARRY ALLEN, THE ORIGINAL LINNET KING

I have won more prizes than any ten dealers in the world put together for contest singing; contradiction defied; have given proof, and I am the only dealer who has the original quality Linnet singing strain of the world. Readers, here are a few of my prizes that I honestly won: 1st, 2nd and 3rd, open to all England, Batley; 1st, 2nd, 3rd, opened to all England, Morley; 1st, 2nd, and 3rd prize, opened to all England, Bradford; 1st prize at Sheffield. I defeated 28 of the best time singers of England. I also sung a match at Castleford, £2 a side, and won. I was offered £8 for my bird. I defeated 34 of the best picked birds of Yorkshire and Lancashire, including the cup winner at Bradford, 1st prize, open to all England, Dewsbury, beating 37 good birds here. I refused £10 for my Linnet; 1st, 2nd and 3rd, open to all England, Leeds, 5 prizes out of 6 in the world's greatest contest. I got 1st and 2nd, 4th, 5th and 6th, when Mr. Jackson offered me £50 for my birds. All the above were for quality Linnet singing, with the exception of Sheffield. You will see I went out of my own town to give everybody a chance of beating me. The above were published in "Cage Birds" as I won them. Linnets, taught by the champion Linnet of the world, with quality notes, new cage and book, 2/6, 3/6, and a few gems that will sing anywhere, right for catching, 4/6; the exhibition Linnets, for the bench, sure prize-winners, 2/-; real English Peartree cock Goldfinches, the largest in England, singing hard, 2/-, 3/-; full coloured cock Goldfinches, sure prize-winners for the bench, 4/6; two house-moulted. Goldfinches, bred Mules with me this year, singing hard, 7/6 each; Larks, singing hard, 1/-, 1/6 and 2/-; a few hand-reared Larks, 3/6; one a gem, 4/6; German Rollers, sing a treat, with quality notes, 4/6, 5/6; try one of these, and you will be delighted. Linnets from the same place as the world's champion, 1/-, 1/6; real toppers, 2/-. This class of bird is what I started with, and beat the world with exhibitors. Write to me if you want winners for the bench, contest singers write to me if you want to win the English championship. Hundreds of British and foreign birds in stock, so send to the old original firm: Harry Allen, Bird Specialist and Judge, City Aviaries, 40, Beckett-st., Leeds.

Hundreds of testimonials unsolicited: George Holt, Dunstable.

A VITAL point in the successful keeping of Softbills (and particularly the smaller and more delicate species), is proper feeding. For that reason keepers of Softbills should not be without "Nutshell No. 25." If you study the hints given therein by H. J. Fulljames you simply cannot have feeding troubles. All the best-known of the smaller insectivorous birds are dealt with in this booklet, which also tells you how to collect ants' eggs and discusses the various cages and hand rearing, 2d. from agents (list frequently published), or 2½d. post free from "Cage Birds," 154, Fleet-st., London, E.C.

ON receipt of 1/6 I will send, securely packed, on approval, the finest singing cock Skylark ever seen or heard, suitable for contest singing or shop's attraction, or with bl new joint made cage 1/-, including free my valuable feeding secret which keeps Larks in full song ten months out of twelve. I have supplied more contest winners than anyone in England; heaps of unsolicited testimonials to prove this; one address 2a years. Woods, Crossst., Dunstable.

SOFTBILL keepers, take expert advice before proceeding to buy and keep the better species of insectivorous birds. You will then have no trouble in keeping your pets in the best of health. This advice is offered in "Nut-shell No. 25," by H. J. Fulljames. It is a wonderful little work, dealing with most varieties in a highly interesting and instructive manner. Foods and their preparation, and the various styles of cages also receive full attention. Can you breed Mealworms? This booklet tells you how. Post free, 2½d., from "Cage Birds," 154, Fleet-st., London, E.C. Look at our list of agents; call on the nearest and get it for 2d.

CHOPWELL C.B.S.

Meeting held in Club Hall, September 21, with a fair attendance of members. Stewards, etc., were picked for day of show, also a new member enrolled.—Mr. G. Barkas, Westwood. Decided, to get handbills advertising our show, and distribute them during the week before the show. All we want now is a rattling good entry.—W. Tomlinson, Hon. Sec.

STIRLING C.B.S.

Monthly meeting held Sept. 7, in McDonald's Temperance Hotel, Mr. Summers in the chair. The business was enrolling members and settling about the show. Decided to appoint stewards at next meeting. Also decided to do what we could towards the Norwich flood case. Next meeting Saturday, Oct. 5, in McDonald's Temperance Hotel, at 8.—W. Clubb, Sec.

BROXBURN AND DIST. C.B.S.

Meeting held in Public Hall Draught Room Sept. 19, Mr. Murray presiding over a fair turnout of members. Correspondence was read from the following specialist clubs, granting patronage to our annual open show, Dec. 14: B.F.C.C., S.C.C.C., and S.B.B. and M.C. After discussion of several small items, it was agreed to hold our next meeting on Oct. 9. We hope to see a full turn-out of members, and any fanciers in the district wishing to join will receive a hearty welcome.—W. McLaren, Sec.

SUNDERLAND C.B.A.

Fortnightly meeting held Aug. 31, Mr. Farrer in the chair. Matters connected with the open show were discussed, and it was decided to have stands made, which will be a great improvement. Several members promised birds for the drawing in connection with the admission tickets. Next meeting we will revise show rules and regulations.—J. Jeffrey, Sec.

We have received a letter from Mr. W. H. Sheridan, of Dublin, asking us to state that he has resigned membership of the Yorkshire C. and C.B.S. of Ireland, together with Messrs. F. R. Fry and James Huggard.

At the Wiveliscombe F.A. show, Nov. 21, write Messrs. Chas. Hy Hill and E. W. Dascombe, hon. secs., there will be classes as follows: Yorks. 4, Nor. 3, Sell. 1, Mules 1, Brit. 2, For. 1. Judges: Mr. W. G. Elsmore, Canaries and Mules; Mr. E. Sprankling, Brit. and For. Everything points to great success.

We shall be pleased to insert exhibitors' and breeders' cards in Portsmouth Show schedule or catalogue at one shilling each, write Messrs. King and Joiner, hon. secs., 200, Kingston Road, Portsmouth. If intended for former, same must reach us at once, as our schedules are in the hands of the printers. —Advt.

We are sorry to hear from Mr. Priest, Partick, that owing to ill-health, Mr. John Henderson has given up the secretaryship of the Partick and District Cage Bird Club. Mr. Wm. Priest has been appointed in his place. The next meeting will be held in the Trades Hall, Anderson Street, Partick, on Oct. 4 at 8 p.m.

Schedules for our show on Oct. 19, writes Mr. A. Wake, Hon. Sec. Middlesbrough C.B.S., will be forwarded as soon as possible to all who have written. We had to get another hall, and on Saturday last we were fortunate enough to secure the Victoria Hall, which is an ideal place with plenty of light and room, and situated in the centre of the town.

No Lovers of Warmth.

Although Siskins have been numbered among the birds nesting in this country, they are only isolated pairs. Their real home is Northern and Central, Europe, and across cold Siberia. Even during the winter months they do not migrate very far southwards.

Fifty Years of the Yorkshire Canary:

By D. MALLINSON (Huddersfield).

This instalment tells of the "dark" days when fanciers kept their knowledge to themselves.

I BEGAN the in breeding very carefully, never venturing any closer than cousins. I found the youngsters every bit as robust and every bit as strong looking as any I had bred before. With a few years of breeding, I found I had improved my birds more than I had done in twice the same period, the old way. This showed me it was an important thing in getting nearer to what I wanted. I was very careful not to overdo it, and did not risk mating too near relations.

I seemed to "hit" all at once. I had found out about the pink eyed bird being of cinnamon blood. I had got a nice yonng yellow cock, and paired him to a very smart, evenly-marked hen, which had splendid eye markings. She reared four in each nest, and had twelve of the nicest birds I had ever had up to that time. I sold two of the best yellow marked cocks to a well known exhibitor of cinnamon-marks, and they won all before them where classes were provided for the Cinnamon-marked Yorkshire.

Exhibiting Canaries was something I had never thought of going in for. I was satisfied with being able to breed some good birds, and I was proud of their success at the shows, although I got for them something which was almost nothing. I sold both these birds for under ten shillings. I never asked any fancy price. I bred them for my own fancy, and was content if I got a small trifle more than the dealers would give me. Two such birds now would easily fetch ten pounds, as I have never seen a better than one of them was, and I have had a few good ones since. I can safely say he was as good a cinnamon-marked yellow as any I have ever bred, and it is over twenty years since.

The Cinnamon-marked Yorkshire was then only in its infancy as a recognised variety of the Yorkshire, the Yorkshire Union having included it amongst the Yorkshire breeds, and got a few societies to make classes for them. Where no classes were provided, they had to go amongst the green-marked birds and not in the A.O.V. classes as they were usually shown.

For my success on the show bench, I must give a good deal of credit to my son. I am sure I should never have dreamed of staging a bird myself. He was very much elated by the sucess of the birds I parted with, as I sold lots that won in the keenest competition. Reading the show reports in "Fur and Feather," and seeing the constant winnings of these birds, my son had an idea that we ought to do the showing and win the honours for ourselves. I told him I knew nothing whatever of getting a bird ready for show. I said they would have to be washed and such like, and it was no easy matter to get to know how the job was done. Nine-tenths of the successful exhibitors at that time kept you in the dark as much as possible. You could get next to no information concerning the staging of birds; you had to experiment on your own. I often brought up the subject in an off-hand sort of manner to see if I could get to know anything of advantage. Although I had sold, or practically given away winning birds to a prominent exhibitor, when I moved on to this subject, however, I could get no satisfaction whatever from him, and nothing that would enlighten the novice in the least on this question.

I knew of an old Canary breeder, however, who had taken "Cassell's Book of the Canary," by Mr. Blakston. I asked him if he had kept the various parts, and what he wanted for them. He had them all straight and clean, so I bought them and got them bound into book form. This bird washing was the great difficulty. Now Mr. Bexson gives a very useful and instructive lesson on bird washing in Cassell's book. My son read and studied the work, till he found (in his mind) that it was the easiest thing in the world to wash a Canary.

We had lots of birds to practice on, so for a trial I let him have one that was of little value. I must say the experiment did not at all prove successful, as the bird was dirtier after it had gone through the process than before. This put a damper on the job. Birds must be very clean and straight for showing, so I told my son I had come to the conclusion we must give up the idea of showing birds, and leave it to those with more skill. I could see this did not pacify him; he argued that others had had a beginning; this I was forced to admit was so. I told him if we bred any fit to show next summer, we would show them at first feather shows. They would need no washing.

These magnificent trophies belong to Mr. E. Baker, of Cowes, Isle-of-Wight, and have been secured by his Norwich Plainheads, which for many years have been at the "top of the tree" at all the leading shows.

A Remarkable Experience.

We were lucky enough to breed a good one the following summer, and we exhibited it at Bradford in 1892, where he scored second prize. He won a few seconds afterwards, but not a first, being beaten generally by a yellow, he being a buff bird. It was very nice to have prize cards to hang up in the bird-room, with the prospects of a topper when moulted out. That was, however, to come, far from our expectations, for he moulted out a clear, although he had been marked in both wings, eyes, and a little back of head. This was beyond my experience; I had seen them moult out ticked, but for a good marked bird like that to moult clear was as unexpected as surprising. I have had another since, but they are very rare exceptions. I may say after that I could never fairly rely on them, till I saw them moulted.

Most Curious of them all.

Cinnamon-marked breeding is the most curious of all the Yorkshires. You never know what may turn up, a self cinnamon occasionally, a nest of clears, or, maybe, four a. They are a most treacherous breed, and I advise those who have not a long line of patience not to go in for this class of Yorkshire, or their stay in the field of Canary breeding will not be of long duration. Still, it is the most interesting of all the Canary tribe, the great disappointments seem to be relieved by the odd good one or two, which spur you on to try and attain greater and more brilliant success.

I generally find that if a new beginner happens to "hit on" the first or second season, and does wonderfully well, he is, on an average, not long in the Fancy. He will have a reverse, and it comes to him with such a shock that he sells out, not having acquired the patience necessary to all Canary breeders. I like to see a novice get on, but not too fast. He should climb the pole by degrees, for I find those who have gone steady are our best fanciers.

There is another interesting point I would like to mention, a point that has been raised scores of times by the most successful breeders, the law of dark-eyed and pink-eyed breeding. I have heard experienced judges and breeders say, you could not breed a cinnamon-marked cock from a green-marked cock. I have proved this not to be correct. The yellow cinnamon-marked cock first at the Crystal Palace in 1901 was bred from an even-marked green cock and a clear pink-eyed hen; the cock bird having a good percentage of cinnamon blood in him. I have never been able to prove what percentage a green-marked bird must have in it to breed cocks; some say 75 per cent. on the cock side to breed cinnamon-marked cocks.

The Musical Box of the Canary Family:

How the Roller Canary is Trained to Sing.

By J. TOMLINSON (Newcastle, Staffs.).

ANOTHER breeding season is over, having brought in its train the usual amount of pleasure, anxiety, and worry, affecting the spirit of the fancier in a greater or lesser degree, according to his temperament. Those who have scrutinised their CAGE BIRDS will have seen many new ideas depicted, also easier ways of doing things recommended, all of which tend towards the welfare of the stock, not to mention pleasure and profit to their owner.

The old adage, "Penny wise and pound foolish," is never better exemplified than when a bird fancier misses his Journal during that period of the year, which he is pleased to call the "Off-season," meaning the time when there are no show reports, and the advertisements are not up to the complement.

This is the season for the edification of the fancier, as the space hitherto given over to show reports, etc., is then filled with useful articles touching on all branches of the fancy. I am not making this remark in the spirit of light literature, as many will be able to testify, but for its utility to the fancier, as we can vividly recall to memory those times when a specialist journal did not exist.

The "Fortunate" Fancier

The reports to hand of the year's breeding of the Roller Canary are again varied. Some have had good results, extending in a few cases to being overstocked. Some have done badly; whilst again there is the fortunate fancier who says he has finished up the season moderately well. The experienced fancier will say that the name "fortunate," as applied to the latter is no misnomer, as he has a better opportunity of giving the young cocks a better tuition.

Faulty songsters have to be sorted out, and eyes and ears are needed in detecting the culprits. The work is thus more simplified when a moderate number only are in training. Of course, it is a comparatively easy matter to observe faults in a crowd, but it is most difficult to detect the actual offender at once, and in the meantime a detrimental influence is being imparted to the other youngsters.

Choice of a Training Room.

It is necessary to train Rollers properly that they should be removed from the breeding room as soon as they can care for themselves; away from the calls of the breeding hens, and songs of the stock cocks.

A cosy, moderately lighted corner of the living kitchen makes an excellent position, as a training room. I am aware that some fanciers do not agree with my choice. They opine that the members of the household, when passing the birds' cages, cause the youngsters to break off singing during their rehearsals. I contend, on the other hand, that the early removal from the breeding room to an ordinary living kitchen has a very beneficial effect in steadying them, and before they are old enough to sing any recognisable tours they become quite indifferent to the various movements taking place in their vicinity, a training invaluable to birds intended for exhibition purposes. Steadiness is also a valuable asset to a pet bird.

When the young birds are able to crack freely the ordinary canary seed, pick out the hens and transfer them to their winter quarters. This position is determined by the available space at the fancier's command, but it is imperative to good training that the hens be isolated from the young cocks. The staple diet of the latter is best German summer rape seed; extras, such as egg-food, mixed seed, or plain canary, can be given alternately, and in reasonable quantities, up to the period when the birds are nearing the completion of the moult. It is about this time that the different tours will gradually enrol themselves into a recognisable song; but more on this subject anon.

Choosing the Schoolmaster.

During the season the thoughts of the fancier will naturally have turned to the choice of the most suitable bird for a tutor. The decision should rest upon an even mellow-toned singer having the best variety of tours, without any imperfections. Where this is not possible, the faults to be allowed must be counterbalanced by the number and value of the good tours. Consideration must be given to the faulty notes, as some of the imperfections will terminate at that fault, whereas others are conducive to a secondary fault.

Illustrating those which are the most common, I commence with the high bell tour. This is an unpleasant and noisy one, and a bird singing it will nearly always bring out his flutes sharp or nasal. I have given careful thought to the subject of the bell tour, and, in all sincerity, I do not consider it worthy of a place in our birds' repertoire. In its best form it is only credited with two points on the show bench. In the hands of a novice fancier no milder term than dangerous can be applied to it, and it taxes the ingenuity of the experienced fancier in his endeavours to keep it to its normal tone.

The Aufzug is a fault that is not likely to be conducive to another fault, but should a bird singing it be given too much stimulating food, and allowed too much light, the imperfection would probably get worse, and would be known as a hard aufzug, then sounding as a miniature siren whistle. The most lenient of us cannot tolerate this. If the flutes are sung high and quickly, they are classed as sharp flutes, and when given in the "Uncle Sam" twang, are then called nasal flutes.

The hard schwirre is an imperfection that is not so common as the high bell, sharp, or nasal flutes; neither do I think it a stepping stone to a secondary fault. Personally, I have yet to be convinced that there is such a tour as a high schockel. Other imperfections are schnatter, zitt, and the chop. I am now pleased to write that the schnatter is rarely heard, and the chop and the zitt can be summarily dismissed by stating that neither of them is allowed in the song of the high-class Roller.

The trainer will thus observe that it is necessary to use his finest judgment in choosing a bird to act as a tutor. Faultless singers are about as rare as a glimpse of the sun in the Midlands this summer. Neither are they cheap to purchase, so the fancier has to make the best use of the bird which is the most convenient for him. Anon I will give a few methods of using to the best advantage a faulty songster for a schoolmaster.

Touching on the good tours our birds sing, we get the hollow roll in straight and in different keys, rising and falling. This latter way of delivering the hollow roll is a pretty and highly valued one, commencing in a low, wavering voice, then gradually rising, without a break, barely a semitone, afterwards gently falling back again to the original. Another good tour is the hollow bell, and its beauty is enhanced when delivered consecutively in two or more different keys. Glucke and water glucke are eagerly sought for at the present time. Water roll, bell roll, deep bubbling water tour, and bass roll, these are all good tours, although they are liable to deteriorate in their value. They are not even then classed as bad tours or rolls.

Management of the Tutor.

Having advised the beginner in the way of choosing his schoolmaster, a few hints on its management will not be out of place to enable him to maintain it at its present standard of excellence in song. Bird nature can be classed in many respects as similar to human nature. Some will copy and repeat a great deal of what they hear, while others will go on in their own sweet way, refusing to be led or driven.

Through a Bird-room Window

This article on Quaker Parrakeets is No. 28 of the new series of personal birdy experiences related by that eminent aviculturist the Rev. C. D. FARRAR.

No. 28.—MY QUAKER PARRAKEETS.

BOSWELL is careful to tell us that it was a "dull County Magistrate," who irritated the Doctor by a long and tedious account of four convicts whom he had sent to transportation; and drew down upon himself the dreadful response, "I heartily wish, sir, that I were a fifth." I sometimes think I shall some day incur a like wish, and that with my continual coming, I shall weary my long suffering readers. The Editor, however, tells me otherwise; and as the country woman said of the doctor who had attended her husband in his last moments, and who had unfortunately died as the result of his attentions, "he should know as he knowed what 'e gived 'e."

At the time of which I am going to write, retrenchment was in the air. It is all very well to talk of retrenchment. It reminds me of the story of the Duke of Buckingham, who when finance difficulties began to thicken around him manfully resisted all proposals of retrenchment, and when a friend, foreseeing disaster, suggested that it was superfluous to keep, as well as a French chef and an English roasting cook, an Italian confectioner, exclaimed with generous force, "Good gad! Mayn't a man have a biscuit with his glass of sherry." Well, I didn't go quite as far as that, but I must confess that the suggestion for retrenchment was not uncalled for in my case, for at the time I had got two hundred birds of one sort and another, and I was daily adding to their number. It is always well to secure a rare specimen, as you never know when another will turn up. However, at the moment, I was really a little bit frightened at the size of my avian family, and had quite made up my mind to add no more thereto at any rate for the time; but alas, they used no tact in dealing with me. I can be led anywhere, but I won't be driven. I can at times be as stubborn as a mule. They rubbed me up the wrong way by telling me that I was getting old, and ought to take more care of myself.

A Lesson in Tact.

"Remember," they said, "you are no longer as young as you were, and you can't stand going out in the damp grass in all weathers." Here was what I distinctly call an instance of want of tact. An admiring writer once said to Archbishop Longley, when on a visit to Addington, "Dear Archbishop, everybody knows that you have the most wonderful tact in the world. How would you define it?" Here is his Grace's answer. "Not so long ago a clergyman wrote to me politely, asking for a living. He began the letter thus: 'Knowing your Grace's advanced age and increasing infirmities, I can no longer delay to put my wishes before you.' That was not tact." Was it tact to say to a strong and vigorous man of six and forty that he must no longer go out in the damp weather? I determined to show in a practical way that I could, and I would. I hadn't very much money at the time, or else I would have invested in something rare; I therefore did the next best thing, and bought four Quaker Parrakeets, which I saw offered for the modest sum of 15s. Had I known at the time all I learnt subsequently I should have thought them dear at any price.

May not a "Merry" Month.

The time when the advertisement caught my eye was May. Mays have always been disagreeable, except apparently in Chaucer's day, as all readers of the Canterbury Tales will remember. Maybe his description of May was a Canterbury Tale. Matthew Arnold notes a dull first of May in 1863, and in May, 1869, he writes that in this wild east wind everything looks harsh and gloomy. May 22, 1867, was Derby Day, and Hermit won his famous victory with snow lying on the course. In May, 1873, Bishop Wilberforce wrote: "The marks of the frost on the 20th are very sad, large oaks with every leaf shrivelled up, and black as if they had been burnt." I felt that in buying my friends there was a certain amount of risk, but then all the books I consulted told me that Quakers were very hardy. In fact, I had just read a lovely story of how some Quakers escaped in mid-winter, and thoroughly enjoyed themselves in the snow, and kept themselves warm, I presume, by digging great holes in the thatch of a neighbouring barn. It didn't say what the farmer thought of them. In Yorkshire he would have got out his shotgun and ended their career incontinently.

When they came to hand I saw clear marks of their destructive propensities in the gnawed and dilapidated state of the box they had come in. Indeed, I think that if their stay therein had been much longer prolonged I should have received the box without any inside passengers. There was a nasty ugly look about their grey beaks that kept me at a distance, and I opened the box with a long chisel and without any unnecessary handling.

The Voice of the Quakers.

I had only a rather bleak open wire run, covered over with corrugated iron, in which I could put them, so I carried the box out, put it on the floor, prized off the lid, and let them walk out as they liked. They emerged in a few seconds one after the other, and they presented a very ragged appearance, for their tails were a good deal damaged. Not so their voices, for of all the hideous noises I ever heard I think these Quakers took the supremacy. I once had a pair of Solomon Island Cockatoos in the garden, and, at our station a mile away, you could hear them talking to each other, but they talked as African natives say, "with a sweet mouth," compared to these Quakers. The noise they made was ear splitting, and I would defy anyone to speak or think or keep their temper, while they were engaged in conversation. Their cry was a loud piercing scream that seemed capable of going on for ever, world without end.

After looking them well over I concluded that I had got a cock and three hens. There was not much in it, but one looked bolder and more masculine, was cleaner in his white and seemed decidedly the master spirit. I accordingly caught up two of the supposed ladies and caged them, as I knew that more than one lady to a house usually leads to unpleasantness.

A Nest Threatens the Roof.

My next great longing was to see one of the wonderful Quaker nests of which I had read so much. These I was led to believe were as big as haystacks, and composed of sticks that if used by human beings would be as large as ten foot oak beams. Aviculture is a field of liberal proportion, and the labour of those who till it is enriched by many exciting discoveries. In this case I found that, although there had possibly been a little pardonable exaggeration on the part of the writers, there was a very large substratum of truth. Although perhaps Quakers did not build nearly as big as the average haystack, and though they did not use broomsticks to construct it with, they certainly did get together an amazing store of material for so small a bird. My first care was to get a solid foundation for the coming structure. To this end I bought a Tate sugar box, and fastened it up near the roof, and then I went out into the garden and broke off all the poplar branches of about two feet in length I could get hold of. They are nice and soft, and pliable, and do not break. I threw about a barrow load of these on the floor, and then considerately retired for the night. The next morning I was up betimes, and my first look at the floor showed me that all the sticks were gone. The floor was as bare as Mother Hubbard's celebrated cupboard. On going inside I looked into the box, and it was filled nearly up to the top. I said to myself, these are the birds I have been looking for all my life. These are creatures that know how to build, and have no silly modesty about them.

Why Hopes Failed to Materialize.

Visions of medals began to float before my eyes. In fact my next medal seemed something like a dead cert, as the tipsters say. Alas, I little knew these Quakers. They were merely pulling my leg. Day after day I threw in fresh sticks, and day after day they used them up, and still, like Oliver Twist, kept asking for more. Higher and higher grew the structure until I began to think it would force the roof off if it got much bigger, and still nothing happened. Day by day I used to look for eggs, but day after day only to meet with disappointment, and day after day these birds toiled on, as if their very existence depended on it.

Did the Birds Laugh Too?

One day a friend came to see me, and I took him to see the Quakers, and I asked him what he thought was the matter. Had I failed in any respect, and if so, would he kindly point out my shortcomings? My friend is a man who can conceal his feelings usually; he looks at you volto sciolto, pensœra stretti, a frank and open countenance with a prudent and reserved interior. This time, however, his feelings quite got the better of him, and he burst out laughing. I asked him what he found amusing in the situation. "Only my dear chap," he replied, positively rocking with suppressed laughter, "They are two cocks!" and then I remembered how Brahms had once said, "It is as hard to find a wife as to write an opera, I shall attempt neither," and I wished I hadn't, for clearly I knew little about Quaker configuration.

I felt very small, but still I tried to put the best face on the matter, and I invited my friend to come and view the wonderful nest. He apparently could see little to admire, and he even ventured to think that I had placed the sticks in the box and dubbed it a nest. He said it reminded him of the church in Langham Place which was described by the Irish bricklayer "as built according to Mr. Nash's positive orders."

For weeks these wretched birds went on with their building. First they filled the box with sticks, then some fine morning they would pull them out again and commence de novo.

Disturbers of the Peace.

One morning a brilliant idea occurred to me. I would turn out the other two Quakers, and see what would happen. I did it, and you never heard anything more like a pandemonium than the row that ensued.

The noise was something like that which made Hadyn, on hearing the singing of a Presbyterian congregation, exclaim, "Ach! Gott is merciful." Their vocal performances reminded me of the story told to H.M.I. at a certain school. Excuse me, sir, we don't take part singing. The fact is we kind of holloa it together. So dreadful did the nuisance become that my long suffering parishioners threatened to summons me for a nuisance. They said they could neither eat, sleep, nor pray, because of these birds.

Accordingly I was forced to get rid of them. I inserted a little advertisement in the paper. Four Quaker Parrakeets, sex unknown, always building; price 15s. the lot. They went off like hot cakes. I believe I could have sold a score. I often wondered (though I never heard) what was the after life of these birds. Did they live long, and perhaps rear young, or were their necks twisted incontinently at the hands of an irate owner? On the day that they left our station I registered a solemn vow that Quaker Parrakeets should never again enter my doors, and so far I have kept it inviolate.

Just a Word in their Favour.

I can say one thing in favour of Quakers, they are perfectly hardy. I believe that nothing would ever kill them but open violence, and with so many delicate birds about this is surely an advantage. They will thrive on any sort of seed, and if you like nest building they will always gratify your tastes, but if you "seek peace and ensure it," never be tempted to buy a Quaker, no matter at what price he may be offered.

I felt quite like the old rustic who had never been wed as these birds steamed out of our station. True I had failed to get them to nest, and I had (I own with difficulty), refrained from killing them, but as he quaintly remarked to his vicar, "I've been spared the marrying expenses, and that's summat." I've been spared the burying expenses, and that's summat.

Moulting and Exhibiting the Border Fancy Canary.

I strongly believe in giving something tasty in the way of mixed seeds to brace them up. My mixture is composed of equal parts dandelion, thistle, shepherd's purse, plantain, gold of pleasure, lettuce, and maw seeds; it might appear to you rather a tall order this, but I gather most of them myself, so to me it is not so expensive as it is good.

When sending birds to a show I put a teaspoonful of this mixture in their cage so that when they are opened out at the other end there is a nice pick-me-up there for them. Of course that is provided some of our clever railway officials have not turned them upside down before they get to the end of their journey. They get the same mixture when they get home, with the addition of a little heated milk to drink.

The Bath at All Times.

After they have had a feed, if they arrive home in the morning, on goes the bath, let it be sunshine or rain, frost or snow, I don't care which, nor do the birds; how they do enjoy it, in fact they are ready for another bath a couple of hours after. Of course there are times that we might have a bird catch a bit of a cold during its outing; in that case I would withhold the bath and give it a tea spoonful of egg food slightly dusted over with cayenne pepper, and half a teaspoonful of equal parts whiskey and glycerine to two tablespoonfuls of water.

I think everyone here will have read over and over again what is laid down to us as the standard of excellence, and will have studied our Mother Club's Model, the one adopted by us, so it is not at all necessary for me to attempt to tell you something you already know. But I might say that so long as our present model remains unaltered it is our duty to try and breed to it. More than that, there is no judge but who ought to judge to it, and then breeders would know what was really wanted to win. Not as it is at present, some going in for short chubby birds (Miniature Norwich), others for slim straight up and down birds like (Miniature Yorkies). A Border must be proportionately made, and a sort of intermediate between the Norwich and Yorkshire, and should not exceed 5½ inches.

The Show Points of a Border.

The head must be small and neatly rounded from all points of view. You may have seen a bird with a head nicely arched, and some would say it has a nice round head. They appear to only look at it over the top. When viewed face on it may be quite snipey looking, on account of it being not properly filled in on cheeks, but flat; a head of this description is quite as bad as one that is flat on top. Beak nice and fine, a lot of otherwise good birds are simply spoiled on account of having a coarse heavy beak. To me this is an eye-sore, and if allowed any scope will ruin all.

Eyes full, bright, and well set in the head; it sets a bird off does a good eye. Neck inclined to be fine; this is a point where a lot of our would-be Border judges fail, they want them full in the neck, and a bird answering to our standard in neck has to take a back seat.

Back must be nicely rounded; many birds are weak here, having a slight squareness or flatness across the shoulders, which makes the bird appear to be pinched in front, and others have a decided hollow at the bottom, which gives the impression of its being hunch-backed. It must be well filled in, and run in a straight line from the gentle rise of the shoulders right down to the tail.

Chest also must be nicely rounded; just full enough to take the Yorkie look from the bird, but not so prominent as a Norwich, just sufficient to hide the butts of the wings with a gradual sweep all the way, giving the bird a wedge-like appearance. Wings well laid on, that is meeting all the way down the back and terminating at the tail. Quite a lot of birds have wings just meeting at the tips, but which appear as if they had had a piece cut out of them just above the rump; this is another bad fault. Tail a nice length harmonising with the body and neatly folded, carried well up to the wings, and don't forget well filled in at the base; failing that it spoils the bird of that nice graceful sweep we all admire.

Where Colour-feeding is Barred.

Legs of medium length, showing a little thigh set, and fine, not coarse, feet, neat and in harmony. Plumage as close as ever you can get it, and also rich and soft in colour, which must be natural, as you are all aware we are colour feeding in our variety.

Position. Standing at an angle of about 45 degrees, not straight up and down like a Yorkshire, nor as low down as a Norwich, but a bit in between. In fact a Border Fancy is a sort of go-between the two all the way.

Such, gentlemen, is my own opinion of what a good Border ought to be. I now beg to thank you one and all for your patient hearing. I hope everyone will express views on anything I have said, as I am not merely here to-night to teach any of you, but to open out a friendly discussion, as it is in an exchange of opinions that we are likely to learn far more than by lecturing.

We hear that owing to increased trade, Mr. W. Cottingham, of 9, Peveril Street, Nottingham, has had to take additional premises at No. 7, and intends running the two shops, with one of the largest and most up-to-date stocks of birds, seeds and foods, cages and appliances, in the Midlands, and under the old business motto of "Straightforward dealings."

The handbook of the Norwich Plainhead C.C. is as neat in get-up as usual. It contains the rules of the club, the points of an exhibition Plainhead, the list of shows (10) at which the Club's patronage will be given during the coming season, a list of members, and other useful information. The balance-sheet shows a credit balance of £1 6s., but this is inclusive of £2 7s. 6d. outstanding.

Will you kindly state, asks Mr. Robinson, Hon. Sec. Hanley and Dist. C.B.S., that we have got the Patronage of the Midland Counties Yorkshire Canary Club, both in open and novice. It would be a help to others if you could ask exhibitors when sending for schedules not to use an envelope with a note inside, with only a halfpenny stamp for postage. I received one such this morning. Fortunately, I caught sight what it was and gave it the postman back. I was sharp enough to see on the note schedule, Brownson, Spennymoor, but I did not get the proper address.

The principal item in the September issue of the "Avicultural Magazine," the journal of the Avicultural Society, is the first instalment of a most interesting account of the breeding of the Black Redstart, by Mr. Teschemaker, B.A. Mr. Frank Finn gives some practical advice on "The Transport of Birds." An entertaining account of the keeping of the Paradise Flycatcher is written by Mr. Stuart Baker. Mrs. Currey writes on the importance of "Fresh Air for Birds." The series "Practical Bird-keeping" is continued this month by Mr. St. Quintin by an account of the keeping of various Game birds in captivity.

To Club Secretaries.

We have made arrangements where-by a large and comfortable room at our offices, 154, Fleet Street, E.C., will be at the disposal of Specialist Societies, Fancier's Societies and Clubs, etc., wishing to use same for the purpose of meetings, gatherings, etc. The only stipulation we make is that due notice be given the Editor of CAGE BIRDS in good time before the room is wanted, together with the specified hour and date. The room will be at their disposal entirely free of any charge except where the meetings are to be held at night-time, when a nominal charge of 2s. 6d. will be made to defray cost of electric lighting and caretaker's expenses. We hope secretaries will take advantage of CAGE BIRDS' original idea.

Dispersal of a Famous Collection of Birds.

We have an item of news to convey this week which will come as a surprise to aviculturists, and be received, we think, with no small amount of regret. It is that the famous collection of birds brought together by Mons. Pauwels, of Everberg, Belgium, is to be dispersed. With the magnificence of the range of aviaries and birdrooms erected by M. Pauwels and the glorious birds he has collected therein, most of the readers of our journal will be acquainted. By the aid of Mr. O. Millsum, the well-known English aviculturist (late of Swindon) during the last few years there has been gathered together at Everberg a superb assemblage of the gems of the avian tribe, probably unsurpassed by any other private collection in the world. The many unique examples M. Pauwels has exhibited at the chief London shows, to the delight of all bird-lovers here, will be readily recalled—the Cock of the Rock, the Fairy Blue Bird, the Blue Budgerigars, and the Birds of Paradise come at once to the mind.

It will be readily realised that it is not without a pang that M. Pauwels gives up his birds, or Mr. Millsum severs his connection with them. But Mr. Millsum has been led to the latter decision in the interests of his wife and children. M. Pauwels, though he deeply regrets the severance, admits that he (Mr. M.) has decided aright, and in view of the nature of his collection of birds, and that he cannot replace Mr. Millsum's services under similar conditions, has reluctantly come to the conclusion that he had best dispose of all his stock, excepting, maybe, the inmates of the largest British Bird aviary. As Mr. Millsum practically founded the collection, he is, at M. Pauwels expressed wish, to stay at Everberg until he has disposed of it. A catalogue of the stock is in course of preparation, and will be ready in a week or so's time; those desirous of securing one should apply to Mr. Millsum, Everberg par Cortenberg, Brabant, Belgium (postage—postcard 1d., letters 2½d.)

Mr. J. R. Meikle, Secretary, Scottish Metropolitan (Open Derby) O.A., requests us to state that he has received an entry form, with three exhibits thereon, but member has forgotten to put his name and address. Birds are entered as follows: One in class 3, £20, and two in class 7, £20 each. If the exhibitor will bring or send his exhibits to show hall, the class and name labels will be put on cages, as they are ready.

OBITUARY.

Mr. G. WALTON (Birmingham).

It is with great regret, writes Mr. J. Sheppard, Small Heath, that I have to report the death of one of our most popular members of the South Birmingham O.S., Mr. G. Walton, who passed away after a short illness on Thursday last, the 19th inst., at his residence, Maine Street, Sparkhill, Birmingham. In him, the Society lose a great helper. He was a cage-maker of no mean repute, showing at all the leading shows, and his cages were always admired. The Society was represented by Mr. E. Hall at the funeral, and sent a beautiful wreath. To the widow, in her sad bereavement, the members one and all tender their deepest heartfelt sympathy.

Mr. TINNISWOOD MILLER (London, S W.)

It is with the deepest regret that we find it devolves upon us to announce the death of that prominent London bird-lover, Mr. Tinniswood Miller, under circumstances of a particularly distressing and painful character. The deceased gentleman was found dead at his office on September 19; he had shot himself with a magazine pistol. The reason for this act would seem to have been worry over the depreciation of investments, owing to the pressure of latter-day taxation; but in a letter left by Mr. Miller it was stated that his wife's income would be about £400 per annum. A pathetic feature emphasising Mr. Miller's great love of his birds, lay in a document he left giving at length directions for their treatment. Mrs. Miller, to whom we tender our heartfelt condolences, and to whom will go out the respectful sympathy of all bird-lovers, is also very fond of birds, and a patron of CAGE BIRDS LEAGUE.

The late Mr. Tinniswood Miller took an active interest in the cage bird hobby, and many of the beautiful and rare foreign birds owned by his wife and himself were to be seen at the chief London shows, usually figuring high in the prize list. Mr. Miller was for a time chairman of the London Cage Bird Association, and worked hard to ensure the success of the great Horticultural Hall shows held under the auspices of that body. He was also prominently identified with the work of the Foreign Bird Club (acting at one time as honorary treasurer), and was a Fellow of the Zoological Society. The deceased gentleman was of a genial, kindly disposition, and had endeared himself to a wide circle of birdkeepers, by whom his loss will be sincerely mourned.

Mr. Wesley T. Page, hon Editor of the Foreign Bird Club's monthly magazine, writes: "This terribly sad event hits me very hard indeed—I have lost a cordial and valued friend—as indeed it must even those who had but a passing acquaintanceship with Mr. Miller. I have known him for over six years, during the greater part of which he has been a valued colleague in the work of the Club. Mr. and Mrs. Miller were childless, and the care usually lavished on a family was in this instance bestowed on their birds—no trouble was too arduous to secure their well-being. In some instances, with certain species, the cage trays were cleaned thrice daily. Mr. Miller's death will come as a sad blow to his fellow-members of the Foreign Bird Club."

The Bold Missel Thrush.

To distinguish the Missel Thrush from the Song Thrush is not a very difficult matter. The Missel is larger, greyer in colour, and lacks the nut-brown colouring of the more accomplished singer, he is also more profusely spotted, particularly on the flanks where the spots are bold and very regular. He flies higher with big sweeps of the wings, and looks almost as large as a pigeon.

SCOTCH FANCY NATIONAL DERBY (Glasgow).

Annual show and competition, held in the Grand National Halls, Main Street, Gorbals, Glasgow, Sept. 21, amid genial weather conditions. The hall was well lighted, and the genial sunlight which shone in during the afternoon lent a pleasing aspect to the tiers of cages, and must have been a great help in the work entailed on those responsible for the placing of the awards. The bird of the Scotsman was well represented here, both in quantity and quality, and we noticed the presence of many well-known fanciers of the bird o' circle. While the membership was slightly less than the previous year, entries were up, which, notwithstanding the bad breeding season experienced by many, may be taken as very satisfactory. Mr. Baird, the secretary, knows his book; he is courteous and obliging to all, and the work proceeds as methodically and silently as the tick of the clock. That his services are much appreciated goes without saying. The Hon. President, Mr. Wm. Hart, is the genuine article, while President R. Wright and Vice-president County Councillor Jas. Hogg are both men of high renown in the Scots Fancy cult. Messrs. Paterson, Edinburgh; Borland, Galston; Watson, Glasgow; and Price, Barrhead, made the awards, and there was little grumbling to be heard. The Derby winner is a clinking specimen, and a popular win, hailing from the famous McClure stud, as likewise did the runner up, and best of opposite sex to cup winner. Willie had donned his best smile, and may well be envied as well as congratulated upon his success. We heard many expressions of regret over the untimely demise of the respected late hon. sec., Mr. T. Smith.

The Critique.

CL. OR FOUL YELL. CK. (24): 1, Brown, massive cl., in fine trim, grand depth through, A1 top end, and clean cut away below; 2, Montgomery, grand foul, fine reach and good top end, not just so thick as leader, but a fine free worker, and a good trier for 1st; 3, McClure, nice size, fairly good shape and style, but not just up to the scratch line yet; 4, Main, in fine trim and nicely set down, a good one, hard on the run for higher honours; 5, Muir; 6, Stewart; 7, Fulton; 8, Vernall. YELL. CK., PIED. OR GREEN (23): 1, McLennan, massive built, and deep through, nice reach and style, not quite ready yet, but should take some shifting ere the season closes; 2, Muir, smaller in build, but very stylish, and a free worker, wants a little more depth, otherwise good; 3, Stewart, similar in size to 2nd, nice top end, fine reach, shapely, but could do with more size; 4, Fulton, nice one for size and shape, looking a bit soft when we saw it; 5, Campbell; 6, Dalgleish; 7, Jackson; 8, McMillan. BUFF CK., CL., OR FOUL (29): 1, 2, Brown, leading with a grand nervy foul, nice top end and determined drive, free to work; a well made showy specimen, 2nd, again a good one, shapely and stylish, failing a little to leader in shoulder; 3, Dalgleish, rare size and depth, well under perch, in grand condition; not quite the style of those in front, still a good 3rd; 4, Fulton, quite a nice one for size, substance and quality; 5, McClure; 6, Jardine; 7, Lyle; 8, Thornton. BUFF COCK, PIED OR GREEN (25): 1, and best opposite sex to cup winner, McClure, real nervy free working exhibit, capital top end and drive, and fine substance, in capital condition, wins in grand fashion; 2, McLennan, real good one, steady as a rock, and takes the position at once, running well up on leader for top place; 3, Muir, good thick made typical specimen, in fine condition, gives way to leaders in point of reach; 4, Slater, really a good one, in fine form, fine in shape, style and reach, deserves its position here; 5, Wilson; 6, Dalgleish; 7, Wilson; 8, Fulton. YELL. HEN, CL., OR FOUL (30): 1, 2, Brown, leader a grand high coloured cl., in faultless condition, and possessing rare qualities throughout, a topper, 2nd, nice one for shape and style, fails in size to leader, and is not quite finished yet; 3, 8, Stewart, 3rd, nice size and girth, in good condition, a trifle more reach would make big difference; 4, McClure, lacks the size and substance of leaders, still a nice one in capital trim; 5, Muir; 6, Neil; 7, McIlwain. YELL. HEN, PIED OR GREEN (21): 1, Menzies, massive pied lady, plenty of size and substance here, nice quality and deep through, reachy and prominent in drive, one of the right sort; 2, Jardine, another pied, of fair size, but not quite the same stuff as leader, and barely ready yet; 3, Maxwell, smallish green, nice in shape and style, good action, just wants substance to make up something nice; 4, Muir, similar in size to 3rd, in nice trim, but beaten here; 5, Renfrew; 6, Wilson; 7, Thornton; 8, Gibb. BUFF HEN, CL. OR FOUL (30): 1, McClure, capital cl., shown in faultless condition, fine reach and drive, deep made and a stylish free worker, wins well; 2, Brown, another nice one for type and size, but not quite so thick through as leader, still, a good trier for the top; 3, Orr, another fine specimen, well up for type and quality, and not much to choose between for 2nd place; 4, Dalgleish, still well to the front for quality and shape, features which in this class were more consistent than in any other in the show; 5, Main; 6, Thornton; 7, Beattie; 8, Moore. BUFF HEN, PIED OR GREEN (34): 1, and cup, McClure, here we had a taste of real Scotch, not one of the largest, but all there for type and quality, capital shape and rare reach and drive, and staged to win; 2, Gray, large and shapely exhibit, slow to work, and could be better in reach, looked just scarcely ready yet; 3, McLennan, a real sweet one, looking very fit when we saw it, capital shape and reach, with just a little more depth would be a tickler and would not have disgraced the 2nd ticket; 4, 5, Dalgleish, 4th, very fine exhibit, nice style and action, looking very fit, not just the size of those in front, but one the right kind; 6, Brown; 7, Stewart; 8, Moore.

I have been a reader of CAGE BIRDS for nearly two years now and have gained much useful information from its pages, to which I owe much of my success this season, writes Mr. R. W. Campbell (Cambridge).

I was pleased, on reading report of the L. and L.F.A. meeting, to note the great satisfaction expressed at the Lancashires and Lizards having been again catered for at Sheffield show, after an absence of some years, writes Mr. T. Bishop, the secretary, and beg to thank Messrs. Maitland and Vickers for their special prizes. In all, we have seventy-two classes, with prize money and money specials to the amount of £100. The patronage of the Y.C.C., C.M.Y.C.C., O.N.P.C., L. and L.F.A., L.C.A., N.B.B.M.C., Y.C.B.B.M.C, and F.B.C has been secured, and exhibitors' instructions will be carried through by a committee of thorough practical fanciers.

Sympathy.

It is with sincere sorrow that I have to open my notes of this week by recording that one of our patrons, Mrs. Tinniswood Miller, has suffered the worst affliction that may happen to any woman, the death of her husband. Mr. Tinniswood Miller, whose untimely death is referred to in another column, was well known to all of us who take especial interest in the foreign birds which form such an attractive section of our shows. Mrs. Miller was herself responsible for the exhibition of many of the exquisite specimens shown, and in the perfection in which they have always been staged there was evident the touch of a lady's hand, but Mr. Miller was as well known to the experts who delight to gather around the foreign birds, as was Mrs. Miller herself, and the birds were one of his greatest pleasures. His death has come as a violent shock to a very wide circle of friends. To Mrs. Miller in her sad bereavement I tender heartful sympathy, in which I am sure I shall be joined by all CAGE BIRDS LEAGUE members.

Cage Bird Fund for the Distress in Norwich.

With the £11 18s. 6d. acknowledged last week, our fund in aid of the distressed Canary breeders of Norwich now amounts to £12 5s. 6d., the undermentioned amounts having been received since our last and up to the time of writing, Wednesday, Sept. 25. There must be many CAGE BIRDS LEAGUE members who are intending to subscribe to this very worthy object, the relief of fellow fanciers in distress, and I hope that all these will be kind enough to send along their contributions without delay, so that our committee of good friends at Norwich who have promised to see that the funds are judiciously administered in alleviation of real necessity may get to work. The amounts received since the last list are: 2s. each, Mrs. Spooner and H. Whyte; 1s. each, W. O. March, D. Storran, and "Carmarthen."

For particulars of membership, coupon, etc., see page 743 of last week's issue.

We have again secured the Masonic Hall for our show on Nov. 2, writes Mr. Cameron, secretary Bo'ness and Dist. F.A., and I think there is no better hall in Scotland for the purpose. Bo'ness is situated on the North British Railway, and has access from all parts. Late trains run on Saturday night at 7.50 and 10.40 to suit connection to all parts.

The September issue of "Bird Notes," the organ of the Foreign Bird Club, opens with an account by Mr. Herbert Bright of the foreign birds in his ontdoor aviaries at Liverpool. The Rev. J. M. Paterson contributes an interesting account of the nesting of the Amethyst Sun bird in an Indian garden. Mr. Hopkinson continues the series, "Birds of Gambia." Dr. Gosse writes of the breeding of Malabar Mynahs in his aviary. Mr. Shore Baily tells of a hen Starling in his aviary which received visits from a wild male which went to and fro through a small hole, with the result that she hatched three young. The Rev. G. H. Raynor writes of the Senegal Parrot, his old favourite the Meyer's Parrot, and the very rare Aubry's Parrot, which latter will grace the show bench at the next Palace Show, thus making a first appearance at a bird show. Miss Hartley describes the breeding of a Hybrid between Swainson's Loriket and the Chattering Lory. Not the least interesting item in the issue is an account of a clever performing Ring-neck Parrakeet belonging to Mr. Ezra. This talented bird does quite a number of tricks,

Answered by CLAUDE ST. JOHN.

TEMPERATURE OF DRYING CAGE (Border).—I have not really taken the temperature inside an ordinary drying cage in which birds are dried before a fire after washing. You should easily be able to utilise your own discretion in this matter, as everything naturally turns upon the condition of the fire in the grate. As a general guide for the first 10 or 15 minutes, whilst the birds are wrapped up place them near enough to feel a good warm glow on the back of your hand, but not in any sense a blistering or even uncomfortable degree of heat. When they are unwrapped place them a little farther back, but still where a quite comfortable glow will fall upon them, say, if there is a nice clean glowing fire in the bars at a distance of 2½ft. to 3ft. As soon as the birds begin to move about on the perches and shake out their feathers, put them still a little farther back from fire, or if the plumage still seems very full of moisture leave them in the same place a little longer, but throw a light linen or thin muslin cover over the front of cage to temper the heat a little, and a quarter of an hour or so later draw cage farther back. It is not wise to try to dry the birds too quickly. For fullest details of washing you should get Part IV. of "Our Canaries."

OUTSIDE AVIARY (Caxton).—The fact of your boards being tongued and grooved does not alter the thickness of them, which is the essential part, and the fact remains that there is but a bare half inch betwixt your bird's sanctuary and the raging or blazing, as the case may be, elements outside, and you are doubtless aware how long it will take a blazing sun or a piercing frost to make itself felt through such slight walls. If you know this you should be able to foresee the immense and rapid fluctuations the birds may have to endure. You should really make an effort to line the inside with thin boards, and fill in the space between with sawdust or wool waste. I note you say it is nicely sheltered from the wind, and if this also includes shelter from rain and snow to a fair extent, it is quite possible that hardy Canaries raised under quite normal conditions of temperature would thrive there all the year round without heat, as it stands, without the suggested alteration, but there would doubtless be a certain amount of risk. How much, I cannot say, as it depends solely upon the local conditions. In any case the present is a bad time to put out birds for the first time. It would be much safer to keep them in a cold room indoors until next March. Norwich Plainheads would be a very good variety to begin with for this class of work.

COLD AND SINGING (Donco).—(1) See that the bird is in a fairly equable temperature, quite free from cold draughts, and the fumes of burning lights in the evenings. In addition to the usual seed diet give half a teaspoonful of crushed sponge cake with four drops of sherry and two of cod liver oil emulsion, well mixed in it every second day for a fortnight. On the alternate days give a pinch of equal parts maw, inga, and gold of pleasure seed, and a spray of green food. In the drinking water add 20 drops of whisky, five each of Ipecacuhana wine and oxymel of squills, and two of eucalyptus oil, and shake well together, every second day for a fortnight. For full details of feeding get the No. 5 Nutshell Booklet, or No. 10 if your bird is a Roller. (2) Yes, the Canary has a natural song of its own, which it will sing intuitively, so to speak, without the aid of a tutor. But if you want a really good songster it is quite as important to provide good tutors as to breed for them. Tuition is absolutely essential for high-class songsters. Your bird, to be properly taught, should have been under a tutor quite two or three months. (3) The song of a highly trained Roller would probably be corrupted by the presence of Lark and Blackbird. But in the case of an ordinary songster it would not, in my opinion, suffer any deterioration. It is, however, just a matter of personal taste.

BRITISH BIRDS, MULES AND HYBRIDS.

Answered by G. E. WESTON.

SEPARATING FLUFF FROM SEED (Open to Learn).—A method largely adopted to separate thistle seed from the "fluff" is to drop it into a shallow pan of water. The seed sinks leaving the fluff and rubbish floating at the top. Drain away the water, and spread the seed on paper in the sun to dry. Note also letter in correspondence columns this week.

A THRUSH'S CLOGGED NOSTRILS (G. Hedges).—Wash out the nostrils with warm water to which a few drops of Condy's fluid have been added. When the deposit has been softened, pass a tiny feather (or camel-hair pencil brush) into the nostrils, first soaking it, of course, in the warm solution of Condy's fluid. Two or three drops of the latter should be stirred into the bird's drinking water (fresh twice daily) for a short period.

CUTTING YOUNG BLACKBIRD'S TONGUE (A. White).—Surely there cannot be people in Birmingham so ignorant as to tell you that a young Blackbird won't sing unless its tongue is cut? It seems incredible. Are you sure they were serious; or were they only "pulling your leg"? I can only say that it would be an act of gross cruelty to cut any Blackbird's tongue, and that the person guilty of it ought to suffer imprisonment. How do the Blackbirds of the fields get their tongues cut, I wonder? Yet they manage to sing. No bird's tongue needs cutting, either for singing or talking; the barbarous operation, in fact, has no effect.

THE CASE OF A THRUSH (W. Draper).—Your feeding of the bird may not be correct—i.e., not nutritious and digestible. Consult the "Nutshell" booklet on the Song Thrush (post free 2½d.), or the bird may be troubled with parasites (in which case consult CAGE BIRDS ANNUAL). You do not say anything at all concerning your methods of management. Does it have regular opportunites of bathing? You could try applying once daily, with your finger, gently, and rubbing the way the feathers should lie, just a little of a mild sulphur ointment, which any chemist would supply.

A BULLFINCH (W. H. B.).—Doesn't the bird show any sign of moulting? Spray him very lightly once daily with a solution of boric acid (half an ounce in a pint of water). A scent spray can be utilised for this purpose. Don't make the bird very wet and bedraggled; direct the solution chiefly on the bare parts. If this has no effect, write me again in about a fortnight's time. Providing your stock mixture does not contain hemp, you seem to be feeding the bird on correct lines. I expect he has not moulted, or his condition would hardly have been so bad.

A CLUTCH OF SEVEN (Dr. E. Sprawson).—(1) The room will hold five pairs providing they are selected so as not to "clash," as it were. (2) The four hen Bullies would be certain to quarrel. Two would be the outside allowance; even then there might possibly be trouble. (3) The eggs would most certainly be better under foster-mothers (hen Canaries), but occasionally a hen Finch will rear her young, the Greenfinch being the likeliest of all. I have known hen Goldies, Redpolls, Siskins, and Linnets to succeed; but the reverse is usually one's experience. (4) Yes; Hybrids from Siberian parents compete in the same classes as Hybrids bred from British parents. (5) They could be moulted together, but it is necessary to remove them out of sight and hearing towards the end of January. It is a well-known dodge, however, to hang a male of the same species as the hen, on the front of the aviary or cage, when the hen is showing signs of nesting, the idea being to induce her to "call" to him and allow the male bird she is paired with to take advantage of the opportunity thus presented to him. (6) I have always found it more difficult to get Siberian hen Bullies and cock Goldies to breed than their English relatives. (7) Size is the only advantage accruing from the Siberian parentage; an extremely valuable item, however.

FOREIGN BIRDS.

SEXING PARROTS (J. S.).—The species of Parrots are legion, and until you tell me what kind of Parrot your bird is, I cannot reply to your query.

HOW MANY, ETC. (A.B.C.).—Your aviary will accommodate about two dozen birds of the small Finch type, but I should content myself with six pairs to secure best results, this will leave some accommodation for any young birds reared. Note: It is best to keep only one pair of each species in the same enclosure. You already have two pairs, and I suggest the following four as likely to give good results, viz., Zebra Finches, Avadavats, Bronze Mannikins, and Silverbills. Supply canary, white millet, millet sprays, and a little wild Finch mixture; also green food, and when they are feeding young a little soft food daily. Bird grit (not sand), and cuttlebone must be regularly supplied. "Foreign Birds for Beginners," 1s. 1½d., post free, from our Manager, would greatly assist you in keeping and treating the above species.

SEXING MADAGASCAR LOVEBIRDS (Geo. J. Anson).—There is no difficulty at all in sexing these birds. The hen is an uniform green, while the head and neck of the cock is a pale lavender-grey. Your diet is about right, but I should give the millet and canary in equal parts; supply a little green food daily, and let them take what they require; lettuce will be the mainstay as soon as frost really sets in. If they will nibble up a little ripe apple, supply this regularly. Keep a piece of clean cuttlebone in the cage or aviary, and supply bird grit (not sand) regularly. A tablespoonful of crushed oats and a millet spray about twice a week make a wholesome change.

RED MITE (E. A. B. N.).—The probability is that the red mite is in the cage, and only troubles the birds at night. The cage must be thoroughly sterilised. Paint it thoroughly inside and out with a 10 per cent. carbolic solution, well searching all crevices; allow to stand in open air for a few hours, then thoroughly swill every part with boiling water; finally swill thoroughly with cold water, and leave in the open (under cover) till dry; distemper the inside, and it will be ready for use. In the meantime, continue to give the birds the quassia bath, but also catch each bird as gently as possible, and rub or blow a little insect powder into the plumage, particularly under the wings, base of neck, and lower back. By the time the cage is ready the birds should be free of the pests. Get fresh perches, natural twigs, and well boil all food utensils and hoppers.

IN POOR PLUMAGE (B. Margratti).—It would appear that there is something constitutionally wrong with this bird. Continue to give the magnesia and byno-phosphates, also the diet you are at present giving. In addition, supply boiled maize, boil till soft, but the corn should be left whole though soft, drain all water away, and dust with flowers of sulphur; if you can get it to take this, it should benefit the bird greatly, but it will be slow work getting its condition up, and the recovery of the plumage can only be slow. It might be a good plan to remove the seed over night, and then first thing give the the boiled maize, and not put in the seed till it has satisfied its first hunger with the maize; after a time or two of this I should say it would acquire a taste for the maize. If the bird is tame and will let you handle it, give it 5 drops of cod liver oil daily from a quill. Report progress in a month.

GREY PARROT (Long Sett).—(1) There must be no sudden change in the diet. Continue to supply the boiled maize, but keep a tin of the seed mixture in the cage. You can also put a little seed mixture under the boiled maize; the boiled maize must be continued till the bird is eating heartily of the dry seed. When this occurs, gradually discontinue the maize; also supply the other items of the diet mentioned in the booklet. (2) Cease giving the chalk, but spot 10 drops of byno-phosphates over the boiled maize before supplying to the bird—give this daily for the present. Keep a piece of clean cuttlebone hanging in the cage. Dusting the maize twice a week with flowers of sulphur will help. (3) Get some parrot grit, but only give it cautiously at first. Later, when it has become accustomed to it, a small tin of this may be kept regularly in the cage. The sand you refer to will do excellently to cover the cage tray with, and the pinch of grit can be sprinkled on top of same. (4) This is a young bird and I should not offer it a proper bath till next spring, but about noon on a warm, genial day, give it a light spraying (use a mist sprayer) with tepid water—once or twice a week will be often enough during the cold months—keep strictly out of draught till dry.

AILING RIBBON FINCH (R.S.C.).—I do not think the trouble is serious, though she may be troubled with egg-binding. If the latter be the case she will appear swollen around the vent, and you must anoint the vent with castor-oil, but do not put on sufficient to run among and grease the plumage—a feather is a good utensil to use—also give two drops of castor oil direct to the beak: if this does not enable her to get rid of the egg in the course of a few hours, then steam the vent by holding the bird over a jug of hot water, afterwards putting her in a small cage in some warm position, when the egg should soon be passed. You are feeding the bird correctly, but the green food must be given fresh daily; you should also get a packet of bird grit (not sand), and sprinkle a pinch of this over sand tray daily, also keep a piece of clean cuttlebone hanging in the cage. Keep a few mealworms by you, and give each of them one or two daily. If there are no traces of egg binding, then give a dose of magnesia (Dinneford's) every fourth day, so long as the voidings are not watery loose, and on the other days (that is, when not giving the magnesia) put half a teaspoonful of byno-phospbates in the usual supply of drinking water. If the trouble does not yield to the above treatment in, say, 14 days, repeat query with the fullest details you can give me as to symptoms, etc.

GENERAL.

Answered by THE EDITOR.

W. E. Atkins.—Yours is certainly an ingenious idea; but unfortunately we find it hard to believe that it will work.

W. J. Bell.—Your letter has been duly forwarded.

G. Reynolds.—Many thanks for the interesting cutting. It goes in at the first opportunity.

John Watson.—We are afraid that the story you send of the King and the Hawk is too well known to justify reproduction in our pages.

H. O. Barraclough.—Your query has been sent to Mr. St. John to be answered in his columns.

POST MORTEMS.

Mr. G. Yates, M.R.C.V.S., 1, College Road, Harrow, Middlesex, will examine and report upon dead cage birds for a fee of 1s. 6d. each bird; for reply direct, 2s. 6d.; analysis, 21s. Subjects for post mortem examination must be sent packed in a box direct to Mr. Yates, with the fee, this and any accompanying letter being kept from contact with the dead bird. Send by letter-post; it is cheaper and quicker than parcel post. Any bodies sent to the office of this paper will be thrown away, and if a fee is enclosed the loss will be the sender's.

Novice.—Septic fever.

A. F. Willett.—Liver disease accompanied with inflammation of the bowels.

THE CHOOSING & PREPARATION OF SHOW BIRDS.

A lecture given by Mr. J. Burke to the members of the S. Birmingham O.S.

A meeting of the S. Birmingham O.S. was held September 11, at headquarters, the Sydenham Hotel. The chair was taken by Mr. Willmott before an excellent gathering of members. Messrs. Longmore and Shepperson elected members. Chairman welcomed them on behalf of the members, and hoped that they would do their best to attend every meeting on the second of each month. He also congratulated the society that the total membership of the society was now 64. The young stock show business was put back until the October meeting, when a washing exhibition will be held; a well-known expert being engaged. Specials have already commenced to come in for the young stock show, which will be held on a Wednesday at the end of October or first week in November. The Chairman then introduced Mr. Burke to the members to give his lecture on the preparation of show birds, and Mr. Burke spoke as follows:

My title, "Preparing birds for Exhibition," covers a rather long period, for during the whole of the time the birds are moulting you are preparing them for exhibition. Starting from the time the birds are near the finish of the moult, you will soon gather what birds you have got that give promise of being good enough to exhibit. All these you will have to place in separate cages, and you will still continue to give colour food, but in reduced quantities, three times per week will be plenty.

For the staple food use plain Spanish canary seed, and twice a week give mixed seed. I use the following mixture: 1lb. of German rape, 1lb. of gold of pleasure seed, and 1lb. of linseed. Give also a piece of boiled carrot about twice per week, plenty of fresh water, and baths on all bright days. If you follow this treatment you will have your birds healthy, and it is all that is necessary, as common sense and strict attention is far better than pampering them.

What a Good Yorkshire is Like.

I will now try and give you my idea of what is wanted in a show Yorkshire, as your time and trouble is wasted unless you have got the bird to start with. It is no good having a bird good in parts; it must be good all over, and each part must be in proportion, or it will not be properly balanced. Starting from the beak, this should be small; the head rounded from side to side, and oval from front to back; the eyes not too high, or it will make the bird look flat-headed; the neck rather long, and nicely fitted on the shoulders, which should be round, not showing any squareness at the butts of the wing; the back full with no signs of any hollowness down the middle; the breast round, but not bulky, and free from frill; wings good length, neither crossed or open, but just meeting all down the back; legs of good length but not stilty; tail long and closely packed, and carried up to the tips of the wing, not showing any space between wings and root of the tail. I like them as large as I can get them, so long as they are in proportion all over. If you have a few, or even one bird, after something I have described, you are well on the way.

Now to speak of getting them in condition. The best of Yorkshires will not stand much chance on the show bench unless in high condition. If they come naturally in condition with the ordinary treatment, let well alone. If you cannot get them in robust condition, the following mixture will be found useful: sixpennyworth of sherry, one pennyworth of honey; dissolve honey in the sherry, then take an ordinary sponge cake as stale as possible, cut in about one inch squares, pour the sherry and honey on same, as much as it will soak up; give a piece to each bird twice or three times per week, and about three drops of dandelion juice in each tablespoonful of water about twice a week.

Training your birds is an imperative necessity. They may be perfect in shape, but unless they can be shown in good position and with style they will be of little use on the show bench. You must make a practice of running them in the show cage for a short time every day, handle them very gently, scratch the bottom of the cage until they stand erect and fearless; if they are very nervous leave them in the show cage for a day now and then. A wash is a good steadier, but as a washing exhibition is part of next month's programme, I will conclude.

The lecture was followed by a discussion, during which Mr. Burke answered several questions put to him by the members.

Questions and Answers.

Mr. Hughes: Are you in favour of pulling the tails of young birds? Mr. Burke: I am strongly against this process. I have had over 16 years of the Fancy in Yorkshires, and have found by experience that no good comes of this; it produces a very bad waist and drop tails. I only pull the tail out if the tail feather is broken or if the bird has a slight inflammation, in which case it does some good. I am always of opinion that it puts the bird out of proportion; you only get, at most, a quarter of an inch added to its length.—By Mr. Sheppard: Had Mr. Burke a good remedy for a bird which in the show cage was always jumping on to the end wires, as a bird in top condition was always shifty? Mr. Burke said patience was the only remedy, although a piece of shaped cardboard, placed inside the show cage at each end just to reach to the middle cross wire, and the bird left in for half-a-day was a fine steadier. He must warn members against the use of glass; he himself had tried it with very bad results. It was useless, and often drove the bird very wild, and spoilt it for the show season.

Mr. Adcock: Could Mr. Burke recommend anything more successful than sulphate of iron for fixing the colour? Mr. Burke replied that he always used citrate of iron and ammonia. It should be kept in an airtight bottle, and a little put in the drinkers, say three times per week, was far more suitable and produced greater results than the old sulphate of iron.

Mr. Andrews: Did Mr. Burke like the bird with soft feather or short, hard feather? Mr. Burke: Undoubtedly the bird with the short hard feather was far superior for the show bench, and the washing of that kind of bird was no trouble. He had washed birds with soft and with hard feather, and the former took sometimes three hours to dry, but the latter would dry and be to all appearance fit to show in one hour.

As time was getting late, Chairman Willmott spoke shortly on the capital information they had all obtained, for himself all new. He was the real novice of the society, and he hoped the secretary would have more of these interesting and sociable table chats. He was sure all would be better able to turn out a real good bird, after Mr. Burke's lecture. He should therefore propose a most hearty vote of thanks. This was seconded by Mr. Southon, and given most heartily. We hope all will come to the October meeting, and learn how to wash their birds and also bring a good sample to wash, one that has had a flight to moult in.—J. Sheppard, Sec.

Club Reports.

ANNFIELD PLAIN C.B.S.

Meeting held at Mr. Lumley's, Sept. 14, with Mr. S. Foster in the chair, and a good turn up of members. Decided to start the table shows again next meeting night, with the following classes: Nor. Vell., Yorks. Vell., Border Vell., A.O.V. Can., and a class for Redpolls, Mr. J. Snell, of Stanley, to be judge. Decided to have 38 classes at annual show. Ten cock Canaries are promised for gift class, and prize drawing, which speaks well for our members, as we are just a small society. R. Peart, Sec.

ATTERCLIFFE AND DIST. C.B.S.

Meeting held Sept. 12, Mr. Havenhand presiding, at headquarters, Horse and Jockey. Some important items were dealt with, and we decided to add three extra green classes for the coming annual show. The following gentlemen will judge at the first of our three table shows for specials: Messrs. Perry (Yorks.), Richinson (Nor.), and Welbon (Brit.). I hope members will make these shows a success. There was a washing competition and demonstration billed for this meeting, but as no birds were brought, Mr. Perry gave us some valuable hints concerning bird-washing instead of the demonstration. It must be discouraging to Mr. Perry and others when they come prepared to give us the benefit of their valuable experience, and find such a poor audience awaiting them. I do hope that our members will do their utmost to attend the monthly meetings better, and that we shall have a splendid muster next meeting night.—W. A. Hailstone, Sec.

YORKSHIRE UNION OF C.B.S.

Meeting of Council held at Market Tavern, Bradford, Sept. 21, Mr. F. Armstrong (President) in the chair. A splendid attendance of delegates was recorded. Brighouse C.B.S. wishing to withdraw from Union shows owing to financial difficulties, the Council granted them permission on condition that they paid their share of Judges' fees, like the other societies who have previously withdrawn. The Secretary of the Bradford National Show applied to the Union for patronage and support for the next annual show, Dec. 6th, 7th and 9th, when the profits will be handed over to the fund for the poor children of the city. The President made a splendid appeal, asking one and all to lend their whole-hearted support to this most deserving show. Mr. Armstrong said that the Union was in a position to make or mar this show. The result was, the Council decided with a unanimous vote to allow their competitions to be extended to the National show. The question of the use of closed rings was brought forward by one of the Union societies in respect to next year's shows (the Union having debarred rung birds from competing at Union shows for the present show season). This very knotty question brought forth a very hot discussion, the President giving every delegate present the opportunity of voicing his opinion on the subject; and, after a good hour's discussion it was wisely proposed that the question be referred to each society by its delegates, and that after the same had been thrashed out by the Union, that representatives from the various specialist clubs should be called together to settle the question between them.—H. Hill, Secretary.

BRADFORD EAST O.S.

I would like to draw the attention of members and friends to the excellent winter syllabus of lectures, etc., for the ensuing session, printed on Page 32 in the Yorkshire Union Handbook. This series of lectures, etc., will be notified through the Fancy Press in due course. Everyone is heartily invited to attend any of the meetings. The meeting-room is nice, cosy and warm, and everybody has an equal chance of airing his views on any subject relating to birds. We open on Tuesday, October 1st, with a meat-pie supper, served at 8.30, by the President. Members are requested to note that the meeting is called for 7.30 prompt in order that business can be got through in good time. No specified charge will be made. The plate will be passed round, and you can pay according to your own satisfaction. I would specially draw the attention of Y.U. members to annual open show, November 16th. The schedule is printed on page 30 in the Union Handbook; anyone desirous of obtaining a schedule can have a copy on application to me; 35 classes, under patronage of the Y.C.C. Cup and Junior Novice Competitions, the N.G.M.Y.C.C., and the Y.C.B.B. and M. Club. We are looking forward to a record show, with Mr. H. W Battye (Huddersfield) as the official Union judge On behalf of the Society I once again appeal for that loyal support which has been meted out to us in the past, when I can assure those who put their trust in the good management of this show that they shall not be in the least disappointed. The Bradford East Rose Bowl will be competed for, for best unflighted Yorks., bred by the exhibitor, in Classes 5 and 6. Meetings are held in Park Chapel Schools, New Cross Street, West Bowling. —H Hill, Sec. (15, Settle Terrace, Thornton Lane, Bradford).

NORTH WALES C.B.S.

A committee meeting of the above was held on Friday evening, there being present Messrs. James Jones (chairman), George Jones (vice-chairman), R. E. Griffith (treasurer), Edward Jones, J. L. Sweeney, R. Green, R. W. Taylor, and J. Wynne Parry (hon sec). Mr. Cowgill, Bradford, was selected judge for the open show on Dec. 7.—It was decided to hold a draw on Nov. 28, in aid of the open show. The results will be published in CAGE BIRDS.

NEWCASTLE C.B.S.

Meeting held Sept. 19. Mr. T. C. Crawhall in chair. Quotations were read from printers for schedules and catalogues. Miss Mary Baxter Ellis will open show. There will be music at intervals on the pianola. There will perhaps be a judging competition. Stewards were appointed. There was a splendid response to the appeal of the secretary for specials, a large number being received; so, intending exhibitors, get your birds ready and send them along to show on October 18 and 19. Schedules will be ready this week. Anyone not receiving one, please write, and I will forward. We hope to break another record this year. Tickets for drawing are now ready. Will every member do his best to sell them. Remember, that the more he does for the society the better it is for himself.—J. W. Reed, Sec.

WHITBURN AND DIST. C.B.S.

Committee meeting held Baillie Institute, Sept. 23rd. Mr. Ludivic Laing presided over a fair attendance. The Secretary reported that Mr. Robt. Martin (Kirkintilloch) would judge Norwich; Mr. Joseph Thompson (Newtongrange), Borders; and Mr. James Strachan (Bathgate), British. Five classes have been added to Norwich, making 16 classes in the section, 4 to Borders, making 13, and there are 23 classes for Brit. and two novice classes. As far as could be gathered from those present the breeding season has not been a successful one, so far as quantity goes; yet a few of the members were not without hope as to quality. As in past years, the Green and Cinn. Border breeders expect to appear to advantage at the leading shows, while many of the British bird men mean business this year.—Robert Lambie, Sec.

CARDIFF AND DISTRICT C.B.S.

Monthly meeting held at Maskell's Hotel. In the absence of chairman, Mr. F. Slocombe presided over a poorly attended meeting. We have now finished classification, having 73 classes, Mr. Ford again guaranteeing the Blackbird, etc., class. Mr. McIhuish has again promised to lend all boards necessary for staging. Secretary was instructed to book Queen's Hall, which is in the town centre, and close to the three railway stations. I appeal to the members to attend the next two meetings to make final show arrangements, as it is not the secretary who makes a show a success, but the combined effort of the whole of the members of the society. I have 15 names as guarantors for open show fund, also Mr. Simon volunteered to act as a night steward. We are giving eight Canaries away, the same as last year. I have four promised by Messrs. F. Slocombe, W. Morgan, J. Deigmore, and A. Simon. I want four more. Will members let me know by next meeting what specials they can give, also all specials collected, also look through their stock to see if they can spare a songster? It was decided that Mr. Vardy take Norwich, Crests, and Sell. Classes, Mr. Mundell Yorks., Border, and Scotch, Mr. Longden Mules and British. Messrs. Beyon and Bale were elected members.—E. Thomas, Sec.

WALKLEY AND DISTRICT C.B.S.

Meeting held Westmorland Mission Room, Sept. 12, Mr. T Ridal in the chair. Classification for annual show arranged as follows: Members' Yorks. 6, young birds members' Norwich 6, Nov. York. 6, Nor. 6; old birds, 6 classes in each variety; For. 2, Brit. 3, A.O.V. 1, Selling 1, Prizes 4s., 2s., 1s. Several specials were promised. Mr. J. C. Barnes judge. Show to open at 1 o'c. by the Hon. President, Dr. Jones, who is very interested in the well-being of the Society. As an inducement to members, a ticket will be given everyone who sells 6, also a catalogue to every member exhibiting. In connection with the above a draw for Canaries has been arranged. Books were given out at the meeting. We have ten birds promised already, and hope to make it more. For the sellers of the most and next most tickets 2s. and 1s. are promised. Decided, to have a tea and prize distribution at headquarters after Dec. Some prominent man to be asked to present prizes, point specials, also specials won at the series of table shows. Something like 30 prizes will be given. Don't forget October meeting, table show, young birds, 9 classes. Judges, Yorks. J. G. Cowley, Nor. J. Scott, Brit., W. Dalton. Make this as big a success as the previous ones have been. Schedules will be given out at this meeting. Also nomination of officers for 1913.—C. Tomlinson.

WIMBLEDON C.B.S.

Special general meeting, held 6, The Broadway, on September 23, to make certain arrangements in consequence of the sudden bereavement suffered by the secretary, Mr. H. Smith, in the sad loss of his son. A heartfelt message of condolence and sympathy was sent to Mr. Smith by those present. Mr. J. Carson kindly acted as secretary pro tem. The Chairman, Mr. Stoakley, having explained that he had received a letter of resignation from Mr. Smith, who felt that the business of the show to be held in November would, under the circumstances, be too much for him, and that the committee had held two meetings to consider the situation, said he was glad to inform them that Mr. Smith had been prevailed upon to retain the secretaryship on condition that he be relieved from the clerical work entailed in connection with the show. They were under great obligations to Mr. Smith. The committee thought the meeting should appoint Mrs. M. M. Owen as assistant sec.—who would be a very capable assistant—and engage a paid official to do the clerical work in connection with the show; all of which suggestions the meeting unanimously agreed to. Five ladies and gentlemen were nominated for membership, and certain matters pertaining to the annual show were referred to the committee for consideration at a meeting next Monday evening. Decided to have judging competition at the monthly meeting, October 7th, for Norwich Canaries, Mr. P. Rorke to be the final judge, and a silver spoon to be given as a prize to the owner of the winning bird.

MARKET DRAYTON (Salop).

This thirteenth annual exhibition was held in connection with the Agricultural Show on September 19th. The entries were very good indeed for the time of the year. The birds were nicely staged on one side of the cheese tent. Mr. Podmore is a most obliging secretary, and the arrangements were carried out in first-class style. We think if this show was advertised more a really fine entry could be obtained. Messrs. Victor Williams and A. Brotherhood had good teams out, which were shown in fine condition. Mr. Hy. Tams judged, and very little fault could be found with his awards.

The Critique.

The Enamelling of Wooden Cages.

Sir,—Would some one of your readers kindly inform me on the following point: Is it necessary, before enamelling new wooden cages, to give the wood a coat of paint or size? I am told that the enamel will peel off if applied direct to new wood.

Society for East Calder (Mid Lothian).

Sir,—A meeting of fanciers was held in the Institute Hall, East Calder, when it was decided to form a society, open to six miles raidus from East Calder, name of society, Calder and District Bantam, Pigeon, and Cage Bird Society. Officials were appointed and decided to hold show on Jan. 11, 1913. Next meeting on Thursday, Oct. 3.

Strange Hatching Results.

Sir,—I would like Mr. Evans to know that I have also had Bantams hatched in a curious way, not by Doves, but by Pigeons. On June 17 I had two Black Rosecomb bantams (both cocks) hatched by a pair of flying Homers. The pigeons fed them by food vomited in front of the chicks, and the latter picked it up. On the ninth day I had to take them away from the pigeons, for they used to get out of the nest among the other pigeons, and they ill-used them. They are now strong, healthy birds.

The Management of Dulwich and Peckham C.B.S. Show.

Sir,—Owing to my business arrangements, I shall be unable to carry out my duty in the management of our annual show fixed for Nov. 5th next. Mr. L. J. Richardson, the well known exhibitor of Norwich P.H.'s and a hard-worker in the interests of our Society, has very kindly come forward and is undertaking this duty, with the assistance of Mr. J. S. Fairman. May I appeal to our members through your columns to rally round Mr. Richardson, and give him a bumper entry, and to ask fanciers generally to help him by paying a visit to the show. Any fanciers joining the society at once, will be eligible to compete at the show.

Unprolificacy in Canaries.

An Appreciation.

SIR,—You have a most interesting contribution in this week's CAGE BIRDS from Mr. J. Steel. It is a subject that will set us all thinking and talking. He has certainly "touched the spot." How continually, breeding season after breeding season, one hears the complaint, nothing from my best birds, but plenty from the wasters. We all have this experience year after year. The question as to quality or quantity will certainly be asked, i.e., is it quantity or quality that is required by the exhibitor?; he will say at once, quality, one from the best pair is worth twenty from the pair of wasters. It is here where the exhibitor comes in. Artificial selection and nature's laws do not work well together; they pull in opposite directions. It would be better for reproductive purposes if we could work more in the direction of nature's laws. Personally, I thank Mr. Steel for raising this important question.

Getting the Seed Out of Thistle Heads.

Sir,—I should be glad if any of your numerous readers would inform me through your columns of the best way of obtaining the seed from thistle heads.

A. HUBBARD.

[This matter has been frequently dealt with in our columns. The following appeared in "Timely Hints" some short time back: "Gather all heads when white, almost ready to burst. Put them into kitchen oven, and shut the door for twenty minutes. Then you will find the heads have turned 'outside in,' and the oven will be full with seed and down. If you apply a lighted match, the down will go off like powder, so quick as to do the seed no harm. Take out the remains and put into a basin of water. The seed will sink and leave the rubbish on top. Then empty off water and rubbish and put seed into the oven, or in the sun, to dry. If you have no oven, put the heads on the fire shovel and set shovel on red fire. Same result: "ont side in." The seed keeps one year to my knowledge. Lots of other wild seeds can be extracted in similar manner."—EDITOR.]

Does Hemp Seed Ruin Canaries?

Hemp a "Fatal Seed."

SIR,—In reply to Mr. Canning re "Hemp Seed," I beg to state this fatal seed has caused me to lose three young ones, and I have one at present suffering; all four being out of one nest. The trouble has been caused through parent birds going off egg-food, and my having substituted crushed hemp. My birds had the same symptoms as Mr. Canning speaks of, and I thank him for his remedy, which I will try, and hope to benefit the one living.

ARTHUR W. NEWTON.

Used Liberally and no Harmful Effect.

SIR,—I was much interested in Mr. Canning's article appearing in last issue of CAGE BIRDS—"Does Hemp Seed Ruin Canaries?" During the past five seasons, I have supplied a liberal quantity of this seed to hens feeding young, and can trace no harmful effects to its use. I do not put up more than six pairs, as space at my disposal is limited, but with these I have had fairly good luck, rearing on an average thirty young each season, and I never take more than two nests from each hen. During that time I have only had four young "go light," and have had no cases of looseness in the hens, which Mr. Canning mentions. I am always very careful to supply good sweet hemp, and throw all musty or unsound seeds out when filling the hoppers. I give them whole, not crushed, as this keeps the hens off longer, and gives the young a good airing. I understand poultry suffer somewhat from this or a similar disease.

PERCY HUNT.

A Lot Almost Sure to Kill.

Sir,—I have been a breeder of Norwich Canaries for over thirty years, and it is my firm opinion that if Canaries are given a lot of hemp it is almost sure to kill them. It is sure to cause looseness in the bowels, and it will also make Canaries go pale in colour. Many years ago I could get plenty of young birds reared till they were from about seven to nine weeks old; then they would go light and waste away. I found out I was giving them too much hemp seed. I began to give them less, and I have never had any trouble since I stopped giving them so much. This is how I feed my birds, and I never have a bad season, always getting a good share of young birds, and I never think of losing any birds in the moult. When my birds are feeding young I give them canary seed, and just a pinch of hemp mixed with it; also egg-food and a pinch of maw seed mixed with it. Some hens won't feed without a little hemp. My young birds, when first taken from their parents (that is, when about four weeks old) I give egg-food, also a very little crushed hemp and plenty of crushed canary seed. As soon as they can crack seed I take hemp seed away from them entirely, but I give them the egg food with a little maw seed in it all through the moult. I am not in favour of hemp; far from it. I think if any one tries my way he won't be far wrong, as my birds do well.

SAMUEL PRATT.
Leicester.

The Quality of the Seed Questioned.

Sir,—The letter from Mr. Canning will cause many and many a fancier to wonder "Where he are." We have been used to having egg-food blamed for almost all the ills we experience in the breeding-room; and now it would appear that we have an even worse enemy in hemp seed. I hope some of our well-known breeders will come out of their shell and give us the benefit of their views. Hemp seed has been used by bird-breeders for more than a sufficient number of years to show whether it is a bad thing or a good one. Personally, I have never suspected it of being the chief cause of the troubles Mr. Canning mentions; and I have bred birds (chiefly Canaries and Mules) for over twenty years, with a decent average amount of success. I remember (I think) the article referred to by Mr. Canning, but I thought the chief point made by the expert in question was that great care was necessary in the selection of hemp seed used, so many very bad samples being offered for sale. I quite agree with this. Nobody should use hemp until he has crushed and examined a sample, no matter from which source it comes. If the kernel is not white and "milky," it should be rejected as a veritable poison to birds. The three chief points of bad hemp seed are: (1) A dried-up kernel, i.e., not "milky"; (2) a discoloured kernel, i.e., varying from a light brown to a reddish-brown; (3) a discoloured "skin" (brown instead of greyish-green) under the shell. In a thoroughly bad sample all three faults will be found. Now hemp seed which is unfit for use is much more common than the majority of bird-keepers imagine; let them, therefore, take care. Of course, I do not for a moment insinuate that Mr. Canning does not know good hemp from bad. I only wish to say that I have not experienced the wretched results of which he speaks, when I used hemp seed which has been above suspicion.

O. GEORGE EDWIN.

No Hemp and No Water.

Sir,—I beg to corroborate the substance of Mr. John Canning's letter relating to the above. For several seasons I have had losses through "Diarrhœa" and "Going Light," and at the end of the season 1911 I came to the conclusion that the use of hemp seed was the cause of the ailments referred to, although I had endeavoured to counteract the relaxing nature of the seed by a judicious use of maw. This year I discarded the use of hemp altogether, and the result has been a decided success. I have not had a single loss from the above cause, and my stock was never in better condition than at present. If fanciers would only give their young birds no water to drink (the moisture in the egg-food being quite sufficient) until about eight weeks old and discard the hemp, I think losses in the respect named would be reduced to a minimum.

G. REVNOLDS (Oldham).

A Question of Temperature.

Sir,—The answer depends a good deal upon whether you use artificial heat or not. For a "hot" room very little is required, but for a cold room you can use a good deal to advantage. I have been a breeder of Canaries for the last fifteen years, and for the last five years I have been breeding them in a shed outside the house, without any artificial heat whatever. I use a good deal of hemp seed, and I have strong healthy youngsters. I only lost one young bird this season out of 27. In my opinion, the more variety of seed you use, the better they thrive. I give my Canaries plenty of green food (watercress) and never have any trouble with the hens feeding their young. In my opinion, the only thing your correspondent has proved is that it is possible to breed Canaries without hemp seed. It may be possible also to breed them without using canary seed.

J. EVANS.

Wished All His Hens would Use Hemp.

Sir.—The answer, from my own experience, is "No," for I have been a breeder of Yorkshire Canaries for eleven years and I have used hemp seed most liberally througout the breeding season each year. In fact, I have had hens that would feed almost entirely upon hemp, and by the way their youngsters have grown, I have often wished my hens would all feed upon it. I have seen no ill-effects from its use. I might say I commence giving it when the young are three or four days old (this is plenty soon enough), and I discontinue it when I take them away from their parents. I do not crush the seed, as it finds the hen something to do, thus keeping her off the young, so that they may get some air. Besides, I think the seed is more liable to go rancid when crushed. In winter, my hens are put into a large flight, and I give them plenty of hemp seed in the coldest weather and some niger seed, and they come out in splendid breeding condition. I am pleased to say I have never had a hen egg-bound. My breeding results have been fairly satisfactory, rearing from 70 to 80 young with fifteen hens in practically two rounds, as I don't bother much with a third round. As to "going light," I have had just one case this year. At our meeting of the Great Horton O.S. on Saturday night, I asked the members present their opinion on the above, and every one spoke well of hemp seed. Two of our members present had reared 150 and 130 respectively with twenty hens each, and they use hemp seed just as I have done. Surely there cannot be the danger our friend Mr. Canning speaks of; but I do believe that if one gets hold of a bad sample it will kill both old and young, and that Mr. Canning got hold of a bad sample is the opinion of Canaries Not Too Old at Ten.

The Experience of a Noted Lizard Breeder

Sir,—I note in CAGE BIRDS an inquiry as to whether Canaries are too old at three years old. I should certainly reply, from my own experience, that, given birds to be healthy and in good condition, they will breed much longer than three years. During the past season I have been breeding with a Gold Lizard cock which is ten years old. He has been with three different hens, and he has fertilised every egg, about 25 altogether, and I am looking forward to a good one or two from him. I only started breeding with him when five years old, and he has never missed me a winner yet, the two first prize winners at the Crystal Palace in 1911 being bred from him. I also bred with a Gold cock this last season eight years old, and two or three more at five years. My diploma Palace winner in 1908 was also bred from a seven-year-old Silver cock, and a young hen. I should say your correspondent's birds must have been out of condition, or they should have been giving best results at three years old. I might add that the two old birds mentioned above are nearly finished moulting, and look at present in the pink of condition.

JOHN RUKIN.

Suggested Cage Bird Society for Buckinghamshire.

Sir,—On taking up my CAGE BIRDS, I see that your correspondent Mr. Pullman suggests a Cage Bird Society for Bucks, and also a meeting at Maidenhead show in November I should like to point out to Mr. P. that, in the first place Maidenhead is in Berks and not in Bucks. Also that Aylesbury show is two weeks in front of Maidenhead, being on October 17th, and will be advertised in CAGE BIRDS next week. I believe I am right in saying that last year Maidenhead gave four classes for cage birds, while Aylesbury gave 27. This year we are putting up 25, four being open and 21 confined to members (several for novices). As our membership radius is 25 miles, which takes in the whole of the Bucks and part of Herts, Berks, Beds., Northants, and Oxon, I fail to see the necessity of another society. If Mr. Pullman and the other cage bird fanciers would join us (our entrance fee to the society is 1s., and the annual subscription only 2s. 6d.) we should be only too pleased to put on more classes, when they fill the 25 already practically open to 25 miles radius, and also more open classes. We have one of the best halls in England, and unrivalled railway service, and shall be pleased to meet Mr. Pullman and any other fanciers here on October 17th, when we shall have our old friend, Mr. Geo. Gardner with us in the capacity of judge.

F. RAYNER, Hon. Sec.
Aylesbury and Dis. F.S.

Sir,—We notice a correspondent in your issue of the 21st raises the question of a C.B. Society for Bucks. We have advocated this for some time, and would do all in our power for the advancement of same. But, Sir, if a cage society is to be formed, why not let it be a Cage Bird Society only. As to shows, surely they can be run without being mixed up with poultry, etc., and at considerably less expense, we are assured. As to the number of fanciers in Bucks, they are legion, if they would only send out and show who and what they are made of. We know not who friend Pullman may be, but would like to hear further of him; also from anyone else interested in the above. Aylesbury will always find us.

F. and T. BOWLER.

A Good Year and a Good Deal.

Sir,—I should like to tell you about the successful breeding season I have had this year. This is the second year I have tried breeding Yorkshires. I started with ten pairs, and have reared over 80 good birds. I did not know what to do with them, until I saw an advertisement in your valuable and interesting paper, Cage Birds, which I may say I have taken in since I started and found very helpful, and on answering it, I had Mr. Newley, of Stockwell Green call on me, and in less than ten minutes we had a very satisfactory deal for seventy birds. I sent them to the new place he is opening in Manchester, and am pleased to say they got there in good condition, none dead; so I hope to have another deal with him in the future.

Toddington. Geo. Moore.

Are the Reputed Siskin-Bullfinch Hybrids Authentic?

Sir,—I may say for the information of Mr. Herbert Walsh and others that I understood my name and address were sent to Cage Birds by the fancier who called on me and inquired if I had any objection to him sending to Cage Birds. I replied, "Not in the least." I was astonished when I got a copy of Cage Birds on the 31st August, to see that my name and address were deleted. Regarding the nom-de-plume, "Happy Result," used by this fancier, I knew nothing about it until I saw it published. The two young Siskin-Bullfinch Hybrids are in splendid condition, and I have them housed in a very large cage, where they can use their wings, and they are using them to some purpose. They were hatched on Sunday, 21st July last, and the result was published in the "Edinburgh Evening News" on the 2nd September, and the "Dispatch" on the 3rd Sept. I invited all the Edinburgh bird fanciers and those of the surrounding country to see them. I had scores of visitors, both ladies and gentlemen, on the first three days they were shown. In conclusion, I may say that the two young birds are not showing much colour; nor do I expect them to do so until after they moult, and I do not think that I will have long to wait. I enclose the two cuttings from the Edinburgh newspapers. Thomas Hill.

40, White Horse Close,
31, Canongate, Edinburgh.

Mr. Hill is under a misapprehension; his name and address were not deleted from "Happy Result's" letter. "Happy Result" certainly gave them, but on a separate sheet of paper, on which was written: ". . . . not given for advertising purposes"; from which we concluded, of course, that they were not intended for publication. In view of "Rabbie B.'s" letter of last week, stating that he had heard fanciers saying the birds in question were doubtful (one good judge remrkng that he could find no trace of the Bullfinch parentage) we feel sure that fanciers all over the United Kingdom would be deeply interested to read the opinions of those Edinburgh fanciers who took advantage of Mr. Hill's kind offer to show the birds to callers.—Editor.]

Merely a Foreign Bird.

Sir,—I have read with interest the letters of "Happy Result" and "Rabbie B.," in reference to the reputed Siskin-Bullfinch Hybrids. "Rabbie B." appears to have his doubts about the genuineness of those rarities which are said to have been bred in Edinburgh. Perhaps the following true story may interest "Rabbie B." and others. Some few weeks ago an advertisement appeared in a paper (not Cage Birds) offering a Siskin-Bullfinch Hybrid for sale, and as it was advertised by a well-known party, and "Hybrid price" (several pounds) was asked for it, a friend of mine forwarded the necessary deposit for the bird to be sent on approval. The Siskin-Bullfinch Hybrid duly arrived, also a letter giving particulars as to where and by whom it was bred, etc. Well, to cut a long story short, it was simply a Foreign bird, the same as are being advertised as Sulphury Seedeaters; they rather resemble the Green Singing Finch in colour, but are much larger. Some of the colours are certainly suggestive of the Siskin, but it would require a wonderful imagination to discover any trace of a Bullfinch. I hope the Edinburgh bred Siskin-Bullfinch Hybrids will show some trace of both parents, or "Happy Result" may have to indulge in another grumble about judges not being able to recognise and appreciate rare Hybrids.

Wake Up, Traders!

Sir,—I am in sympathy with Mr. G. Oglesthorpe. During the three years of my interest in the bird Fancy, I have many times over met with experiences just such as he names in his letter of Sept. 14. I wrote to dealers who were advertising for birds, as I had more than I could nicely accommodate; not one replied, although, in most cases, I enclosed a stamp, which they kept. The first week in August I sent an order and money for three pairs of birds to a dealer, who advertises from three of our large towns. After waiting a week and receiving neither birds nor any acknowledgment of my order, I wrote again. Two pairs of birds were eventually sent. One bird had scarcely a dozen feathers on, and died shortly after I received it; three out of the four birds were suffering from what is generally called "Going Light." Two died, and a third will not last much longer. One pair of birds are still owing to me, and have not appeared on the scene yet, although I have written twice after them and got no reply whatever. When the dealer sent the 4 birds he said he would forward others next week. That is now more than a month ago. Do you think, to a stranger this kind of dealing has an honest look? I say it does much harm to the Fancy.

L. A. Knight.

[We think this correspondence may now very well close. We hope it may have served a good purpose by bringing home to those dealers who do not give business-like attention to orders received, or who do not deal justly with customers, the fact that they are doing their own trade incalculable injury and crippling the hobby upon which they depend for their livelihood.—Editor.]

South Wales and Mon. Federation of F. and F. Societies.

A Good Commencement.

Sir,—I would be much obliged if you would kindly give me a little space to record the success this Federation has attained since its formation. Whit Monday last saw the initiation of the Federation, and there are now sixteen societies affiliated, comprising, besides poultry, pigeon and mixed societies, two cage bird societies, which means that all sections of the Fancy are catered for. The clashing of eight or ten shows this season has been avoided, and this was one of the principal objects in the formation of the Federation. The attainment of this prevention of clashing must to a large extent be accorded to the fancier-like spirit shown by the societies affected. Societies, after having fixed their dates, readily agreed to alter same for the purpose of preventing the losses that would accrue by two or more societies holding their fixtures on the same date. With such feeling shown by the Societies, combined with the help offered by our President, S. W. Thomas, Esq., Swansea, and influential gentlemen who act as vice-presidents, and who are united in furthering the interests of the Federation, who include Messrs. J. N. Bant (Cardiff), Buckley, Roderick (Llanelly), E. H. Simon (Pembroke) W. G. Camden (Swansea), and Norris Sair (Neath), only one result can be expected, and that is success. There are a number of societies not yet affiliated, and we want all societies to benefit. We want better balance-sheets at end of season, better facilities for exhibitors, and better chances of prize winners being paid their prize money. This can only be done by a combined effort on the part of the societies. We are combating no persons or societies, but combating the disastrous results that too often occur at the end of the season. Mr. A. E. Silk, of Whitstable, has presented the Federation with a silver cup to be competed for at all affiliated societies' shows who cater for cage birds. It will go to the novice who gains the most points at the end of the season, the said novice to be a member of an affiliated society. We return thanks to Mr. Silk for this cup, and hope it will considerably increase the entries in the shows where it is competed for. Novice exhibitors when sending in their entries, must insert in entry form "Novice-cup." I shall be pleased to give any information to societies not yet affiliated, if required. We are holding an executive meeting at Cardiff on Saturday, Sept. 28th, at five o'clock, to further discuss the desirability of purchasing four cups this season to be competed by members of affiliated societies.

"CAGE BIRDS"
WATCH COUPON

Manager, "CAGE BIRDS," 154, Fleet Street, London, E.C.

The Type of the Present-day Norwich Plainhead.

Sir,—It is amusing to read the result of the Norwich meeting, convened for the purpose of abolishing those birds—or, rather, to stop them from winning in Norwich classes—which were obliged to be shown under the Crestbred and the Lancashire flag. To judge from the enthusiasm shown, and the result of the previous meeting, one would have thought that the fanciers in Norwich were unanimously in favour of the smaller type of bird winning, and I might say that feelings akin to consternation assailed me when I heard the result of this later meeting. It was totally unexpected. As to the wisdom of the decision, it depends a great deal on the capabilities of the man engaged to adjudicate. Will he put a bird up simply because it is a big one, or will he insist on having true Norwich properties in proportion to its size? Personally, I confess to a sneaking regard for a big one, but a good one; and bringing back to mind many of the big winners I have seen in late years, I don't remember any of them as being over the limit—6½ inches. But still, I don't see why—as Mr. Payne said at the meeting—a bird that is just a trifle over the 6½ inches should be passed if it conforms to the standard in all other respects, i.e. good head, quality of feather, broad chest and back, good colour, and tail stuck in at the right angle. Every fancier will admit that such an one is much harder to breed than one of smaller proportions, and when one is fortunate enough to breed one, he should meet with his just reward. But if the judges in Norwich are going to judge for mere size alone, without considering the defects that usually accompany size., i.e. harsh feather, over-hanging eyebrows, long hinge tail and narrow chest, then—well, all I can say is, it is a good job that the decision does not affect the districts outside Norwich. After all, I have a deal of faith in the capabilities and discretion of the majority of our judges. While on the subject of Norwich Plainhead, might I draw the attention of novice Plainhead fanciers to the splendid competition provided by the Norwich Plainhead Club. They are offering two cups, value £5 and £3, respectively, for novices alone. This is a splendid opportunity for them, and I hope they will take advantage of it. The competitions begin at Huddersfield next week, where six classes are provided for novice Plainheads alone. Now novices, take advantage of the unique opportunity to win one or both of these cups by sending your 2s. 6d. to the secretary now.

Catching in Closed Districts.

Harry Smith, 41, Rylston Road, Fulham, was summoned at Kingston for having in his possession a number of Linnets and Goldfinches, contrary to the Wild Birds' Protection Act 1881, at Cobham, on September 5.—A constable deposed that on the evening of the 5th he saw defendant in company with a man, who gave the name of Baxter. They were carrying bundles (produced) and on witness asking them what they had there defendant replied, "Two or three birds." Altogether there were 61 birds, mostly Linnets and Goldfinches, and the men said they had got them from the district of Andover, where they had been for a week. On the 7th inst. witness got a magistrate's order and released the newly-caught birds. The man Baxter could not be found.—Defendant said he met a gipsy who told him he could take him to a place where they could find some birds. It was the first time he had been bird-catching.—Supt. Marshall stated that the man Baxter gave a false address.—Defendant was ordered to pay the costs, 9s. 6d., and the call-birds and appliances were confiscated, though defendant pleaded for the return of three of the birds which belonged to his father.

George Ensby, Joseph Dean, and William Tripp, all of Hayes, were summoned at Uxbridge for taking wild birds, and also with cruelty to some.—P.S. James Charman said that about 10.30 on Sunday, August 18, he was on duty in plain clothes, in company with P.C. Gray, and at Dawley Brickfields he saw defendants, Tripp and Den, sitting down. Tripp was working nets from lines. When told they would be summoned, Tripp said: "They are not my nets; I'm only holding them for him," pointing to Dean. Dean said: "I've only just come." He then discovered two other men working a further set of nets. On his approach they ran away. After another search the witnesses discovered four Sparrows and two Greenfinches tied down by apparati (which were produced in Court), the tackle also consisting of cages containing recently caught birds, mallets, pegs, etc.—P.C. John Gray corroborated.—Fined 10s. each, and the tackle to be confiscated.

CASTLEFORD LINNET CLUB.

General meeting, Sept. 14, at the George and Dragon Hotel, Bridge Street. Annual report and balance sheet were read. The report shows we have had 36 members and 2,402 birds have been entered in contests. Prize money won amounted to £36 15s., and a few specials. Income was £15 7s. 3d., and expenditure £8 7s. 1d., leaving a balance of £7 0s. 2d. in hand. The principal prize winners throughout the season were: W. Nelson, 41 firsts, 28 seconds, 14 thirds; E. Smith, 14, 6, 10; J. Brindley, 9, 7, 12; A. Sweeting, 6, 8, 7; J. Kirk, 3, 5, 4; A. Towler, 2, 3, 4; B. Nelson, 1, 6, 6,; W. Ratcliffe, 1, 6, 6, The following were elected officers for 1912-13: J. Smith, President; Mrs. Parker, Treasurer; W. Dobson, Secretary; J. Brindley, Assist. Secy; Messrs. W. Nelson, E. Smith, J. Ranskill, W. Ratcliffe and S. Morley, Committee. Mr. L. Parker presented the Parker Challenge Cup and medals to the winners. He said he had great pleasure in presenting the cup to Mr. E. Smith, also the gold and silver medals for the longest break of the year, and he hoped he would try to make the cup his own by winning it again other three times. He also presented Mr. W. Nelson and Mr. B. Nelson with a running-up medal each. He said he felt sorry for Mr. W. Nelson, who has been first for the cup for many weeks, to just get beaten in the last two contests, but he hoped it would make him more determined to win it next year. Mr. F. Smith responded, and said he was very pleased to be the first member to win the cup, and, as Mr. Parker said, he would try his best to make the cup his own. He would like to propose a vote of thanks to Mr. Parker for coming to present the cup and medals. Mr. B. Nelson seconded, and said he was very pleased to be one of the runner-up, and thought the cup had never all members very keen. He said he was very glad that it had been a very close finish, because it had got the members to come every week. He said Mr. E. Smith ought to feel very proud that night when he went home with the cup, and two medals had been by one bird, but he would try his best again next year to beat him, and he hoped all members would stick together and try to make the club a bigger success than ever. It was decided to sing all the year round, so anyone who would like to become members may bring their birds any Saturday or Sunday; first pair of birds in the window on Saturdays at 3 p.m., Sundays 1 p.m.—Walter Dobson, Hon. Sec.

Advt. Manager. "Cage Birds."

ALWAYS USE OUR DEPOSIT SYSTEM.

We are not responsible for the statements made in advertisements, nor of the bona-fides of either buyers or sellers In all transactions the adoption of our Deposit System should be insisted upon

IMPORTANT.

SEND THE FULL COMMISSION.—If the full commission does not accompany the deposit, the vendor will not be notified of its receipt until the amount deficient, plus the extra postage incurred, has been paid to us.

HOW TO REMIT.—Under no circumstances will Cheques or Post-dated Money Orders be accepted as deposits. Uncrossed Postal Orders must be sent and the numbers taken for safety.

RULES.

1.—PROCEDURE.—The intending purchaser should send to this office the amount of the purchase (our deposit fee included), and at the same time he should communicate with the seller, stating what it is he requires sent on approval. We acknowledge receipt of the deposit to both parties. In all cases the depositor should give his name and address, and also that of the vendor, and must write same clearly and distinctly.

2.—END OF TRANSACTION.—The deposit is retained by us until we hear from both parties that the transaction has been completed. If a sale has been effected, we hand the amount deposited to the seller. If a sale has not been effected, we return the amount to the depositor. The transaction must be conducted by the parties themselves. We merely hold the deposit.

3.—AMOUNT OF COMMISSION.—The fee is 6d. for each £1, or fraction of £1, and it must be sent at same time as the deposit.

4.—IMPORTANT POINTS.—The depositor must decide within forty-eight hours of the receipt of the goods whether he will keep or return the same, unless, that is, some other period of approval (of which we must be advised) is agreed upon by both parties. The depositor must at the same time notify us of the fact that he has returned the goods. If the goods are not returned within the said forty-eight hours, we reserve the right to send the deposit to the seller after the expiration of that period. And should the seller fail within three days to notify us of the receipt of his goods back again, the transaction will be treated as ended, and the deposit will be returned to the depositor.

5.—A SATISFACTORY PURCHASE.—When a transaction has been completed to the satisfaction of both depositor and seller, both parties must at once return the deposit receipts as a guarantee of its completion. The depositor must at the same time instruct us to pay over the deposit to the seller.

6.—GOODS ALREADY SOLD.—If the goods are sold before our deposit note reaches the seller, or if for any other reason he declines to do business, he must at once return the deposit note to us. Failing its receipt, we reserve the right to return the deposit to the sender after the expiration of three days.

7.—FRESH TRANSACTION.—In case no sale be effected, a deposit is available for purposes of a fresh transaction, provided another deposit fee be paid.

8.—GOODS IN TRANSIT.—Goods in transit are at the seller's risk, and any damage or loss sustained on the journey must be borne by the seller. But goods not approved of must be properly packed and returned by the same means as were used in sending the same.

9.—PAYMENT OF CARRIAGE.—The payment of carriage must be a matter for arrangement between the vendor and depositor. We do not undertake to settle disputes affecting question of carriage. But in the absence of other arrangements the purchaser is liable for the carriage of the goods, and if the goods are sent on approval and returned, each party pays the carriage one way.

10.—DISPUTES.—In case of a dispute, the decision of the Editor is final.

Following testimonials speak volumes for quality of my appliances. "Gedney, Holbeach, Lincs., September 3, 1912.—Sir,—The pair 12-yard clap nets safely to hand. They are an exceptionally good pair, and thread so fine they are hardly visible, and they match the ground so well. Rather different nets for Linnet catching to the herring and garden netting offered for sale by many netmakers, who ought to know better than send such rubbish out. Without doubt, yours are best fine thread nets extant. I shall want more shortly.—Yours, Charlie Cubley." "Wood St., Guildford, August 22.—Sir,—Received the two pairs nets safely. I am well pleased, and so is my friend. We shall not take the trouble to make them when we can get them so good as these for the money.—Yours, S. Bowen." "4, Castle Place, Scarborough, Aug. 25.—Sir,—Please send 1lb. lime. It is best lime I can get. I caught over 200 birds with last lot.—Yours, W. Whitehead." "64, Main St., Renton, Scotland, Aug. 13.—Sir,—Please send 1lb. lime, as the last pound I got from you was the envy of all the catchers here. I cannot say enough in its favour.—Yours, J. McKinn." "52, Silver St., Nenagh, Ireland, Aug. 17.—Sir,—Please send following. The net trap was best I ever saw for the money. I caught 38 Goldfinches with it first day.—Yours, Dennis Hayes." "55, Rockdale Rd., Tunbridge Wells, Aug. 23.—Sir,—Please send 24 yards netting. I had some from you 7 years ago, and am still using it.—Yours, H. England." If you want reliable serviceable appliances, send to the man who makes them; no connection whatever with any other advertiser.

FRED ALLEN, BRITISH CHAMPION

Patronised by all the leading fanciers and judges in England, Ireland, Scotland and Wales. My field-moulted specimens can hold their own in any house moulted class. I claim to have sold more British winners than any three dealers together. Nearly all the Sheffield fanciers have paid me a visit, and every one of them say they have never seen such gems before. One of the oldest members of the Attercliffe C.B.S. says: "You could pick the worst you have and then have a winner." Gentlemen, though I have supplied so many winners, I honestly say I never have had or seen such large and good coloured birds as I now have. Please remember, all my birds are guaranteed as advertised, and sent out on 7 days' approval for cash or deposit with Editor. Look, extra large Norwich type cock Linnets, well pencilled, grand deep rich colour, A1 condition, feathers shine like silk, very tame, only 2/- each; also one of the best and largest ever seen, truly a magnificent gem, cannot be beat, only 5/-, honestly worth double. The above are trained to perfection, and are ready for immediate exhibition. Now, you catchers, I have a grand lot of fierce singing cock Linnets, extra loud voices, sing in or outdoors, 1/- and 1/6, with new back cage 1/6 and 2/- lot; also a few extra special call birds, 2/6 lot. To contest singers; the pride of the singing world, cock Linnet, taught under my undefeated champion of England, quality notes, only 2/- each, with new contest cage and my book of secrets, 3/6 lot; it is impossible to beat this strain for singing. Mule breeders, those who like to have their birds a few months before the season, should send to me at once as I have a grand lot of muling Linnets at 1/6 and 2/- each. Real English Pear-tree cock Goldfinches, will sing anywhere, 1/6 and 2/- each; a few gems, showing grand colour, real giants, 2/6, 3/-, and 4/- each. Gem Redpoll, will win anywhere, 1/6; another, good one, 1/-. Cock Chaffinch, a topper, 1/-. cock Larks, singing day and gaslight, 1/- and 1/6 each, all finger tame. Special Lark food, the best on the market, 4d. per lb., 7lbs. 2/-. Persian kittens, used to birds, lovely coats, 7/6 and 10/6 each. Cock Siskins expected to arrive next week; cocks 3/6; orders booked now. Please give me a trial, you will never regret it. I only do honest dealing. Thanking you all for patronage: Fred Allen, Bird Specialist and Judge, 548, Queens-rd., Sheffield.

SHOW SPECIMEN BRITISH.

Thousands coming in to pick at, and I have sold more first prize winners than any man alive, including winners at Crystal Palace, Scottish National, Manchester, etc.; cock Goldfinches or Bullfinches, specially picked for moulting out winners, 3/-, 4/-, 5/-; cock Linnets, 1/6, 2/-; cock Chaffinches, 1/6, 2/-; Redpolls, 1/-. Mr. Hedges, Eastbourne, writes, Sept 13,—Mr. Hedges, Eastbourne, writes, September 13th,—"Send me special selected cock Goldfinch, Linnet, Greenfinch, and hen Bullfinch for enclosed 10/-; Goldfinch I got from you two years ago won six 1sts and specials; the one I had last year won 3rd, but I lost him." Mr. Veitch, Jedburgh, writes: "Send cock Goldfinch, 3/-, two hen Bullfinches, 3/-. Glad to say Goldfinch purchased from you won me two 1sts Hawick, 1st and special Kelso, 5th Edinburgh (class 33), 3rd Galashiels, twice 2nd at our show." W. Jones, Altrincham, December 6th. "Send two cock Linnets and two cock Siskins. Am pleased to say I won 2nd and 4th at Altrincham open-class with birds purchased from you." Mr. Ewan, Kirn, writes: "Goldfinch arrived safe, and won 1st and special at our show." Mr. Weedall, Winsford, Jan. 30: "Send another good Bullfinch. Glad to say last two have won 1st and 2nd every time shown. Unfortunately best one just died; other won 4th large class at big Crystal Palace Show." Walter Dyke, Longridge: "Send cock Goldfinch and hen Bullfinch. Glad to say Hybrid which I bred from Goldfinch and Bullfinch purchased from you has won 1st Leeds (class 19), 2nd Halifax, 1st Leek, 2nd Hamilton, 2nd Hinckley, 1st Portsmouth." Scores like above every year. Show cages, 2/-, three 5/-. Est. 1879. Send for catalogue.—SANDIFORD, Bird Specialist, and Judge, Preston. Also 89, Sclater Street, Shoreditch, London.

HARRY ALLEN, THE ORIGINAL LINNET KING

I have won more prizes for contest singing than any ten dealers in the world put together. Proof given; and I am the only dealer who has the original quality Linnet singing strain of the world. Readers, here are a few of my prizes that I honestly won: 1st, 2nd, and 3rd, open to all England, Batley; 1st, 2nd, and 3rd, open to all England, Morley; 1st, 2nd, and 3rd prize, open to all England, Bradford; 1st prize at Sheffield. I defeated 28 of the best picked time singers of England. I also sung a match at Castleford, £2 a-side, and won. I was offered £8 for my bird. I defeated 31 of the best picked birds of Yorkshire and Lancashire, including the cup winner at Bradford. 1st prize, open to all England, Dewsbury, beating 37 good birds. Here I refused £10 for my Linnet. 1st, 2nd, and 3rd prizes, open to all England, Leeds: five prizes out of six in the world's greatest contests. I got 1st, 2nd, 4th, 5th, and 6th, and Mr. Jackson offered me £50 for my birds. All the above were for quality Linnet singing, with the exception of Sheffield. You will see I went out of my own town to give everybody a chance of beating me. The above were published in "Cage Birds" as I won them. Linnets, taught by the champion Linnet of the world, with quality notes, new cage and book, 2/6, 3/6; and a few gems, right for catching, 4/6; real exhibition Linnets for the bench, sure prize-winners, 2/-; Linnets from the same place as the world's champion, 1/-, 1/6; real toppers, 2/-; real English Peartree cock Goldfinches, the largest in England, sure prize winners, full coloured, 4/6, fit for the bench; very large Goldfinches, singing hard, 2/- and 3/-; Larks, singing hard, 1/-, 1/6, and 2/-; a few hand-reared Larks, 3/6; one, a gem, 4/6. Look! I have the finest strain of Rollers in England. St. Andreasburg Rollers, A1, these are the finest Rollers in the world, 12/6 each, or £3 10s. a stick; St. Andreasburg Rollers, 10/- each, 64/6 a stick. These are the real contest birds I have sent all over the world. St. Andreasburg Rollers, 3rd, 7/- each, 45/- stick. These are good birds. Genuine cock Canaries, singing daylight and gaslight, 6/- each. These birds are sent on seven days approval. Cash or deposit. If you want winners, send to me. Join my Canary club; pay what you like. Hundreds of British and Foreign birds in stock. Postcard before birds; all birds safely packed in clean boxes, so write to your old friend: Harry Allen, Bird Specialist and Judge, City Aviaries, 40, Beckett-st., Leeds.

READ THIS SPLENDID TESTIMONIAL—received a few days ago unsolicited, the original of which can be seen at our store, with many others:—

Dear Sir,—

Although I have kept Larks for a number of years, this is the first year that I have ever had one to sing right through the moult. The one I have is just about finished, and is singing as good to-day as ever he was.

This is also the first year that I have kept them on your Lark Food, and this bird has had nothing else,—Yours truly,

E. SOUTHWOOD.

ALL YOUR BIRDS WILL SING WELL AND LOOK WELL IF YOU FEED THEM ON OUR SEEDS AND FOODS.

COMPULSORY sale; owing to continued ill-health and removal from the town, I am reluctantly compelled to discontinue the breeding of Canaries; my whole stock, consisting of about 70 Norwich Plainheads and about 30 Crests and Crest-breds, together with all cages and appliances, must be sold. Having been a breeder for over twenty years, this stock is the result of careful selection and mating for both show specimens and good feeders; many are winners in last season's shows, and young bird shows this year. This is an exceptional opportunity for young beginners to obtain the best blood and reliable stock at a low price. A full descriptive price list will be sent post free to genuine fanciers. No reasonable sum will be refused for the whole collection or part, and all birds guaranteed perfectly healthy; may be seen by appointment; no exchange entertained: Herbert J. Lake, "St. Elmo," Dillwyn St. West, Ipswich.

THEIR SIGNIFICANCE TO EXHIBITORS.

HOW TO MAKE THE MOST OF SUCCESS

Every exhibitor at one time or another wishes to sell some of his birds, and in this connection it has been proved that there is no selling force so powerful as a catalogue of wins, especially if it be published simultaneously with a report of the show at which they have been gained.

The report of every show of importance during the season will be published in the columns of "Cage Birds," in the first available issue after its occurrence.

The wise exhibitor, especially if he secures honours, will not miss the opportunity of inserting a small advertisement, giving particulars of his wins, in the issue reporting the particular show. All that he needs to do is to mark it with the name of the show, and we shall see it appears simultaneously with the report.

Rates are: 18 words 6d., 2 words 1d. after, prepaid.

At the unanimous invitation of the Societe Ornitho'ogique de 'est de la Belgique Monsieur Pauwels and myself, writes Mr. O. Millsum, have promised to adjudicate upon the whole of the exhibits at their annual show in January next. Considering their entries last show were well over 500, the task promises to be no light one.

Owing to the great demand for my birds and cages (as per my advt.), I was compelled to dispatch orders in rotation, writes Mr. Sam Haworth (Ashton-under-Lyne), so that will those who were late in receiving same (delay being unavoidable) kindly accept this as an explanation. I had replies from all parts, including three from Ireland. This speaks volumes for CAGE BIRDS as an advertising medium, and I wish it every success.

Mr. F. E. Hawkes, 30, Marlborough St., Liverpool, will be glad to receive from hon. secs. schedules of forthcoming shows.

By a printer's error, the review of Derby schedule was incorrectly printed in our last issue. A correct review appears under "Review of Schedules" this week.

Owing to early dates of shows, secretaries will oblige by applying for Ramsden's specials, enclosing coupons with application, at as early a date as possible.—(Advt.)

Owing to a printer's error in schedule, writes Mr. W. Grewar, Lochgelly, C.B.S., it is stated that in Class No. 56 there is no entrance money. This should be Class 57.

I have removed to more central premises at 355, London Road, Sheffield, writes Mr. E. Broadbent; the change, I am glad to say, being necessitated by largely increasing business.

Mr. E. R. Ridley, 19, Lambton St., Hull, Secretary Hull C.B.S., writes: In connection with our open show on Nov. 15 and 16, we are sending out 1,200 schedules to known fanciers.

I am reluctantly compelled to give up Canary breeding, after over twenty years, owing to ill-health, writes Mr. H. J. Lake, of Ipswich, and am advertising my stock (mostly Norwich and Crests) in this issue.

Mr. H. J. Fulljames finds himself unable to fulfil his engagement to judge at Clapham show, writes Mr. A. R. Coe, Hon. Sec., and although at the time of writing I am unable to name his successor, doubtless a satisfactory substitute will have been found long before this appears in print.

Visitors to Longton show are invited to see the very interesting special display of showcages, sprays, baths, and other goods required by exhibitors, which will be made in three large windows of the establishments of Mr. Enoch Tams (two doors from the show-room). —Advt.

Will you kindly state in your next issue, writes Mr. J. P. Carr, joint Hon. Sec. National British Bird and M.C., that Mr. Plumbridge has tendered his resignation as joint secretary, and I have consented to carry on the work of the Club until the end of the year.

Members who were not present at our last meeting, writes Mr. Levi Booth, Sec. East Bowling B.F.A., should note that the society are offering a rosebowl for competition at next four members' shows. The first four classes in both sections, open and novice, to count for same.

Kindly draw the attention of Secretaries who have been granted the patronage of the Southern Norwich Plainhead Club and the Fancy in general, writes Mr. G. F. Crawford, Bermondsey, to the fact that a printer's error has crept into the S.N.P.C. Booklet for 1912. My initials are G.F. and not W.S., as printed.

The support of the Crested C.C., writes Mr. J. Tyson, Hon. Sec., has been voted to Plymouth, Oct. 15-16; Cheltenham, Oct. 30-31; Nottingham, Nov. 9-11; L.C.B.A., Nov. 28-30; Gateshead, Dec. 13-14; and the Crystal Palace, Manchester, Oct. 25-26, will be the Club Show, where the ten guinea bowls will be in competition. The newly-adopted show cup is now ready.

The officials of the Bournemouth C.B.A. (founded 1890), have arranged a very attractive classification for their forthcoming show, Nov. 19-20; as this is their twenty-first annual exhibition, they are making special efforts to excel all previous shows, and ask fanciers generally to rally round them to help make this "Coming of Age" event a bumper.

It was with genuine surprise, on lifting my CAGE BIRDS last Friday morning, writes Mr. G. Brown, Leith, that I saw depicted on the front page my winning foul buff cock. He has always been in the money wherever exhibited, and I consider him one of the best I have ever bred. He has now got nearly over the moult, after a hard breeding season. I have reared some very nice youngsters from him. I thank you for giving me such an honour in your valuable paper.

Will members of York C.B.S., writes Mr. H. Sayles, Hon. Sec., please notice that classes 4, 8 and 12 should read yell. or buff hen, and not unflighted, as in schedule.

Mr. J. C. Rhodes, Bradford, writes that he has sold at a good figure the clear unflighted buff cock, first in novice section City of Bradford Show, Sept. 30, and sp. for best bird in show.

Reading and Dist. C.B.S. show will be held on Wednesday, Nov. 20th, writes Mr. W. H. Pyke, Hon. Sec. Judges: Messrs. J. Robson and H. D. Astley, M.A., F.Z.S. Twenty open classes, including four foreign; 28 members' classes, with fixed prize money.

Mr. W. H. Gibb, Hon. Sec., writes that classes will be made in the annual open show at Brighton, Nov. 14-15, for Crest, Clear Body, Dark Crest; Crest, A.O.V.; Crestbred. Also for non-colour fed Yorks., ditto Nor. Messrs. C. A. House and J. Robson are the judges. Schedues will be ready shortly.

Mr. J. Clempson, of Hurley, near Atherstone and myself, writes Mr. W. C. Wells, Erdington, have gone into partnership, and in future our birds will be exhibited under the style of Wells and Clempson. Will secretaries, particularly those of societies having patronage of Midland Counties Y.C.C., please note?

Mr. Morton, Hon. Sec., Birkenhead Canary F.A., writes that Mr. J. Cutmore, of the Liverpool Museum, has promised to give a lecture at their next meeting, Oct. 15, on "Hereditary Breeding and Pedigree." All members and their friends of the Liverpool and district societies are most welcome to hear Mr. Cutmore on this most interesting subject.

We hear that the Llanelly and Dis. Cage Bird Society are adding a class for Hawfinches in their next schedule. A class will also be provided for mounted cages (bird and cage) furnished with the most natural surroundings appropriate to the bird shown. In this class the cages and decorations will be judged and not the birds, and prizes will be given for suitability and artistic merit of the decorations. Any bird, British or Foreign, may be shown singly or in pairs. The date of the show is Nov. 26.

In our schedule, writes Mr. A. T. Bellinger, Hon. Sec., Bromley and W. Kent F.A., 3rd prize money should read 2s. 6d., not 2s., as stated. We have put on seven classes for novices. They keep wanting same, so we shall see if they will help us. The K.C.C.B.A. cups are as follows: Silver challenge cup each for most points in Norwich, British, Lizards, Border, and Mules, and challenge bowl in Yorks. No. 1, 3, 4, 5, to be competed by birds bred the current year. All cups to be won three times before becoming the property of the exhibitor. Competitors to nominate not more than two birds in each section for cups and bowl, the exhibitor making the highest points throughout the year at shows patronised by the K.C.C.B.A. to be adjudged the winner. Particulars as to these were not in time for publication in our schedule.

The handbook of the Yorkshire Union of Cage Bird Societies is to hand, and quite sustains the reputation gained by its predecessors. The portraits of the President, Mr. F. Armstrong, and the Secretary, Mr. H. Hill, are given in the opening pages. The book contains the rules of the Union, show rules and regulations, and a list of Union shows, together with the classification of each. "Points worth noting" are given for the benefit of secretaries, exhibitors, and members generally, with a prominent note that birds wearing closed rings will be debarred from competition at Yorkshire Union shows. The names and addresses of members of affiliated societies are given under the various society headings, with particulars as to the place of meeting of each society. The balance-sheet shows £27 9s. 8d. in hand, a drop of £7 13s. 3d. from last year, a notable item on the expense side being the large amount of £20 10s. 6d. expended for medals for competition amongst the members. The handbook, for which the printing bill amounts to £16 2s., is an exceedingly useful compilation, and much pains must have been taken by the popular secretary, Mr. Hill, in gathering together such a mass of information.

NPROLIFICACY IN CANARIES:

By D. STEEL, (Dalkeith).

A well-considered and intensely interesting article which will cause Canary Breeders to think.

Two Extreme Examples.

N proof of my assertion that a deterioration has followed this system of selection, I will take those types which are hest removed from the common stock, i.e., possessing ures which could only have been produced by human uence; such features probably having their origin in a ts nature perpetuated and elaborated by human selection, h deliberate intent. The Scotch Fancy and Crest provide with two extremes, to obtain and maintain which prolifi- y would, as I have alleged, be sacrificed.

The most optimistic breeder of these varieties would reely deny that the decline in maternal instinct alone such as to make their perpetuation dependent on the use a less cultivated stock as foster parents, and that, not- hstanding the best attentions of these fosters, the death e is abnormally high during the nestling stage. That rility is very common in both sexes I have indubitable of, and could name quite a few prominent and experi- ed breeders who have suffered a decrement in their stock ring the past three seasons through this alone, and this, spite the greatly improved methods of treatment due in small measure to such a paper as CAGE BIRDS.

The average Scotch Fancy breeder of some thirty years o rivalled Chin Lee, of Chinatown, in the simplicity and dity of his methods. Half an egg, placed where it could come most contaminated, constituted his ideas of egg-food d its receptacle. His knowledge of seeds was confined to ose procurable, hemp and canary of the one shop quality. is horror of cleaning a cage during the breeding season as only equalled by his contempt for red mites; indeed, have repeatedly heard these old fanciers express their ap- eciation of the abundance of red mite as a good sign. et the results, from a numerical point of view, were such would induce the modern breeder to shake hands with mself.

Are They Deteriorating?

The price demanded for good specimens of these varieties significant, inasmuch as neither the Scotch nor Belgian to-day in such a transfigurative stage, as would perhaps stify such prices as £50 each being paid for specimens hich were a step nearer the ideal set up. On the con- ary, I have the opinion that these types have passed their enith, and a deterioration in the quality of substance has ecome manifest, and these enhanced prices are indicative f an attempt to retain qualities. Granted normal prolificacy, he numbers, of even the best, would have greatly increased, ith the result that they would either have depreciated in onetary value, or the standard would have been raised by aking the qualities of colour and plumage as essential in hese as in other varieties.

Significant also, that while other varieties have merited steady increase in classification at most of the important hows, these types have suffered a diminution, and in many ases abolition of classes. If further proof be wanting that decadence in reproductive power is manifest in these ypes, such may be seen in the fact that a considerable umber of once keen enthusiasts have ceased to keep them, ither because of this unprolificacy, or because of the prohibi- ive price which scarcity commands.

Inbreeding Not a Primary Cause.

The fact that my own stock, to which I have referred, was an inbred, or sib, led me to make the common error of attributing this unprolificacy to such inbreeding. That inbreeding with unprolific stock will accentuate the ten- dency to unprolificacy in the offspring there can be no doubt, but I am quite convinced that a high standard of repro- ductiveness is quite possible with an inbred stock. I have proved this with my own stock, but have no hesitation in saying that elimination of the unfit is absolutely necessary to the maintenance of prolificacy in an inbred stock. Apropos of this, I may state that the extreme of inbreeding which I have seen existed in a poultry stock which originally numbered one male and four females, and for thirty years not a drop of strange blood had been introduced; yet the stock was remarkably prolific. I questioned the owner, Mr. C. Graham, of Skipmyre, Lochmaben, as to how he main- tained the standard. His answer meant elimination.

My experience with unprolific birds induced me to experi- ment with a view to ascertaining whether, by ignoring all other features and eliminating those which revealed a ten- dency to unprolificacy, I could engender a prolific stock; whether, by crossing the progeny from an unprolific with a prolific, there could be produced offspring which would inherit the good or evil qualities of their parents. If, on the whole, an improvement were resultant, my theory of elimination would be greatly weakened, inasmuch as a solu- tion and remedy would have been found which would be much less drastic than elimination. My first proceeding was to ascertain the fecundatory powers of a male Canary. The results were so surprising as to be almost beyond belief. The results were so surprising as to be almost beyond belief, but there were quite a few fanciers who witnessed the ex- periment and who can vouch for the accuracy of this report.

Mormonism.

I chose a mongrel cock, three years old, which had proved his stock-getting qualities when paired in the ordinary mono- ganic manner (one hen), and selected also six healthy hens, mongrels all, which had been proved reliable feeders. I first set myself the task of proving beyond a shadow of doubt that one copulation fertilized an entire clutch of eggs, by allowing him only one access to the hen. The theory being new to me, I verified it by repeating the experiment time and again, and so firmly was I convinced that further copulation was only a needless waste that I adopted that system for the remainder of the season, the only exception being that, as I was not aware how long a period might be allowed as a maximum between copulation and laying, I placed this maximum at four or five days; then if a hen did not lay at the expiry of that period, I permitted another copulation.

My method was to place him for a time in close proximity to those hens which by flapping, calling, and building, showed a desire for his attentions. Placing both cages on the table, I ran him in with the hen, and if copulation took place at once, I removed him, and marked date on cage; if not, I just ran him out, and marked date of the hen's refusal, and allowed a day or two to elapse before repeating the experiment. I seldom had any trouble, as I took the precaution of making sure she was prepared to accept his advances, and there were no other cocks in my room to cause voice pairing troubles. I think those hens recognised the futility of playing any "chase me Charlie" games, and I soon had them all set, while the cock, like Oliver Twist, apparently wanted some more.

A Lucky Dog!

I gradually increased his harem, and created some amuse- ment among my brother fanciers by looking for bad ones, i.e., hens which, though healthy, had been proved to be bad feeders, bad sitters, etc.; I wanted such young as I could get from them for next year's experiment. Ultimately, my feathered Sultan was the proud possessor of sixteen hens, not counting another which a brother fancier brought so that he might witness one copulation, and take his hen away to test the truth of my assertions (this hen had four chicks, laying her first egg three days after copulation). At the end of the season my bird was the parent of almost eighty young, exclusive of a few that died after hatching.

In pursuing my experiment, I found that if an egg were laid the day following copulation, such egg proved invariably unfertile, the probable reason being that it was too advanced in development to be impregnated.

I have no doubt that some who have experimented could state the possible maximum period between copulation and the laying of fertile eggs. That this period is longer than is generally supposed may be the reason of many rumours of clear Mules and Chaffinch or Bunting Canary Hybrids, and the following happening describes my maximum.

Among the hens was one which was sent with the reputa- tion of being barren, a reputation which she sustained for three months after I got her, inasmuch as her actions did not justify any attempts to breed from her, but at length, noticing that she was carrying material, I tried the cock; she refused him, but a day or two later I tried him again and copulation took place. She then started to sit without laying, and continued to do so for about four days. I again allowed copulation, but four days later found that she still had failed to lay. Having three eggs from another hen, I placed them under her, and an examination three days later showed that she had not added to that number; that made seven days from copulation. An accident which temporarily deprived me of my eyesight prevented me ascertaining when she actually laid, but eight days later my wife found that she had increased the clutch to eight, and, acting on my in- structions, removed the first three, which were well advanced in incubation. Just to keep her occupied, she was allowed to sit, but to my surprise all five of the eggs were fertile and hatched out. Thus, judging by the time of hatching, 13 or 14 days must have elapsed between copulation and lay- ing the fifth egg. But this is a digression.

OUR CANARIES ?

By D. MALLINSON (Huddersfield).

CINNAMON markings will come out unexpectedly, and I have been deceived many times. It is now difficult to experiment on this, for you can scarcely find a Yorkshire to-day that has no cinnamon blood in it. I find them always hens when bred from two dark-eyed birds. I always advise a dip into the green blood occasionally; it improves type, and establishes more depth of cinnamon colour. I have seen cinnamon-marked birds so light and faint that they were almost fawn in colour. These birds want a dip into the green to regain depth of cinnamon colour.

One great drawback to crossing with the green blood is that you lose markings, usually breeding a number of splashed birds. You have to chance the markings to gain the colour.

Simplicity in the Diet.

The feeding of my birds has always been simple. I always use best Spanish canary seed as their staple food, and during the breeding season hard-boiled eggs, with home-made bread with a little granulated biscuit; summer rape, niger, and crushed hemp seed, about equal parts. A little dandelion, or lettuce as green food, supplies all that is necessary for the hen to rear her young. Some hens will not feed, no matter what you try them with, others will take to one particular food, and when I find this the case I let them have plenty of it. I find it the best way, and there can be good robust youngsters fed on scarcely anything but seed and green food.

Egg-food should not be made too rich; it is too strong for the young birds, and in lots of cases it is through the strong rich diet that so many youngsters are lost every season.

A very trying time for Canaries is when they are from five to seven weeks old—the time they are weaning from the egg-food on to hard seed. The breaking off from the soft food to the hard seed sometimes sets up inflammation of the bowels or diarrhœa. Either of these complaints is bad enough to deal with. I always let them have a good supply of summer rape when a month old, giving it in a separate vessel inside the cage. They soon begin to pick amongst it and will crack it by the time they are a little over a month old. I then sprinkle a little white canary seed on top of the summer rape, and they usually wean off from the egg-food by degrees.

I always have the outside seed hopper filled with white seed, sprinkling some summer rape on top. I would rather have rape seed given as you buy it, than soaked; I have tried both, and have found it best to give it dry. I add to their drinking water four or five drops of tincture of gentian; this is a fine thing for young birds.

Are They Worth a Guinea a Box for Birds?

If any of the youngsters show any signs of slackness, I give them milk sop. I catch them and examine them to see if it be inflammation of the bowels. If it is that complaint, the lower part of the abdomen will be a dark red colour, and a trifle swollen. My best remedy for this is a Beecham's pill, cut in four pieces and pushed, one by one, down the bird's throat, giving it a whole pill. I find this, if taken in time, seldom fails to cure.

Castor-oil should never be given to young birds, it is too strong for them turning them very sickly; they give over eating, and soon dwindle away. Diarrhœa is the worst com- plaint of the two, and very difficult to cure; once you get it going amongst a lot of birds, you are sure to lose a good lot of them before you can stop it. Parrish's Chemical Food in the drinking-water and prepared chalk in the egg-food is as good as anything I have tried.

When about nine or ten weeks old, I begin to give them a little colour-food, increasing it to the desired quantity by degrees. Colour-feeding is not so much of a mystery as it used to be; any novice can colour-feed Canaries if he follows the directions given him by the colour-food vendors. Regu- larity is the most important feature in producing a nice level colour. They should not be missed three or four days every week, and then expected to moult out a proper colour. Some fanciers are apt to be a bit careless in this respect, and very often spoil all their birds.

A great many fanciers are of the opinion that colour- feeding is injurious. I am of opinion it is in some cases; I mean with the very heavy feeding we have to do to be up to the times. When you have to take their seed away till they eat it, then is the injury done, as the birds get down in condition owing to their aversion to the stuff, and you can scarcely ever get them back again. They are moping about the cage, seeking something they cannot find, and usually get drooping wings and never lose that slovenly kind of carriage.

Color-feeding Difficult to Abolish.

I do not see how we are to do away with colour-feeding so long as we see yellow pepper advertised for feeding natural coloured birds. If we made natural colour classes, there would always be a few that would risk a pinch of colour; then the judges would have to decide which were fed and which were not.

Some natural coloured birds carry a deep colour, and may possibly be thrown out for having had that pinch, whilst on the other hand birds may pass through all right and still have had the pinch all through the moult. Judges ought not to allow colour to weigh so much in their awards. Type, quality, and condition are more difficult to obtain than a bit of good colour.

My advice to the beginner in the Canary Fancy is to practice on a moderate pair the first year by way of ex- periment to get into the management, and to try at breeding. Then, if he should think of going in for better class, he has a little experience behind him.

How to Become a Successful Fancier.

The best method for him is to go to a reliable fancier and buy a set of good birds, a set comprised of two hens and one cock. I know of a good many novices who have been very successful in their first or second season, but they have got the right stuff to begin with. Providing they have a good breeding season, they have every chance of success. There is another method of becoming a successful exhibitor, but you must have a long purse, and not be afraid of dipping deep down into it. This is by buying the birds from the show bench. I should not advise this method for a novice, as he would have to depend on someone else to get his birds ready for the show bench, he himself not being experienced enough to place them down as they should be. I prefer to climb by degrees, and get worn to the hobby by practical experience. A fancier in good financial circum- stances, can, of course, succeed much sooner than his brother fancier who has only limited means, and who has to depend on selling one season's stock before he can speculate further.

In conclusion, I may add there is no more interesting hobby than the breeding of Canaries, the cinnamon tick in par- ticular. Its peculiarities in breeding back for generations, give the breeder an idea of the difficulties to be contended with, before the coveted ideal is produced. Every breeding season being built up by faith. I hope that an eye-opener will spring up from the carefully-selected stock you have matched to the best of your knowledge and ability.

By R. C. TOUT (Portsmouth).

A lecture given before the members and friends of the Portsmouth C.B.S.

How Does the Tail Wag?

THE favourite haunts of the Redstart are ivy grown rocks, ruins, old walls around gardens and orchards, plantations, shrubberies, scattered open woodland with ancient trees, groves of Birch, and wild commons or poor rocky ground, strewn with bramble and bracken. It is generally distributed throughout the country, though locally scarce. The flight of the bird is irregular, jerky, and not especially rapid.

It has been said that the action of a Redstart's tail is vertical, and not lateral. But certainly, to my eye, it is lateral, and not vertical, and I have watched it for an hour or more in my aviary. Its action bears no resemblance to the Whinchat or Stonechat, but consists of a sudden lateral springiness and expansion of the feathers.

The nest is built in a hole in a tree or wall, sometimes in a hollow gate post (an old tin pot is sometimes chosen), and is usually not far from the ground. The nest itself is externally carelessly constructed of dry grass, rootlets, moss, and sometimes a little wool, the interior being carefully lined with hair and feathers. The eggs number from 5 to 8, and in colour much resemble the Hedge Sparrow's, but are slightly paler and more glossy.

A Liking for Cockroaches.

Every morning I put a demon-beetle trap in the aviary, with a few of the smallest beetles left in, and the Redstart is the first bird to fly down amongst the evil-smelling captives; seize one and fly off to eat it. No sooner is the first one swallowed than he is back for another, and so on till he is satisfied. The feeding of this bird is exactly the same as for the Nightingale, with the exception that he is fond of a few red or white currants, and in the autumn a little apple or pear.

As an exhibition bird, he is much sought after, and care should be taken when selecting one for the show bench to choose a large bird full of rich colour, as this generally indicates age. The show cage should be about the same size as the Nightingale's, only in colour I prefer pea green instead of turquoise blue.

The Blackcap, and Its Nest.

The next bird I will deal with is the Blackcap Warbler. The Blackcap is also a migratory bird, and a delightful one. This bird generally arrives with us about the middle of April, and leaves again in September. The general colour, in breeding plumage, is of a smoky grey, and the upper part of the head is jet black. The female differs from the male in its rufous-brown cap, and generally somewhat browner colouring. A young male bird in its first plumage resembles the female, but acquires the black cap in the autumn, without a moult.

The Blackcap delights in wild, dense uncultivated land, almost inpenetrable thickets, tangled hedges and plantations where hawthorn bushes alternate with straggling brambles, nettles, and honeysuckle vines. Its nest is strongly built, though sometimes the walls are not very thick. It is firmly attached to the stems of the hawthorn, bramble or other low-growing vegetation in which it is located. In form, it is a neatly-rounded cup, with walls externally composed of fine dry tufts of grass and internally of fine grass, root fibre, and horse-hair. The eggs number from four to five, and the variety of colour is such that it is hard to describe it. Some I have collected have been of a brownish-buff ground tint. The surface is more or less densely spotted, blotched, or streaked, with soft greyish olive.

An Easily-kept Songster.

Next to the Nightingale, the Blackcap is certainly our finest songster. Its song is at one time rich and clear as that of the Blackbird, then soft and mellow, then again brilliant and plaintive as a Robin's notes. It can copy perceptively the notes of many birds, even some portions of the Nightingale's song, but it is almost too loud in its utterance to produce the latter in its purity.

This bird is about the best one for a beginner, as it is easily kept, the diet consisting chiefly of fruit. I have kept them entirely on banana and pear. In the wild state, it plays great havoc in the gardens where are plenty of currants and goose berries, and Blackbirds and Thrushes get the blame for what the Blackcap has done. As a show specimen, the Blackcap requires to be large, with a good and well defined jet black cap. The show cage should be about the same size as the Nightingale's, only in colour I prefer cream, to show the bird to its best advantage.

Haunts of the Whitethroat.

The Lesser Whitethroat is another of our summer visitors, arriving with us in April or early May, and leaving again in September. The adult male has a crown smoky grey; back, wings, and tail, greyish-brown; throat and chest white. It frequents the margins of dense woods, copses, plantations, shrubberies, uncultivated hedges (especially those which border little frequented lanes), and thickly planted gardens. When disturbed, it either slips away into a dense shrub or flies up into the branches of some lofty tree, where it hops restlessly from twig to twig.

The nest is constructed at any time between April and June, but I have found more in May than in either of the other months. It varies considerably in its height from the ground, being sometimes placed among the upper twigs of a tall hawthorn hedge, and sometimes in brambles a foot or two from the ground. It is also occasionally found in furze bushes, but I have taken most of my eggs either from hedges on the outskirts of a wood or in country lanes. The nest is a pretty little cup formed of stout bents and rootlets, and firmly interlaced with the twigs, among which it is fixed. It is interwoven here and there with a little fine wool, and is lined with fine bents, root fibre, and a little horsehair. The number of eggs is four to five. In colouring, the eggs vary much, but in average eggs the ground colour is whitish cream, the marking diffused olive brown, with underlying silver-grey, or pale slate spots.

A Fruit-eater.

Like the Blackcap, the Lesser Whitethroat is very fond of fruit. The diet should consist of about the same amount of stock mixture and live food as for the Nightingale, with a good supply of banana, pear, soft berries, and other small fruits, more particularly currants and cherries. As a cage bird, the Whitethroat is very interesting, although its song does not recommend it.

As a show specimen, the Lesser Whitethroat requires to be large, with a rich grey head and a pure white throat and chest and a very sprightly bird is more likely to take the judge's eye than one which is over steady. The show cage should be about the same size as for Nightingale, with an olive-green background.

As I have dealt so fully with the feeding and management of the birds generally, I find that I have not much time to dwell upon them individually as I should have liked, so I have chosen the four mentioned as being the most suitable for the occasion. These birds are to be very easily kept, as their diets are very plain and can easily be supplied.

In closing, I should advise all beginners to commence with a bird that will eat plenty of fruit, as they are more likely to be successful with such than with any of the more delicate species. Probably on some future occasion, if it is the wish of the members of this society, I shall have the great pleasure of dealing with the other species which I have been successful in keeping.

A CHAT ABOUT YORKSHIRE CANARIES.

Notes upon a lecture delivered by Mr. G. Gardner before the Hornsey, Wood Green, and District C.B.S.

Mr. Chairman and Gentlemen,—As to the ideal Yorkshire, many fanciers want a long bird; but long and big is not necessarily a good bird. Try to breed good, medium birds; 6¾ inches is plenty long enough for a standard-size; a 7-inch bird is generally a little awkward in gait, or tail, or has some other little fault. Let your birds be gradually tapered right through, wings with plenty of length, but not to cross at tips, nice neck, but not too long, good round head (but not like a marble), beak not too big (not like a Goldfinch nor yet like a Wren; there are more bad beaks than good ones). You want to get plenty of "swagger." A bird should move to and fro on the perch, and have good head play. Many people try to get the head play by using a Belgian, but it will take three seasons to breed them from a Belgian, and then probably you will not succeed in getting the head play necessary, and your time is wasted.

Breed also for quality as well as shape. Do not put too much importance on colour. There have been some remarkable results from double-lutting in Norwich, but that is no use in Yorkshires, nor is double yellowing. If you want a bit of colour try a yellow-green; that is the best. There is no loss in style by using the Green. A Yorkshire must have style or it had better be left at home. A good bird should have a bold, bright eye, plenty of rump behind the leg, well tapering off, but no "breeches" feather, legs fairly long, and thighs long and well covered (not damaged by fingers or tweezers); if there is a dark feather don't pull it out, but leave it and call it a ticked bird), and it should stand at an upright angle, like a guardsman. I lay great stress on shape, but a good bird should also be clever in action and full of life and go, and I would impress on you the necessity of training your birds. A well trained bird will be 25 per cent. ahead on the show bench. A Yorkshire that comes right into position at once and catches the judge's eye will take a lot of beating. A good many birds on the show bench to-day want such a lot of working by the judge to get into position that the chance of a prize is often lost, so train a bird all you can, by patient and careful handling, so that when it is shown it will stand up well.

Be careful in breeding not to get too much feather; there are two sorts of buff, a boxwood buff and a normal buff. You run the risk of getting too much feather if you double buff. In breeding I think it most important to get the hen for style and feather; this is not so absolutely necessary in the cock. The transference of colour is just as likely from the hen as from the cock, and the general opinion that the shape comes from the female and the colour from the male is all moonshine. Get both parents good in shape if possible. There is no royal road, by either male or female, to breeding for shape or colour, etc.

In conclusion, do not be in too much of a hurry to condemn young stock; adopt the popular catch phrase, "wait and see." Don't sell a good bird cheap because it does not seem to have come just as you thought. Be patient, and wait till it has its winter jacket on, then you can judge what class of bird has resulted from your careful efforts. Above all things, study the antecedents of your stock, and it will bring you both credit and profit.

At the close of the lecture several questions were asked and ably answered, and a very hearty vote of thanks was passed to Mr. Gardner.—P. BROOKS, Hon. Sec.

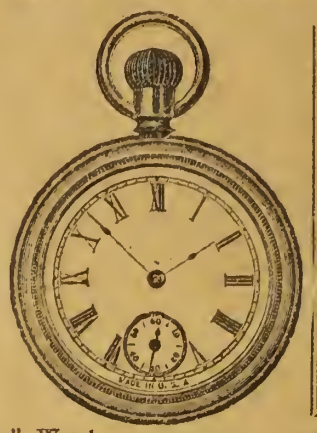
HINTS ON YORKSHIRE CANARY BREEDING.

A lecture by Mr. W. Gilbert before the London and Counties A.C.B.

At the meeting held September 7th, at headquarters, The Earl Cathcart, Osnaburgh-street, N.W., the schedule for the autumn show was gone through and carried, and Mr. W. Shakespeare appointed to act as judge. It will be a one-day show, on November 2nd, at The Earl Cathcart. It was proposed to have a table show of Canaries, bred 1912, and a class for British, any variety, at the next meeting. The chairman then called on Mr. W. Gilbert for his "Hints on Yorkshire Canary Breeding."

Mr. Chairman and Gentlemen, The cages want to be 20 inches high, 18 inches wide, and 11 inches deep from back to front, with the perches low down, so as to give the birds plenty of head room and to keep their heads well up (two perches in each cage). Some fanciers like a perch along the front of the cage, for the birds to feed from, but I think it is best to do away with that, and you will make him search for his food. The best birds to breed with are those with a nice round head and a rounded back, and they should run straight from the back of the head to the tip of the tail; also have long and evenly carried wings, and the breasts nicely rounded and smooth, cutting away neatly to the tail, which should be long and closely folded. I do not like birds to drop their tails, as it is a bad fault with the Yorkshire. They should have long legs, showing the thigh nicely. If birds do not get long enough the first year keep them another year; that is, if there are any good points in them. Large stock birds are not always the best to breed with; 6¾ inches is a good length. The most objectionable points in the Yorkshire Canary are a broad head, eyebrows, hollow neck, hollow back, crossing the wings, dropping the tail, and a frill on the chest. If you can breed birds without one or other of these defects, you will be very lucky.

When starting, it is best to see an old fancier, tell him what you want, and ask him if he can fix you up with two pairs; or have a pair from him, and a pair from another fancier, and pay what you can afford. Breed with them the first year, and the next year cross their young. But before you pair them up it is best to have advice, if you can get it.



In the month of February give a little inga seed, as it prevents egg-binding; also give a little mixed seed—that is, a little German rape, millet, linseed, maw seed, and a few hemp seeds, all mixed up together. Give a half teaspoon to each bird. Give watercress once a day. In the first week in March start to give a little egg food, one slice of stale bread to one hard-boiled egg, and give one teaspoon for each bird, once a day; but be sure it is fresh. In the first week in April, if the birds are in condition, you can pair them up and they will soon get to work. When the hen is sitting stop all mixed seed and feed on Canary seed only. I like to take away the cock bird, as I find the hen will hatch her eggs and bring up her brood all right. On the 13th day I give a little egg food and a very little hemp seed. I give the white as well as the yolk, but two parts egg to one part breadcrumbs. Increase the bread after the fifth day. On the third day give a little watercress.

If you are anxious to know whether the eggs have hatched out, you can soon tell by putting your ear to the cage very gently, so as not to disturb the hen. You will hear the call of the young "chip," "chip." When the young are about eight days old, give watercress twice a day, and twice a week give a little mixed seed. Two or three days before the young ones leave the nest, put back the cock bird and he will take to them all right, and will feed them. When they have been out a day or two put them in the nursery cage and give them some egg-food and crushed seed, put it in an egg-pan on the bottom of the cage. Put water on the outside of the nursery cage. Give the hen plenty of nesting material, and a clean nest pan. Start running the young ones in the show cages all you can, and they will soon learn to hold themselves up and get steady. When the first brood is about 10 or 12 weeks old start a little colour food every day and increase it in strength gradually, about every two days, until you give a teaspoon of colour to two teaspoons of egg-food. When they are half-away through the moult it is a good plan to draw their tails, as young birds do not shoot their tail feathers the first year, and you want them nice and long for the shows, and they look better. A red paper blind up at the window will keep out the strong light, and is very good to keep in the colour. A piece of carbonate of iron about the size of a pea in the water about once a week will help to set the colour fast. A good thing to get that shine on the feathers is a little linseed in the water, or a little linseed meal in with the food; as a rule, they will not eat much linseed. When the moulting is done, pick out what you think are the best birds and put them in cage by themselves, and give them all a little colour food once a week, for if a feather or two come out they will not look patchy.

A little discussion took place, and questions were asked and answered. A hearty vote of thanks was accorded to Mr. Gilbert for his kindness in giving such an interesting and entertaining lecture.

Questions and Answers.

For rules see page 704 last week.

THE following gentlemen represent CAGE BIRDS staff of ADVISORY EXPERTS. Queries must in no case be addressed to any of them individually, but to the Editor.

Canaries.—Claude St. John. British Birds, Mule and Hybrids—G. E. Weston. Foreign Birds—Wesley T. Page, F.Z.S., M.B.N.H.S., &c., Wild Bird Life—H. Norman

NOTE.—If an answer is required concerning the proper mating, etc., of Norwich, Yorkshires, Crests, Cinnamons, Greens, Borders, Lizards, Scotch or any other variety of the Canary family, we shall, should the querist desire us to do so, be pleased to submit his questions for answer to some leading specialist of the day on the variety concerned.

CANARY QUERIES.

Answered by CLAUDE ST. JOHN.

A FICKLE DAME (Crest).—The hen in question is clearly one of those whimsical abnormalities which cannot be dealt with by any rule of thumb, neither do I think she is ever likely to prove a reliable breeder. Some individuals are most conservative in their habits, and I have myself had them resent the very slightest changes in their food. But for a hen to desert a young chick simply through being given a little hemp, and to follow this up by deserting the next brood solely on account of adding a pinch of maw to the egg-food, should put her out of court as a breeder, when she has no exceptional qualities to recommend her, and seems to limit her broods to units. I do not advise you to trouble with her another season. Better get a healthy robust, and right-minded young hen to replace her. The soft-shelled egg showed that the lower portion of oviduct was not in proper working order. A little old mortar smashed up and strewn on cage floor, or a teaspoonful of limewater in the drinking vessel when she was about laying, might have prevented it. The dietary you mention in "Canary Breeding for Beginners" will do excellently for rearing Rollers. The supply of hemp being advised to be given in finger draw should show that only a very small quantity is meant at this stage; say, not more than a small teaspoonful, which is gradually increased as the young brood grows.

YOUNG BIRDS GOING LIGHT (E.B.).—There is probably something wrong with the digestive apparatus. There is really no necessity to deprive birds of good sound hemp. It is only when it is stale and rancid that this seed is really dangerous to a bird's health. Try the following treatment for a month. First see that birds are free from cold draughts and fumes of burning lights in the evenings. Keep cage and perches very clean, and the floors strewn with clean gritty sand. In the hoppers give a staple seed diet of two parts canary to one part summer rape. Every second day for a fortnight give each bird a piece of bread the size of a hazel nut soaked in cold milk, drained, two drops of cod liver oil emulsion on it, and dusted with soft sugar. On the intervening days give alternately a half-ripe plantain stalk and a pinch of equal parts hemp, inga, millet, and teazle, and a spray of chickweed and a pinch of equal parts maw and gold of pleasure seed. In the drinking water add six drops of syrup of rhubarb and as much sulphate of soda as will cover a three-penny-piece for two days, and then every second day for the remainder of a week. After this give four drops each of tincture of gentian, tincture of calumba, and dilute sulphuric acid every second day for a fortnight.

DYING IN MOULT (A. G. M.).—You should have given more particulars about your feeding and where the birds are kept. See that they are quite free from cold draughts and sudden extremes of heat and cold. There should be no necessity to give bread and milk when you are giving egg food with colour daily. Keep cages and all food and water vessels scrupulously clean. Give a staple diet of plain canary, and allow a small teaspoonful of egg food per bird with the colour daily. In addition to this give a small teaspoonful of a mixture of equal parts hemp, inga, millet, black rape, teazle and linseed twice a week, and sprinkle the egg food with maw three times a week. If the bowels are normal, give a half ripe plantain stalk or spray of chickweed three or four times a week, but do not give this if there is any undue looseness. Keep cage floor strewn with clean gritty sand, and stick a cube of hard common salt in the wires for birds to peck at occasionally. See that your hemp is sound in the kernel, and do not add anything in the way of linseed meal or crushed linseed to your egg food. Add six drops of syrup of buckthorn to the water for two days, and afterwards 20 drops of Chemical Food for a week or so. In case any young are now going "thick," after giving the above aperient for two days add 20 drops of whisky, and six of tincture of gentian to the water for two days, then go on with the above method of treatment. Both samples of seed are of very good quality.

NINE-YEAR-OLD CHICK (J. H. Fowler).—Your feeding is by no means very good, and now the bird has been in such plumage for so long, I fear that his age is too great for him ever to quite recover perfect plumage. Keep him fairly warm, but do not overdo it, and see that the temperature is fairly equable and free from draughts or fumes from burning lights. Keep cage strewn with clean gritty sand, and stick a cube of hard common salt between the wires for him to peck at until he has quite finished moulting. Give a staple diet of plain canary seed. Every second day give separately half-a-teaspoonful of crushed sponge cake, or an equivalent quantity of bread and milk. In either case drop on it two drops of cod liver oil emulsion and twice each week dust it slightly with flowers of sulphur and lastly with a slight spoonful of soft sugar. On the alternating days give half a teaspoonful of a mixture of equal parts hemp, inga, millet, teazle, linseed, rape and maw. Four times a week give a green plantain stalk, or small spray of some other green food. Adhere closely to this dietary in kind and quantity for a month at least. In the drinking water add 20 drops of whisky, five of syrup of saffron, and as much chlorate of potash as will cover a threepennypiece every second day for a week. After this time omit the saffron and substitute five drops of tincture of gentian, and continue the mixture every second day for another fortnight. If not considerably better at end of month, please write again and report.

SEED AND COLOUR-FOOD (A.W.H.).—(1) Both samples of canary seed are of very nice all-round quality, and there is but little to choose between them. No. 1 however, has what preference there is, being a little better in flavour and also, perhaps, slightly better refined. It is certainly worth a little more than No. 2, though the difference should not be considerable. (2) It will be quite right for you to mix the proper proportion of colour with sufficient of the prepared food you mention to last a week in order to ensure the birds having the proper strength whilst you are away from home. Blend and work it well together so that the colour is thoroughly distributed, but do not add any moisture in the mixing of it.

PROLONGED MOULT (Treaty).—Your letter seems to suggest that the bird moulted flights when you thought the moult should have been near or at the end. If so, this is certainly unusual as the flights and tail should be dropped first in the adult moult. It is not unlikely the near proximity of the oil lamp has had a detrimental effect upon the moult, and if the bird is hung high up it will also injure its health in time to keep it in that position. Move it now to a place quite free from draughts and great fluctuations, where there is a fairly comfortable temperature. See that the cage is quite free from red mites, and keep floor strewn with clean, gritty sand. In addition to usual seed diet, give half a teaspoonful of crushed sponge cake with four drops of sherry and two of cod liver oil emulsion mixed in it, and sprinkled with maw seed. On the alternate days give a pinch of equal parts hemp, inga, millet, teazle and black rape. Give a spray of green food four times a week, and offer a bath several times a week in mild weather. In the water add ten drops of syrup of buckthorn for two days, and afterwards six drops of tincture of gentian and three of tincture of steel every second day until feathers cease dropping. Glad to hear by treating old aviary as advised you have been quite free from red mites this season.

GREENHOUSE AVIARY (S. B.).—Your greenhouse appears to be very nicely arranged, and in a good position for adapting part of it to the use of your birds, and as it is also fitted up with hot-water pipes, I do not think there is any necessity for boarding over the whole of the glass. The heat you will probably use for protecting the plants in one portion will doubtless keep the bird section fairly equable, and also at a suitable temperature, i.e., somewhere between 45 and 50 degrees, which will be quite ample for the birds. In these circumstances I would not advise you to board over any of the glass permanently. If you keep the top covered with matting—except the two windows—and make movable wooden shutters to fit over two-thirds of the end and front for use during the winter, it will provide ample protection for the birds. These shutters could be dispensed with in the Spring, and in case a hot summer comes along you should easily control fluctuations by making the windows on top to open, and, if necessary, add another window in the glass portion of front. Cover all window spaces inside with firmly fixed wire netting—half-inch mesh—to guard against cats and possible escape of birds.

PECKING WIRES AND GLASS (J. A. D.).—I suspect this bird is being pestered with red mites. If it appears restless at night an hour or two after settling down to roost, this is practically certain to be the case. See reply to "T. H. L." on Sept. 21 for this trouble. The bird hanging in the window is another probable cause of trouble. You should move it to a more suitable place, where it is less likely to be exposed to cold draughts and extremes of heat and cold. Having seen to these points, feed the bird for a month as advised to "Treaty" in this issue, but give in addition, if available, a mealworm each day, and stick a cube of hard common salt in the wires for it to peck at. In the drinking water add six drops of syrup of rhubarb, and as much Epsom salts as will cover a three-penny piece, every second day for a week, and in the next week substitute four drops each of tincture of gentian, tincture of calumba, and aromatic sulphuric acid every second day. Strew the cage floor with gritty sand. It is only necessary to supply this material in a pot when the floor is covered with sawdust. Get No. 10 Nutshell booklet for full particulars for feeding Rollers.

YOUNG DYING (E. Hambrook).—The cause of the young birds dying, as you say, was due to taking them off soft food too early. Of this there is no shadow of doubt. You would be well advised to equip yourself for next season with one of our helpful handbooks—House's "Manual," or "Canary Breeding for Beginners." If you would get "Our Canaries," you would be prepared for any emergency. Follow directions in any of these works, and you will not make the same mistake again. As soon as the birds are quite through the moult you should turn all the hens into the large flight for the winter, but keep the cocks caged separately, which will bring them in song earlier. Remove cage from window however, as this is too risky a situation. Give a staple diet of plain canary. Every second day add a pinch of rape per bird. Twice a week give a little egg food, or some other soft food, such as bread and milk. Three times a week a spray of green food or morsel of sweet fruit, and offer a bath twice a week.

LOSING YOUNG (J. Wager).—Your letter leaves me uncertain whether you really have any birds ill just now or not. If you had given some particulars of your treatment and symptoms shown by birds, I should have been better able to help you. I suspect the root of the trouble is that you take the birds off soft food too young, or too suddenly. If you have any ill now, keep the cages and perches scrupulously clean, and strewn with clean, gritty sand, and see that all your seeds, soft food, and water are quite sound, sweet, and fresh. Especially keep water vessels quite sweet and clean. Give a piece of bread and milk the size of a hazel nut, with two drops of cod liver oil emulsion on it, and dusted with soft sugar daily for a fortnight. Every second day give a pinch of maw and a spray of chickweed or half ripe plantain stalk, and on the alternate days a pinch of a mixture of equal parts hemp, inga, teazle, millet and broken groats. In the drinking water give six drops of syrup of buckthorn for two days, and afterwards 20 drops of chemical food every second day for a fortnight. If birds do not quickly improve under this treatment, write again and give full particulars as indicated above.

FOREIGN BIRDS.

WHAT PARROT? (Horncastle).—It is very difficult to define the Parrot tribe, as they mature slowly and often, after a couple of moults, change the colours of their plumage very materially. The description you send is that of the Golden-crowned Conure (Conurus aureus), and unless the plumage changes materially at the next moult, it certainly is that species.

WHAT BIRD (C. Brown).—The body of the bird sent me last week (green and red) was that of an immature Pintail Nonpareil; but the body just to hand (brown and blue) is quite a different species, viz., an ordinary Cordon Bleu. As regards the former, while in their nestling plumage Parrot Finches and Pintails (both belong to the genus Erythrura) would be very similar and a mistake easily made between the two species—at the same time I do not think I was in error in defining it as a Pintail Nonpareil, but it was too "nosey" to permit of a lengthy examination, and the Cordon Bleu reached me in the same condition.

AILING BUDGERIGARS (E. M. M.).—If the cere round the nostrils is always blue it is a male, but if it (the cere) becomes brown at any portion of the year it is a female. I can add but little to my former reply. Try 3 drops Friar's Balsam in the water daily for a week. If it gives the bird any relief, continue it for another week, then resume treatment already advised in our previous reply. Lack of wing exercise is apt to interfere with the free action of the respiratory system of Budgerigars. At the slightest sign of "lits," give the treatment advised for same at once and your pet may be with you for a long time yet.

SICK AMAZON (Bird Lover).—The first thing to be done is to give its cage a thorough cleansing with boiling water, seeing that all crevices are thoroughly scarched. Treat food hoppers and perches the same way. The tea was unwholesome, but I do not think it was responsible for the trouble, which was most probably the sudden development of some latent infection, contracted during importation. Your treatment was as good as you could give in the emergency, and if the diarrhœa still continues, you could give two more doses of the Tincture of Opium, with a one day's interval between the doses. If the bird will eat biscuit, give it some arrowroot biscuit, as much as it cares to eat. Also supply cuttlebone and add a pinch of grit (not sand) to the daily supply of seed mixture. If the bird is thin you had better give a little boiled maize. Boil to soft, drain off all water and dust with flowers of sulphur before supplying to the bird. It only keeps fresh one day. The dietary should consist of seed mixture, ripe fruit, arrowroot biscuit, nuts, with boiled maize every other day. Half a teaspoonful of Byno-Phosphates in the drinking water will be a help, but you must not use a metal drinker while giving drugs. Keep the bird warm, quiet, and out of draught. Remove the voidings from cage at once, burning them if possible.

BLACK-TAILED PARRAKEET (S.T.).—Bathe the eyes with warm water, then dry with cloth, and then again bathe with a dilute solution of rose-water and zinc, which any chemist will supply. It is important that the bowels should move quite freely, but the feces should not be allowed to remain watery loose. An occasional dose, say twice weekly, of Dinneford's Magnesia, one teaspoonful in the usual (daily) supply of drinking water, should be sufficient, and on other days—that is, when not giving the magnesia—put half a teaspoonful of Byno-Phosphates in the daily supply of drinking water. For this winter it is important that this bird shou'd be kept quite free from draught, and while its quarters should be well ventilated, fresh air admitted on all suitable occasions, a minimum temperature of 50 to 55 degrees should be maintained. The kind of weather we have been experiencing has made the acclimatisation of newly imported specimens very difficult and uncertain—special care is necessary during the prevalence of raw, cold, wet periods. At the same time, heat is not required, merely warm, well ventilated quarters, free from draught and damp.

A FEATHER-PULLER (H. E. W.).—You give me no idea as to how you are feeding and treating this bird, thus making it impossible for me to form any opinion as to cause—you had better send me the above information. In the meantime, every fourth day put one teaspoonful of Dinneford's Magnesia into the usual quantity (daily supply) of drinking water, but you must not use a metal drinker, and on the intervening days put half a teaspoonful of Byno-Phosphates into the water. If the bird will allow you to handle it, dip your finger into paraffin and rub this into the area the bird is in the habit of plucking, but do not use sufficient to materially grease the surrounding plumage. On receipt of further details I will try and assist you further. Our Nutshell, the "Grey Parrot," would materially assist you as to food and treatment, 2½d. post free from our Manager.

SWELLING AT EYE (A. Oliver).—An over-heated room is bad for bird or human. I note your remark "take cage off the hook." The cage should never hang above the level of gaslight. Continue the fomenting with warm milk and water but after each fomentation dry with a cloth, and then bathe with a dilute rosewater and zinc solution, which is procurable from any chemist. This bird should be kept in as even a temperature as possible and quite free from draught. Bathing the nostrils with diluted glycothymoline soon checks the running. I should also keep the bowels moving freely with an occasional dose of Dinneford's Magnesia and put the bird on a course of Byno-Phosphates. For quantities see other replies. At the same time, while anything approaching constipation must not be permitted, the voidings must not be allowed to remain watery loose. Our Nutshell, "The Grey Parrot," will tell you how to feed and treat, 2½d., post free.

COCKATOO WITH SWELLING (A. W. Evans).—It is impossible to correctly diagnose such a case by correspondence. You can give relief by fomenting with hot (not hot enough for discomfort) water daily, or twice daily and keep it warm and quiet, reporting on its development a little later. However, the only proper course is to call in a vet., who should be able to pronounce an opinion at once as to whether there was any chance of successful treatment, and if not, he would painlessly destroy it. If you live near London and will send me a stamped addressed envelope per the Editor, I will name a vet. who has studied bird diseases and would undertake such cases. There is also our P.-M. expert, Mr. Yates. I certainly should not destroy while hope remains, but treatment should not be delayed. A week has been lost waiting for this reply. If in the provinces, call in a vet. and be guided by him in this respect.

Answered by G. E. WESTON.

RARITY OF TWO HYBRIDS (W. Higham).—The Canary-Bullfinch is not a particularly rare Hybrid, as a good number have been bred during the last five years, and in the region of a dozen may generally be seen at the big London shows—the Crystal Palace, in particular. A genuine Siskin-Bullfinch Hybrid, on the other hand, has never yet been exhibited.

COLOURS OF SHOW CAGES (Lorton).—It is entirely a matter of individual opinion as to which is the best colour for the show cage of any particular British bird or Hybrid. The tint I myself think the best might quite likely be cavilled at by the very next exhibitor you question on the point. In Scotland, for instance, one particular shade of green is favoured for the majority of our British seed-eaters, and seems to answer quite well. However, coming to your list, my fancies are: Goldie, Brambling-finch, and Corn Bunting, dark green; Linnet and Chaffinch, medium green; Redpoll and Twite, Goldfinch-Canary Mules, and the Goldie-Greenie Hybrid, turquoise blue (or the medium green); Yellowhammer, dark blue or green; Greenfinch, light green (all sorts of colours, from rose-pink to black are used for this bird).

THE CASE OF A GOLDFINCH (F.P.).—You ask my opinion on your method of feeding; but if you have read my columns for any length of time you ought to know that my answer will be that it is incorrect. Goldies do not want egg-food and bread and milk as regular items of diet. Further, you do not mention that you ever give him any green-food or wild seeds. You would find full information on these points in the "Nutshell" booklet on the Goldfinch (only 2½d., post free, or 2d. from most bird and seed shops). I note what you say concerning the conditions under which the bird is kept. Does he get the opportunity to bathe; or do you spray him? You cannot expect perfection of plumage otherwise. Anoint the bare place once daily for a week with a very little Kerol ointment; apply gently with the tip of a finger, the way the feathers should lie.

BRITISH BIRD & HYBRID QUERISTS

should consult Houlton's great work, "Cage-Bird Hybrids" (7/6); Norman's "British Bird Manual" (2/3); or Part 1 "Hardbills" (1/1), Part 2 "Softbills" (1/1): "Aviaries, Bird-rooms, and Cages" (2/3); "Seeds, Foods, and Wild Plants" (1/2); "Secrets of Hybrid Breeding" (1/2); Dr. Creswell's "Hygiene of Bird-keeping" (1/1); Dr Clarke's "Septic or Bird Fever" (7d.); "Colour-feeding" (3½d.); or the "Nutshell" booklets (2½d. each): No. 1 "Goldfinch," No. 2 "Linnet," No. 3 "Skylark," No. 4 "Song Thrush and Blackbird," No. 11 "Bullfinch," No. 13 "Chaffinch," No. 15 "Greenfinch," No. 22 "Siskin, Redpoll, and Twite," No. 25 "Small Insectivorous Birds," No. 26 "Large Insectivorous Birds," No. 6 "Ailing Birds and How to Cure Them," No. 9 "Disinfection of Cages, Birdrooms, etc.," No. 12 "How to Moult British Birds." All thoroughly practical and instructive. Prices quoted are post free from "Cage Birds," 154, Fleet Street, London, E.C.

TWO ITEMS (Kingskerswell).—Two of your questions relate to Canaries, so kindly refer to Mr. St. John's column next week for a reply to them (note the rules). The all-the-year-round food of the Goldfinch is described at length in the "Nutshell" booklet, which deals with this bird (send to our publisher for No. 1, 2½d. post free). You will get a lot of fine hints from it. It is not a very easy matter to get a cock Goldfinch and a hen Bullfinch to breed; although, of course, plenty of Hybrids have been produced of this parentage. The young generally have to be reared by hen Canaries, as, maybe, you already know. Goldie-Bullie Hybrids are not good songsters (that is, judged by the standard of Linnet-Canary and Goldie-Canary Mules), but they have a pleasing jerky little ditty, which they are continually uttering; further, they have many lovable little mannerisms.

POST MORTEMS.

Mr. G. Yates, M.R.C.V.S., 1, College Road, Harrow, Middlesex, will examine and report upon dead cage birds for a fee of 1s. 6d. each bird; for reply direct, 2s. 6d.; analysis, 21s. Subjects for post mortem examination must be sent packed in a box direct to Mr. Yates, with the fee, this and any accompanying letter being kept from contact with the dead bird. Send by letter-post; it is cheaper and quicker than parcel post. Any bodies sent to the office of this paper will be thrown away, and if a fee is enclosed the loss will be the sender's.

GENERAL.

Answered by THE EDITOR.

H. Lewis.—We stand corrected. The point you raise certainly did not occur to us.

Allan Campbell.—You must surely know that the law of libel will not permit the publication of a letter of such a character as the one you send. We know nothing, of course, as to the truth or otherwise of the allegations. But may we ask: how would you proceed to prove them if you were sued for damages? That is the point. Remember that the writers of letters of a libellous nature are liable to be sued in the courts.

R. Peart.—Thanks for drawing our attention to this matter, which we certainly will endeavour to keep to rights in the future.

Syntax.—We think the address you want is 34, Cockburn Street.

Goldfinch Specialist.—We had a gentle little laugh at your sketch. It goes in at the first available opportunity, and will no doubt amuse readers.

Fancier.—We cannot take any notice of anonymous communications. If you want your enquiry attended to repeat it and attach your name and address.

BONNYRIGG C.B.S.

A meeting was held, Foresters' Arms, Sept. 28. Mr. Alex Jardine, President, occupied the chair. It was agreed that the committee arrange about extra staging, if required; all entries for show must be in by Oct. 19th, The Secretary was instructed to write various firms for quotations for bills; etc. It was agreed to have three gold medals all the same for the various sections. Next meeting, Oct. 19.—James Hamilton, Sec.

PELTON FELL AND DISTRICT C.B.S.

Meeting held Sept. 28th at Mr. Enoch Waugh's, Colliery Inn, Pelton Fell. The schedule suggested of 32 classes for our annual members' show was agreed to, entrance fee to be 6d. There must be four entries in a class to claim 1st prize money, if less than four only 2nd and 3rd money paid, and if only one, we pay 3rd prize money. Decided, that the printing matter be left in the secretary's hands, and that the show-room be left for Sec. and Chairman to look after.—Wm. Forster, Sec.

HIGH WYCOMBE F.S.

Annual meeting held Sept. 25th, Mr. J. Howard in the chair. The balance-sheet for the year was passed as satisfactory, and officers for this year elected: President, Sir C. A. Cripps, M.P.; S. C. Pearce, hon. sec.; W. Rinetts, assist. sec. (Mr. Stevens resigning on account of ill-health); Mr. W. L. Hall, treasurer; J. Howard, auditor. Decided to hold the annual show Dec. 27th, the sec. being asked to book the Oakley Hall. Next general meeting Oct. 9th.—S. C. Pearce, Hon. Sec.

GUILDFORD AND DISTRICT F.S.

Committee meeting, held at Messrs. Folker and Horton's, New Chambers, The Quadrant, on Monday, September 23rd. Present, Messrs. Galford (chair), Gaue, Gould, Killick, Lympass, Pope, Prior, Stevens, Turner and three secretaries. Nine new members elected. Classes arranged for annual show, January 14, 1913. Will those members who are willing to guarantee classes or entries kindly write to the Hon. Secs., G. Russell-Cox, 34, Quarry Hill, E. Stevens, 7, Manor Road, Assistant Hon. Sec., S. W. Barter, 34, Quarry Hill. Latest date for receiving advertisements from members for the Manual and Year Book, Monday next, October 7th.—G. Russell-Cox, Hon. Sec.

BRIGHTON AND HOVE C.B.A.

Committee meeting, followed by a general, held at headquarters, Sept. 25, when details of the 3rd annual show were arranged. Mr. C. A. House will judge Yorks., Brit., and members classes, and Mr. J. Reborn Nor., Miscel. and For. Various specials were offered and will appear in schedules, which will be ready middle of October. Prize money of 10s., 6s., and 4s., with vhc 1s. 6d. added in large classes, was decided on, also model prize cards. Classes for non-colour fed were also made. The large Lecture Hall, North Road, has been booked, and a record show is expected. It was decided to hold a table show on Oct. 16, at headquarters. Classes, Nor., Yorks. (champion), Yorks. (novices), Goldfinch and Bullfinch, A.O.S. Brit. Judge, Mr. H. James. The judging competition for members will be resumed.—Will H. Gibb, Hon. Sec.

WOLVERHAMPTON C.B.S.

Meeting held September 28, at the Duke of York, Princess Street, when Mr. F. J. Weaver presided over a good attendance. The chief business of the meeting was the discussion of the special prizes, which it is very interesting to note are very good up to the present, but the secretary is dogging about and is anxious to hear of any fellow member who can get one. The special prize fund last year was a large one, but this year we have increased it. In previous years we gave a special over a number of classes, this year we are giving a good one every two classes, so I hope to see fanciers supporting us again and keep up our reputation, for several of the members have sacrificed their holidays for the show. We also finished the classes, which run as follows: Two nat. col. Nor., which are new classes. Fanciers who believe in natural colour should support these. Ten champion Norwich, which include two new classes; buff Norwich hen, and variegated or green; 4 novice Norwich, an increase of one; old buff cock, instead of yellow or buff; 6 champion, 4 novice Yorks., which is certified by having the M.C.Y.C.C. patronage; 2 Crest, 3 Borders, 1 A.O.V.C., 2 selling, 3 Mules, in which there is a very fine special for most points, a pair of buffalo horns mounted on carved oak, presented by Mr. J. A. Tonks, of Wednesbury; 6 British, 2 Foreign, making in all 46 open classes. After the meeting was over, a chat was held on birdy matters, and several who have got their birds finished decided to send to Longton, so I hope to see the North Staffordshire men support us. Next meeting will be on Thursday, Oct. 11th.—J. Gibbons.

COWDENBEATH C.B.S.

Monthly meeting held in the Arcade Temperance Hotel, September 21. Mr. Alex Anderson, vice-president, in the chair. There was a good turn-out of members. The secretary read a letter from Mr. J. Steel, Dalkeith, and stated the arrangements the committee had made for his lecture, which were approved. Letters from Messrs. R. Hyde and Co. and T. Sandiford read, granting their specials for the open show. The secretary also intimated that we had been granted the patronage of the Border F.C., the Scottish Y.C., the Scottish P.C., the Fife and Kinross P.C., and the Scottish B.B. and M.C.

Mr. Alex Garrioch's offer for the supply of model cards was accepted. Letters were read re advertising in our schedule and catalogue, and the secretary was instructed to deal with this matter. The amended offer of Mr. Fraser Simpson for the open show printing was accepted. Stewards for the open show were appointed as follows: Scotch Fancy, Messrs. J. Paterson and J. Muir; Border, Messrs. G. Sinclair and R. Smillie; Yorks., Messrs. A. Cunningham and H. Geddes; Norwich, Messrs. A. Simpson, J. Holms, and P. Langan; Crest and C.B., Messrs. Jas. Baxter and J. MacKiver; Mules and Brit., Messrs. A. Robertson, J. Jackson, and J. Beattie. Mr. Alex Anderson's offer to look after and provide food for the soft-billed birds, was gratefully accepted. Special meeting on October 9 for the allocation of specials, etc. All collecting books to be in the hands of the secretary the Saturday previous. A hearty vote of thanks to the chairman brought the meeting to a close.—Joseph R. Reid, Sec.

STRATFORD & E. LONDON F.A.

At last meeting schedule for members' 25th annual young stock show, Oct. 24th, was drawn up. Judge, Mr. Geo. Gardner. Resolved, that exhibits must be in the show room not later than 6 p.m. (Any arriving later may be too late for competition.) Judging to commence 6.30 prompt. Show to be open from 7.30 to 10. Admission 2d. Several sterling silver spoons were promised as special prizes in the various sections. Members are requested to note that there will not be any meeting October 10th (Dairy Show week.) The Secretary will be glad to hear from any member who can get to the show room about 5 p.m. to give a hand to pen exhibits, etc. (A little help is worth more than a lot of pity.) Fanciers joining now can compete at both Young Stock show and annual. Full particulars gladly sent to intending members.—W. Maxey, Hon. Sec., 16, James Place, Poplar.

STOCKPORT B.F.A.

Special meeting held Sept. 24 at the Boar's Head Hotel, Market Place. Mr. T. Mason presided, and after the usual business was done a discussion took place on how to build up the society to its former strength of a few years ago, and with this object in view it was decided to commence a course of lectures, washing exhibitions, etc. The first will be a washing competition on Oct. 8, at the above hotel, open to all novices in Stockport and district, for a prize of 5s. for the best washed bird, washing material provided, no entry fee, to commence at 8 prompt. Mr. J. Raynes, Manchester, will judge, and give a lecture on the Norwich Canary. We cordially invite every fancier in the district to our meetings, this night especially, and novices, whether members or not, come and try to win the prize.—W. Stafford.

LEIGH AND DISTRICT C.B.S.

A good muster of members attended the meeting on Sept. 25th, Mr. Taylor in the chair. Business being soon over, it was decided to have a paper discussion. Each member wrote a question on a piece of paper and threw them in a hat, then all drew one each, and had to answer them, starting at the Chairman. Several good questions were asked and answered, and the discussion that followed tended to instruct the members generally. The meeting concluded with a hearty vote of thanks to Mr. Taylor for keeping the discussion moving whilst in the chair. At next meeting, October 9, Mr. Taylor, Vice-president, has kindly consented to give us a bird-drying exhibition, using two different methods, one the ordinary way of drying in front of the fire, and the other in a drying apparatus. I should like to see as many members and friends there as possible, so that they will see which method they like best.—R. Charleson, Hon. Sec.

CODNOR PK. & EASTWOOD C.B.S.

The general meeting called to take place at the Queen's Head on Sept. 28 was adjourned to Saturday, October 12, at the Queen's Head, at 6.30 p.m., owing to the lack of members attending. The only business carried out was the schedule for the open show. Now, members, are you going to support your secretary through this show? Also, where are the committee? Only four turned up at the meeting out of a working committee of 14. Surely this isn't a fancier's spirit. I appeal to all members of this society to attend our next meeting, Oct. 12th, and get to business and pull together again, as we used to be twelve months ago. Don't let about six of us rule this society; come yourselves, and have a word in the management. The business is most important to all.—J. H. Mitchell, Sec.

Song After the Moult.

Sir,—Would any of your readers kindly give a few hints on how to get Linnets and Chaffinches on song after the moult?

Birds Travelling at Owner's Risk.

Sir,—I would be obliged if some of your readers would let me know if they have had a similar experience to this, and if I have a case for a claim? On Sept. 19 I sent a consignment of nine birds from Tain to Alnwick on approval. Three of the birds have been taken out, or otherwise lost. I learn from the gentleman I sent them to, that the box showed no signs of being tampered with. Birds were sent at owner's risk.

The Bell Tour in Roller Canaries.

Sir,—In your admirable article on the "Musical Box of the Canary Family—the Roller," in last week's issue, it is stated by the writer, that he does not consider the bell tour worthy of a place in the bird's repertoire. Will you permit me to endorse this view, and to add that as far back as March, 1911, in an article written by me for the British Roller Canary Club, I advocated the sacrifice of this tour, realising that the two points allowed were not worth the danger involved in producing it.

The Enamelling of New Wooden Cages.

Sir,—First give one coat of paint, fairly thin. When dry, sandpaper well, and putty all holes and cracks, then repaint. Sandpaper again when dry, and give another coat of paint. After a couple of days, sandpaper lightly, and give a fairly good coat of enamel, well spread.

R. M.

Sir,—I have pleasure in replying to your correspondent, "W.H." re the "Enamelling of Wooden Cages." This is my first year of Canary breeding, and the two cages I put up I enamelled. It is necessary to paint the cages before enamelling, owing to the enamel having no "body" in it; the paint supplies the necessary foundation. Your correspondent will also prove that if he puts a good coat of paint of a rather lighter shade than the enamel he wishes to use he will have very satisfactory results. He will also, at the same time, be taking a very big step to protect his birds from red mite, provided he fills up all the cracks and crevices with the enamel. With a good coat of paint, one coat of enamel, if laid on level will suffice. Trusting this little information will be useful.

Partick and Dist. C.B.C. Have a fine Day's Outing.

Sir,—It came to pass in the days of good weather, when the rain had ceased to fall, that the men of Partick and the district round about congregated together, and said to their leaders; "Let us leave the city of our habitation and take with us food and water (?) and drive into the country, which is beautiful and not far off." The leaders agreed, and they hired a chariot and four horses, and at a given signal the men came together from all parts, from the north and from the south and from the east and from the west, and the names of the men were too numerous to relate. When all was ready, Jehu did drive his horses and chariot outside the city walls and by green fields and flowing rivers until they came to a place called Glen o' Campsie. Here the men said; "Let us climb the hill and descend into the valley at the other side." Then they found a shady place where they did eat and drink and make merry. At this part up came David with his camera, and with him one Brown (which being interpreted means Cage King) and they did take a picture of the brethren assembled. Then one Maxwell, of the tribe of Plainheads, said: "I must cross over the brook." And lo, when he had reached the middle, at a part which is called a stone, a great splash was heard, and all the men lifted up their voices and cried: "Save him." And when they had saved him and dried his raiment, he was exceeding glad, and did return to the chariot where the good wine was kept. There was found David, the son of Ashenhead, in the best of spirits—he was the man appointed to keep the bag—and when the company had roamed over the fields and woods, and the day was far spent, they drove back to the place called Partick and did meet women and children in their tents and did in course to them of the beauties of the place to which they had gone.—XYX

Does Hemp Seed Ruin Canaries?

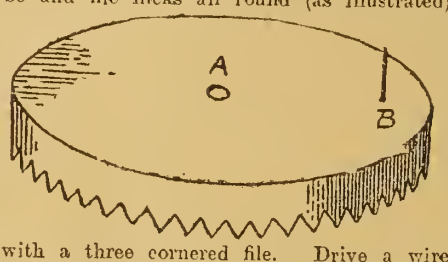
Bad Hemp Does—Good Hemp Does Not.

Sir,—As the correspondence on this subject appears to me to have arisen out of an article of mine which you published over twelve months ago, I should like to point out that the article in question referred particularly to the time when it was published. At the time it was written, I had ample proof—which, it may be remembered, was corroborated by your enquiries before you published the article—that the condition of the great bulk of hemp which was then on the market was such as to call for some sort of publicity in the interests of fanciers generally. But this does not necessarily apply to the conditions to-day, although it is well to be aware that at the fag end of the season, just before the new crop comes in, much old, rancid seed is apt to be met with. It is no exaggeration to say that bad hemp is one of the most unwholesome and dangerous foods for Canaries, but, given a good sound and sweet seed, there are few, if any more valuable and wholesome items of the Canary's diet, particularly when young are being reared, though it should be used at all times with reasonable moderation. I do not condemn the seed, and have never done so, because that which is bad is a danger to health, for this would be analagous to condemning good honest roast beef because one had eaten with disastrous results a steak in which decomposition had set in. Then, apart from the question of quality of seed, I have no doubt in my own mind that hemp is often made objectionable by crushing and smashing the kernel and husk together and keeping it many hours in this condition. The practice of crushing hemp is a comparatively recent one, and one of which personally I do not approve sufficiently to adopt it. The most that should be done is to lightly crack the husk, avoiding as far as possible injury to the kernel. I note one correspondent says "It is sure to cause looseness in the bowels." I am afraid he is somewhat at sea. Bad hemp will set up looseness, I admit, but a good sound quality has a decidedly opposite tendency.

Claude St. John.



In Praise of Exercise.

Sir,—From experience, my answer is: No, not with stock birds. I myself think the old phrase "What is one man's meat is another man's poison" holds good in this respect to birds. Last season I bred sixty young, the mothers all being young hens; the stock mixture from October until March being half canary and half hemp seed, twice a week a teaspoonful of lettuce seed to each bird, the birds being in a cold room facing due east. I found this mixture beneficial to them, and during the whole of the severe winter, I never had a bird go wrong, neither during the breeding season did I have any of my hens egg bound, and I consider this due to the excellent condition of my birds through being liberal with hemp seed. I used no egg-food during the breeding season, but fed entirely on bread (brown) and milk and hemp seed, not cracked. I may tell you how my birds were housed, as I consider this is a vital point in breeding any live stock. I had six hens in two flight cages—60 by 18 by 12—only two perches in. To get from seed to water they had to fly four feet, plenty of exercise; also a bath once a week; the cocks in separate cages measuring 18 by 18 by 9, plenty of room. My birds were all imported Rollers, and I had not the faintest idea as to what they had been fed on. I can only conclude by saying if all fanciers will see to their birds having roomy cages, they need not fear of using hemp seed. Not with Roller Canaries, anyhow. Celery tops make an ideal green food in winter; I also give apple, and a little carrot.

A Circular Saw from a Coffee Tin.

Sir,—A cheap circular saw for cutting out round cage doors may be useful now that the show season is upon us and many novices will be making show cages. To obtain perfectly round doors, get a lid of a coffee tin (or other lid) the size you wish the doors to be and file nicks all round (as illustrated) with a three cornered file. Drive a wire nail in the centre (A) when cutting out your door. A nail near the edge (B), with the head on the inside forms the handle. Press the tin lightly with thumb and finger when turning and you get perfectly round doors in quick time.

How Can We Make Our Shows Pay?

Reader Says: "No Shows, No Birds."

Sir,—I was disappointed not to see the correspondence under this heading continued last week. To my mind, it is a subject that ought to interest every fancier, considering that were there no shows, the price of Canaries would depreciate until they reached that of the common singing variety. In fact, there would be no demand, and consequently no necessity to breed the exhibition varieties of the Canary. The great industry of British bird-catching and retailing would receive a blow that would be disastrous, and many a man who earns an honest shilling in the winter months, when he is often enough unable to follow his regular employment, would be deprived of the means by which he keeps the body and soul of his family together. Fanciers must know that it is the shows which create the demand for exhibition stock, and the greater the number of shows, the greater the demand for stock, hence the larger the price fanciers are able to get for them. One or two of your correspondents' statements I don't agree with. Where one says that four classes for each variety are sufficient, I cannot agree. Societies should give a reasonable classification. Neither do I agree that the specialist club's patronage is a doubtful asset. I know that often enough where a powerful specialist club is giving their patronage, the society loses a little in entrance fees, but they must not forget that fanciers will travel a long distance to visit a show when the know that the cream of the variety are on view, and many a show is made to pay through its gate. I quite agree that societies have too heavy a printer's bill; and the suggestion that the schedule be advertised for a fortnight previous to the show is the most practical that has been made. I think it would reduce the printing and postage bill more than two-thirds. I notice that many pigeon societies have their schedules printed in the journal devoted to their hobby, and it is a suggestion worthy the adoption of our cage bird societies. It would only mean a couple of extra pages in Cage Birds, and the Editor is always willing to provide a little extra space for a consideration. What? Another point in the societies' favour is: The schedule would be brought to the notice of every fancier in the country at a much reduced expense. I have in mind one or two societies which have been very hard hit the last few years. Small classes and fewer visitors have depleted their funds, and in one case I know that they were openly ragged for stopping their classes at eight (half prize money). I for one don't blame them, and fanciers who do should remember that the men who run the shows are running them to benefit the Fancy generally, and not themselves; and that they are mostly working men, who can't afford to get their hands down very deeply, in order that outside fanciers may be paid their prize money. I know of one Society who, when they desired a class to stand at eight, instead of sending an outside fancier's entry back, they made one of their own members stand down in the same class. That is worthy the consideration of other societies. Good luck to 'em.

Late Breeding of House Martins.

Sir,—To-day (Sept. 27) while on a nature ramble with a friend, at Brandon, Warwickshire, I found a Martin's nest under the eaves of a house, and saw the old birds feeding some young ones. As it is so late in the year, I thought it might interest some of your readers, as it did me. Thanking you for the many useful hints I have got out of your paper, both for keeping birds, and nature notes.

Getting the Seed Out of Thistle Heads.

Sir,—I think my own device will beat hollow the idea of either filling the oven with thistle-heads, and burning the fluff when dry, or dropping the seeds, etc., into a shallow basin of water, as indicated in your last issue, and thereby avoid a "scene," which may possibly result when the good lady finds the said fluff blowing all over the house, as the fluff is left where it grew, and only the clean seed taken home. Readers will be more than surprised at the amount of seed they will be able to gather in a few hours. It will enable them to obtain a good supply of thistle-seed for winter's use. I guarantee to gather over 1lb. of seed in two hours. First you want a linen "bag," open at either end; or an old shirt sleeve will do equally as well. Then make a square wooden frame that will just fit inside the sleeve or bag, and wire this with cage-wire, set a quarter-inch apart (to form a kind of grid). Sew the wired frame into one end of the old sleeve, and tie a piece of string round the other end, when the appliance is complete. To gather the seed, take hold of the thistle-down, when the seed will come away on it, and rub this across the wire frame. Result, the seed drops into the bag, and the down is thrown away.

E. W. Humphrey.

A Good and Cheap "Down" Quilt.

Sir,—In removing thistle seed from the head, why waste the down, as this has a market value? Now that summer (alleged) is over and the time is at hand when the "flue" stalketh abroad, with the fog and drizzle, why not use that thistle-down to make a down quilt for your virtuous couch to keep you warm and snug at night? My method is this: we gather the heads, either white topped or just as they are turning drab colour. Then I borrow a bed sheet from my old stocking mender, and also her assistance to help me put it in position in the attic opposite the window. We first tie a length of cord at each end and another length in the middle of each side. Then I knock half-a-dozen nails in suitable positions for stretching and holding up the sheet. In the meantime we have had the bags containing the thistle heads resting on the top of the kitchen range or hung in front of the mantle shelf; this helps to mature them, but I do not care to allow them to get too hot. When the sheet is ready, and the heads ready for the sheet, we empty the bags, and let sun and time do the rest. The result is seed in fine condition by turning the mass of heads over on the sheet every couple of days until all is garnered. Separate the shells from that precious down, now well dried and ready for those deft fingers found in every household for this kind of job. I have gathered sufficient thistles around Manchester this season to make us a good thick quilt.

The Suggested Cage Bird Society for Buckinghamshire.

SIR, Re your correspondents' letter (Messrs. Bowler), I quite agree with them in holding a Cage Bird Society on its own, as I believe there are plenty of fanciers in the above district capable of managing a show for cage birds. Perhaps Messrs. Bowler could give us a start by acting as secretaries, so that we may start at once. I should like to suggest a yearly subscription of 3s. 6d. Will Messrs. Bowler suggest a time and place of meeting, so that we may see about commencing. I think there should be a possibility of holding a show later this year, providing, of course, there is sufficient membership to make a fair start, as we must walk before we commence to run.

T. W. FRYER.

Youngster Hatched when Week Overdue.

SIR,—Kindly allow me a little space in your valuable paper, which I have taken since its first issue. I have been a breeder and exhibitor for half-a-century. I had a hen Canary that laid me three eggs in succession on my last round. She sat the time, thirteen days, and hatched two young ones out of the three eggs. When they were a week old, I took the other egg out, and as I thought it was an unfertile one, I smashed it. To my surprise there was a live young one in the egg. I picked the shell from it, and put it along with the other two in the nest, and the mother brought it up, and it is one of the finest birds I have bred this season. I wonder if any one has ever done the same? If any one wishes to see it, they can do so at 56, Kent Street, Bolton, Lancashire.

Badges for Fanciers.

SIR,—I shall be very glad if you will kindly allow me a little space in your esteemed paper to put before your readers, an idea which, I think, would be very useful to bird-keepers generally. I suggest that all fanciers, or anyone interested in the hobby of bird-keeping, should, whenever possible, wear a small badge or token to show this. If this was done, fanciers, when visiting strange places for business or pleasure, could readily find out if they were meeting with brother fanciers or not. Probably if this idea is taken up by readers, the Editor would be willing to supply suitable badges for a few pence each. A suitable engraving or inscription would be "C.B.F.," that is, Cage Bird Fanciers. Having made the suggestion, I hope some abler fancier will give his views on the matter through the columns of CAGE BIRDS.

BADGER.

Surely nothing could be better for this admirable purpose than the tasteful badge of CAGE BIRDS LEAGUE, which may be obtained practically for nothing. (See col. 2).—Ed.

Canaries that Save Life.

Sir,—It will be news, I expect, to many of your numerous readers to know that the government of this country, has realised the value of Canaries in the saving of life. In the new Mines Regulation Act, which came in force this last July, it is made compulsory that all collieries in the United Kingdom must have a certan place set apart for the upkeep of Canaries. These birds are kept in readiness in case of explosions, so that they can soon be on the scene of action. In the district where I live, there is a well kept aviary close to the pit mouth, and in the event of an explosion, the birds are first sent down the shaft, in little cages to prove whether it is fit for human beings to go down. In the explosion that occurred in our village nearly two years ago, the Pretoria disaster, all the rescue men had each a bird to hold in front of him, as he travelled in the roads looking for his comrades. He kept his eye on the bird, and if the bird dropped off the perch, he knew at once that the air was foul, and he had to turn back until there was more ventilation. The birds soon get right as soon as they get taken where there is more air, and are great pets of their owners.

CAGE BIRDS LEAGUE.

NOTES BY THE SECRETARY.

The list of patrons and vice-presidents will be found on page 763 of our last issue.

The Filling Up of Our Coupons.

Among the large number of signed coupons that continue to come in by every post, there are still a proportion which have been insufficiently or improperly filled up. Several readers have sent just one signed coupon, together with five names and addresses on a separate slip of paper. Others, again, send six coupons, but fill them all up themselves. The conditions are very plain, and easily fulfilled, and it is surprising that any misunderstanding could possibly arise. However, it seems that it does exist, and I have, therefore, once again to point out that badges will only be sent to those who strictly follow the instructions so plainly set out on the coupon.

The number of applications for registration as Associates of the LEAGUE is so great that they cannot always be attended to the same day as received. Will those who do not receive their badges by return of post please note that applications are dealt with in the order received, and that all receive attention at the earliest possible moment.

Overdue Subscriptions.

I have again to announce that a very large number of LEAGUE MEMBERS are forgetting that they have been members for more than a year, and that their renewal subscription of one shilling is overdue. It will be esteemed a great favour if members will be kind enough to send along a postal order for one shilling, to save the trouble and expense of making separate application by postcard.

"Cage Birds" Fund for the Distress in Norwich.

Our fund in aid of those who suffered so disastrously through the late floods in Norwich amounts to £12 12s. 6d., the following amounts having been received since the last list: C. St. John 2s. 6d., P. Johnstone 2s., J. H. Hills 1s. 6d., W. Downing 1s. The fund is now due to close, and I should be glad if all those intending to subscribe will be kind enough to forward their contributions without further delay, so that we may put in hand the distribution by the committee who have kindly undertaken the task the money subscribed by CAGE BIRDS readers in aid of their fellow fanciers who are in distress. One of our committee of voluntary helpers, Mr. F. Cullington, writes that they are still hearing of bird rooms that were flooded out, and in another letter, Mr. Cullington sends the sad news published in our obituary columns this week, in which he says that the sad bereavement which has fallen upon Mr. Wigger was directly due to the effects of the devastating flood. Members of CAGE BIRDS LEAGUE, and readers generally of our organ, CAGE BIRDS, may depend, of course, that every penny received will be put to practical use and applied to cases of real necessity only.

TERMS OF MEMBERSHIP.

PATRONS.—A donation of not less than Ten Guineas in one amount, or an annual subscription of not less than Two Guineas, shall constitute the donor or subscriber a Patron.

LIFE MEMBERS.—A donation of not less than Five Guineas in one amount shall constitute the donor a Life Member.

VICE PRESIDENTS.—An annual subscription of not less than Half-a-Guinea shall constitute the subscriber a Vice President.

HONORARY LIFE MEMBERS.—The payment to CAGE BIRDS LEAGUE of a legacy of £20 and upwards shall constitute the administrator or executor making the payment an Honorary Life Member. A form of bequest will be sent, post free, on application.

ORDINARY MEMBERS shall pay an annual subscription of Two Shillings and Sixpence.

JUNIOR MEMBERS.—Members under the age of fourteen years at the date of joining shall pay an annual subscription of One Shilling.

Leaflets setting forth the aims and objects of the LEAGUE will be forwarded, post free, to any reader upon application.

BADGES.

Neat and unobtrusive badges are supplied to members, without any charge beyond their subscriptions as above. The badges may be had either in button form, or mounted in rolled gold in two forms, one as a brooch for ladies or for cycling caps or coat lapel, and the other as a pendant for bracelet or watch-chain. The kind required should be specified clearly.

MEDALS.

Gold, Silver, and Bronze Medals are offered for competition among CAGE BIRDS LEAGUE members at Open Shows. The terms under which these will be given may be had upon application.

CAGE BIRDS FREE TO PATRONS.

SEALS AND HEADED NOTEPAPER.

GUMMED SEALS printed in gold and colours in facsimile of the LEAGUE BADGE are supplied for affixing to note paper, post-cards, or envelopes. Price eightpence per hundred, fivepence for fifty, post free.

100 Sheets, Two Shillings and sixpence.
250 Sheets, Four shillings.
500 Sheets, Five shillings and sixpence.
1,000 Sheets, Eight shillings and sixpence.
All post free.

Members are entitled, if application is made at the time of joining, to a free copy of a sixpenny pamphlet on British Bird Culture, or a similar treatise on Canary and Hybrid Culture.

Safeguarding the Bath.

Sent in by A. E. Huyton, 2, Byron Road, Blundell Sands, near Liverpool.

Preventing Waste of Seed.

Sent in by J. Smith, 24, Clipsley Lane, Haydock, near St. Helens.

The seed-hopper illustrated prevents the wasting of seed, and can easily be made. Out of a tin (such as a biscuit tin) cut a 6in. square and mark off 1½in. at sides, from top to bottom, as shown at A. Then cut corner off, as shown at dotted line, B, and fold over at the dotted lineA, leaving a little overlap on the B line to hold glued back in place. Then solder on a piece of cage-wire at top and bottom to prevent the glass from falling inwards. Turn a piece of the tin under to form the bottom, trim it, and solder. Use a pair of compasses when cutting out the hole for the bird's head. Then slide in the glass.—J. SMITH.

Many readers of CAGE BIRDS have written to say that they would like to join CAGE BIRDS' LEAGUE, but cannot afford the subscription. To meet their wishes we have decided to form, in connection with the LEAGUE, a body of Associates. All we ask of these Associates is that they will promise to give every possible attention to the wants of their birds. And they must induce others to see that their birds are kept happy and contented.

All that the intending Associate has to do is to sign the coupon herewith, get five of his or her friends to sign each a similar coupon, and send the six, together with a penny stamp, to the Secretary of CAGE BIRDS' LEAGUE, who will forward by return an enamelled Button Badge of the LEAGUE. There will be no other charge. NOW, THEN, BIRD LOVERS!—USE YOUR BEST EFFORTS IN THIS SPLENDID CAUSE.

Monthly meeting held Nag's Head Cocoa Rooms, Sept. 24, Mr. F. C. Parker presiding. The four handsome cups to be won outright at annual show were on view. They were approved by all members present. The cups will be awarded to Yorkshires (kindly presented by Mrs. Way, President of the Society); Norwich, Novices, and British, respectively. The schedule was completed, and will be in members' hands in a few days. Messrs. J. L. Pike, Windsor, and Huxley were enrolled as members. Those intending joining can have full particulars from hon. sec. Membership open to United Kingdom.—R. L. G. Simpson, 35, Clare Av., Hoole, Chester.

CITY AND SUBURBAN ASSN.

Meeting held Sept. 23, at 59 and 60, Paddington Street, W. Mr. W. Shepherd in the chair. There was a good attendance of members, and after the usual business, Mr. Marley and Mr. A. C. Rudd were unanimously elected members of the association. A judging competition in the Norwich Plainheads took place, there being fourteen birds staged for the occasion, Mr. Curtis being the final judge, who, with his usual kindness, explained his reasons for placing the cards, and gave some very useful information in the selection of exhibition birds. Mr. Burton was elected to judge Yorks. in the competition for Oct. 28. A vote of thanks to Mr. Curtis for his valuable services, also to the chairman, closed a very interesting meeting.—F. Knight.

ANFIELD, EVERTON C.B.S.

Adjourned general meeting, held headquarters September 16. As the Hon. Sec. has suffered two bereavements in his family, and his father is lying dangerously ill with cancer, Mr. Rawsthorne acted in his stead. A new schedule was drawn up, not quite satisfactory to the novices, and a committee meeting has been held to consider this matter, and others arising out of a number of questions that were asked of the chairman. Satisfactory explanations have been given, and things are in a thoroughly sound condition. These matters are (according to the rules), invested in the committee, as they are the governing members of the society. Mr. Young was in attendance to deliver his promised lecture, but as there was not time, it had to be omitted. There are a number of subscriptions now due, and I would remind members, and those intending to join, that these must be in before the next show, November 16th, otherwise they will be too late to stand a chance to win any cups, etc. Next meeting October 14th.—R. B. Wright, Hon. Sec.

SCOTTISH CRESTED C.C.

Committee meeting held in Neilson's Temperance Hotel, Ingram Street, Glasgow, September 14. In the absence of the President, Mr. Adamson (Kilmarnock) occupied the chair, with a fair attendance of members. Correspondence was read from Messrs. Whitton (Broughty Ferry), Dewar (Edinburgh), and McNaughton (Larbert). Several applications for patronage were considered, and the following were successful, viz., Scottish National, and City of Dundee (conditionally). Secretary read communication from Scottish National Executive in which they agreed to give four classes for young birds at their forthcoming show. It was therefore decided to place 2 gold medals for young birds (confined to members of S.C.C.C.), and also to solicit and place as many special prizes as possible, and it is hoped that members will take advantage of the increased classification granted by the "National," and endeavour to make those classes a complete success. Secretary had a quantity of new club drinkers at meeting for distribution, and any members who wish supplies should send in their orders as early as possible.—John Young.

Grantham C.B.S. schedules are now ready. Arrangements, we hear, have been made for all birds entered at both Sheffield and Grantham shows, to be forwarded on, so as to reach same night.

As I have received numerous applications for schedules, writes Mr. Mugford, Hon. Sec. London C.B.A., would you kindly inform fanciers that the same will be ready in November, when a copy will be sent to those who have applied.

Mr. Charles Boulton, St. Helens, writes Mr. H. R. Macdonald, Hon. Sec. Thatto Heath O.S., has kindly promised to give us a lecture at our next meeting, Oct. 7, at 8 o'clock. All members and fellow fanciers are particularly requested to attend.

We have pleasure in congratulating Mr. A. R. Coe, the Hon. Sec. of Clapham C.B.A., upon the well got up schedule which he says is the first he has ever compiled or helped to compile. The schedule certainly shows no trace of a novice's hand, and is quite a credit to the society.

Mr. G. Morton, 35, Paterson St., Birkenhead, Secretary of the Liverpool Amalgamated Show, will be pleased if the secretaries of the Booth's and Garston Societies will send him the names and addresses of their delegates for the next show, as he wishes to call a meeting.

OBITUARY.

Last week it was our painful duty to announce the sad death of Mr. Tinniswood Miller, and we have received the following letter from Mrs. Miller:—"I desire to thank you (also your readers) most gratefully for your sympathy with me in this great trial, and for your appreciation of my late husband. His last thoughts were for me and the birds we both loved so well."

I am very sorry, writes Mr. F. Cullington, to have to inform you of the death of Mrs. Wigger, wife of Mr. R. Wigger. When your Mr. Weston came to Norwich at the time of the great flood, he saw Mr. Wigger and mentioned in CAGE BIRDS the sorry plight he was in at the time, after having more than five feet of water in his house. No doubt the damp and worry were the cause of her death. Mr. Wigger is well-known and greatly respected by all the fanciers in Norwich, and we one and all deeply sympathise with him in his sad bereavement.

Mr. W. Urquhart, Paisley.

I regret to announce the death of Mr. William Urquhart, at the age of 64 years, writes Mr. John Stewart, Paisley. He was for many years president of the Paisley Tannahill O.S., and was up till a short time ago an enthusiastic breeder of the Scotch Fancy Canary, and was a well-known winner at all the principal shows. He leaves a widow and family of grown up sons, to whom the deepest sympathy of fellow fanciers is extended.

In connection with the Lancashire Amalgamated Societies, writes Mr. J. Cope, Sec., Oldham C.B.A., a meeting will be held at Smallbridge, Oct. 12, at 3.30, when I shall be pleased to see all delegates attend. Business will be classification for show, selection of judge, entry fee, and other important matters. It is hoped that all societies will be fully represented.

Mr. Wilfred Dean, the popular financial secretary, of the Matlock F.S., makes his debut as judge of Norwich at a local show to be held at Stanton-in-the-Peak, Derbyshire, Oct. 5, writes Mr. Tom Boden, Chairman. We hope to hear more of Mr. Wilf adjudicating at cage birds' shows in the near future, and we all wish this most ardent Norwich fancier every success. Mr. J. S. Cooper, another Matlock fancier, is taking British birds.

An enviable reputation amongst exhibitors and bird-keepers generally has been acquired by Messrs. W. A. Rudd and Co., of 180, Bishopsgate Street, London, E.C., whose seeds and foods are recognised as being of the highest possible quality at the keenest possible prices. The firm has built up a big trade amongst those who know a good article when they see it, and a perusal of their advertisement on another page should be undertaken by everyone.

Mr. A. R. Coe, Sec., Clapham C.B.S., 18, Caldervale Road, Clapham Park, S.W., asks us to notify that he will accept entries up to Saturday evening, Oct. 5, the date of this issue, but no later under any circumstances, as the catalogue must be in the hands of the printers on Monday morning. St. Anne's Hall, Venn St., Clapham, where the show will be held, is two minutes' walk from Clapham Rd. station and one minute from Clapham Common Electric Station. Electric trams pass the road from Victoria, Waterloo, Westminster and Blackfriars. It is also well served by motor buses.

Having been appointed secretary of the Spen Valley C.B.S., writes Mr. J. Bamford, all further correspondence must be addressed to me at 4, Clarence St., Westgate, Cleckheaton.

Littleborough C.B.S. have engaged Mr. Jas. Hoyle, of Dearnley, to judge their show to be held in the Parish Church School, Nov. 9, writes Mr. H. Woodhead, Hon. Sec.

I have secured the Queen's Hall for our open show, writes Mr. E. Thomas, Sec., Cardiff C.B.S. A new hall in the centre of the City, also in the main street. Cars pass the hall. It will be much better for visitors.

I have received numerous applications for schedules for our forthcoming show on Nov. 13 and 14, writes Mr. S. H. George, sec., Swansea and Dis. C.B.S. The same will be forwarded to the various applicants at our very earliest.

We are asked to notify the following changes of addresses:—J. E. Davies, from Higher Brinksway, Stockport, to Moss Hall, Outwood, Handforth, Cheshire; J. H. Nelson, to 81, Bury New Road, Bolton; A. Chambers, from Hill Wootton, Warwick, to Fordington House, Dorchester; E. J. Whittome, from 61, Ellerby St., Fulham, to 90, Acre Lane, Brixton. W. Baxby, from Coal Aston, to 6, Chesterfield Road, Dronfield.

Scotch Fancies on Tyneside.

"Canny Toon" writes:—"Ask Jimmy Little, and he will tell you when the Scotch Fancy was as popular on Tyneside as the Norwich, Yorkshire, or Border is to-day. It has declined, but there are some keen fanciers still left who intend to revive its popularity, and have made a bold bid at the forthcoming Newcastle show. In addition to the prize money, there is a special of 5s. on every class and a 10s 6d. special for best Scotch Fancy, as well as a guinea for best bird in show; so if this won't do it, what will? Mr. Chapman, who has been the moving spirit in this attempt to revive one of the noblest of the Canary tribe, tells me that he hopes this will induce the breeders in Scotland to send their birds."

Singing Contests.

LEEDS.

Open contest for quality, held at the Old Bird House, King's Head, Shannon Street, Leeds, Sept. 28, when 22 birds sang for four good prizes given by Mr. Wm. Tillotson. 1, 2, C. Ward; 3, 4, Butler. Judges, S. Hardcastle and W. Naylor. Also Sept. 29, when 25 birds sang for four good prizes. 1, A. Butler; 2, H. Wigfield; 3, T. Johnson; 4, Richardson. Judges, S. Hardcastle, A. Jennings, and W. Naylor.—Walter Naylor, Hon. Sec.

Linnet contest, Sept. 28, Skinner's Arms, Buslingthorpe, 14 birds were hung. 1, 2, Sellers; 3, C. Clayton. Judges, Turner and Lorriman. Also Sept. 29, 18 birds were hung. 1, 2, Sellers and Ward; 3, Sellers. Judges, Summers and Clayton.—C. W. Smith.

Singing contest at Prince Albert Hotel, Newtown, Sept. 29, when 18 birds competed for three good prizes given by Mrs. Saynor. 1, Playforth, 2 3, shared by Chippendale and Madden. Judges, C. Lorriman and Turner. Four of our members sang their birds again, the winner to take the lot, P. Madden being the successful competitor. Judges A. Binns and A. Lorriman.—J. Smith, Sec.

SALFORD.

Final meeting held at the Boat House Hotel, on Sept. 29, and the members decided for the future to transfer the club to the Butchers' Arms, Union Street, Pendlebury, owing to it being more central for the Linnet fanciers. A meeting will be held on Oct. 6th, at Pendlebury, at 7.30 prompt, for the purpose of election of officers and future business. Every fancier in the surrounding district is specially invited to attend. Any information will be given by Mr. E. Hickman, secretary pro tem, 13, Park Lane West, Pendlebury.—B. Wharton, Hon. Sec. Salford L.C.

UNIQUE OPPORTUNITY

RELIABLE ACCLIMATISED SPECIMENS,

Practically the whole collection of Monsieur R. PAUWELS' Everberg Aviaries

TO BE DISPOSED OF.

Explanatory Reprint from "Cage Birds"—

"CAGE BIRDS," September 28th, 1912.

Dispersal of a Famous Collection of Birds.

We have an item of news to convey this week which will come as a surprise to avieulturists, and be received, we think, with no small amount of regret. It is that the famous collection of birds brought together by Mons. Pauwels, of Everberg, Belgium, is to be dispersed. By the aid of Mr. O. Millsum, the well-known English avieulturist (late of Swindon) during the last few years there has been gathered together at Everberg a superb assemblage of the gems of the avian tribe, probably unsurpassed by any other private collection in the world. The many unique examples M. Pauwels has exhibited at the chief London shows, to the delight of all bird-lovers here, will be readily recalled—the Cock of the Rock, the Fairy Blue Bird, the Blue Budgerigars, and the Birds of Paradise come at once to the mind.

It will be readily realised that it is not without a pang that M. Pauwels gives up his birds, or Mr. Millsum severs his connection with them. But Mr. Millsum has been led to the latter decision in the interests of his wife and children. M. Pauwels, though he deeply regrets the severance, admits that he (Mr. M.) has decided aright, and in view of the nature of his collection of birds, and that he cannot replace Mr. Millsum's services under similar conditions, has reluctantly come to the conclusion that he had best dispose of all his stock, excepting, maybe, the inmates of the largest British Bird aviary. As Mr. Millsum practically founded the collection, he is, at M. Pauwels' expressed wish, to stay at Everberg until he has disposed of it.

All specimens guaranteed fully acclimatised.

MR. O. MILLSUM,
Everberg, Brabant, Belgium.

PREPAID ADVERTISEMENTS

UNDISPLAYED.—6d. for the first eighteen words. One Halfpenny per Word for each word over eighteen. Name and address to be reckoned. MINIMUM, 18 words 6d.

IMPORTANT NOTE.—Two or more Advertisements coming from the same advertiser, even if sent in different names, are reckoned together, and, after the first Eighteen words, are charged at two words a penny, but no single advertisement, even if accompanied by others, will be charged at less than the minimum price, viz., Sixpence.

Headlines or Footlines, 6d., 9d., 1/-, 1/6, according to size.

ADVERTISEMENTS UNACCOMPANIED BY CORRECT REMITTANCE WILL NOT BE INSERTED.

Postal Orders must be sent as far as possible. All moneys should be made payable to F. CARL.

The Proprietor reserves the right to refuse any advertisement, or to cancel any advertisement ordered for a series, at any time, without assigning any reason for so doing.

Advertisements must in all cases bear the bona fide name and address of the advertiser, and no advertisement will be inserted if addressed to a receiving office, or similar place of call.

Small prepaid advertisements of a general nature and not connected in any way with the Cage Bird Trade are inserted at the rate of ½d. per word throughout. Minimum 12 words 6d.

Advertisements close Tuesdays first post in each week, and should be sent to the advertisement Manager, CAGE BIRDS, 154, Fleet Street, London. Terms for Display Advertisements on application.

REPEATING OF ADVERTISEMENTS

Advt. Manager. "Cage Birds."

ALWAYS USE OUR DEPOSIT SYSTEM.

We are not responsible for the statements made in advertisements, nor of the bona-fides of either buyers or sellers In all transactions the adoption of our Deposit System should be insisted upon

IMPORTANT.

SEND THE FULL COMMISSION.—If the full commission does not accompany the deposit, the vendor will not be notified of its receipt until the amount deficient, plus the extra postage incurred, has been paid to us.

HOW TO REMIT.—Under no circumstances will Cheques or Post-dated Money Orders be accepted as deposits. Uncrossed Postal Orders must be sent and the numbers taken for safety.

RULES.

1.—PROCEDURE.—The intending purchaser should send to this office the amount of the purchase (our deposit fee included), and at the same time he should communicate with the seller, stating what it is he requires sent on approval. We acknowledge receipt of the deposit to both parties. In all cases the depositor should give his name and address, and also that of the vendor, and must write same clearly and distinctly.

2.—END OF TRANSACTION.—The deposit is retained by us until we hear from both parties that the transaction has been completed. If a sale has been effected, we hand the amount deposited to the seller. If a sale has not been effected, we return the amount to the depositor. The transaction must be conducted by the parties themselves. We merely hold the deposit.

3.—AMOUNT OF COMMISSION.—The fee is 6d. for each £1, or fraction of £1, and it must be sent at same time as the deposit.

4.—IMPORTANT POINTS.—The depositor must decide within forty-eight hours of the receipt of the goods whether he will keep or return the same, unless, that is, some other period of approval (of which we must be advised) is agreed upon by both parties. The depositor must at the same time notify us of the fact that he has returned the goods. If the goods are not returned within the said forty-eight hours, we reserve the right to send the deposit to the seller after the expiration of that period. And should the seller fail within three days to notify us of the receipt of his goods back again, the transaction will be treated as ended, and the deposit will be returned to the depositor.

5.—A SATISFACTORY PURCHASE.—When a transaction has been completed to the satisfaction of both depositor and seller, both parties must at once return the deposit receipts as a guarantee of its completion. The depositor must at the same time instruct us to pay over the deposit to the seller.

6.—GOODS ALREADY SOLD.—If the goods are sold before our deposit note reaches the seller, or if for any other reason he declines to do business, he must at once return the deposit note to us. Failing its receipt, we reserve the right to return the deposit to the sender after the expiration of three days.

7.—FRESH TRANSACTION.—In case no sale be effected, a deposit is available for purposes of a fresh transaction, provided another deposit fee be paid.

8.—GOODS IN TRANSIT.—Goods in transit are at the seller's risk, and any damage or loss sustained on the journey must be borne by the seller. But goods not approved of must be properly packed and returned by the same means as were used in sending the same.

9.—PAYMENT OF CARRIAGE.—The payment of carriage must be a matter for arrangement between the vendor and depositor. We do not undertake to settle disputes affecting question of carriage. But in the absence of other arrangements the purchaser is liable for the carriage of the goods, and if the goods are sent on approval and returned, each party pays the carriage one way.

10.—DISPUTES.—In case of a dispute, the decision of the Editor is final.

These net traps are entirely different to the old fashioned board traps, and are by far largest and most effective traps on the market. Single trap cages, 6d. each, 5/- dozen; double ditto, 1/- each, 10/- dozen; treble ditto, 1/3 each, 12/- dozen; all have separate compartment for call bird, in addition to traps stated. Patent self-setting and self-acting trap cages (reg. No. 23927), guaranteed to automatically reset immediately each bird is caught, 1/6 each; round or square-topped call cages, all wire tops and wood bottoms, 4d. each, 3/- dozen; real Japanese bird lime, guaranteed strongest lime made, stands all weathers, and holds in rain, ¼lb. 6d., ½lb. 10d., 1lb. 1/6, sample 3d., all post free. Please note, as the name of my lime is being copied by others, I beg to say I have no agents whatever, and it is of utmost importance that you should order direct from me if you want the genuine article. Loose thread netting, as used in my nets, ¾in. mesh, 7ft. deep, 3d. yard, ditto 9ft. deep 4d. yard, ditto 12ft. deep 5d. yard; extra stout netting, for use on rough ground, ¾in. mesh, 5d. yard; Lark or Starling netting, 1¼in. mesh, 12ft. deep, 4d. yard; all netting post free. Flirt pegs and lines, 6d. each post free; Italian hemp pull lines, specially spun by hand, free from snarl, 60 yards long, and strong as boat lines, 1/4 each, post free; brace swivels, three 3d., twelve 6d., post free; birds' calls for imitating call and song of all birds, 2d. each, six 6d., twelve 10d., post free; absolutely every up-to-date article required by catchers always in stock and ready for immediate dispatch; send stamp for full descriptive list, which also gives hints on net-making. Following testimonials speak volumes for quality of my appliances. "Gedney, Holbeach, Lincs., September 3, 1912.—Sir,—The pair 12-yard clap nets safely to hand. They are an exceptionally good pair, and thread so fine they are hardly visible, and they match the ground so well. Rather different nets for Linnet catching to the herring and garden netting offered for sale by many netmakers, who ought to know better than send such rubbish out. Without doubt, yours are best fine thread nets extant. I shall want more shortly.—Yours, Charlie Cubley." "Wood St., Guildford, August 22.—Sir,—Received the two pairs nets safely. I am well pleased, and so is my friend. We shall not take the trouble to make them when we can get them so good as these for the money.—Yours, S. Bowen." "4, Castle Place, Scarborough, Aug. 25.—Sir,—Please send 1lb. lime. It is best lime I can get. I caught over 200 birds with last lot.—Yours, W. Whitehead." "64, Main St., Renton, Scotland, Aug. 13.—Sir,—Please send 1lb. lime, as the last pound I got from you was the envy of all the catchers here. I cannot say enough in its favour.—Yours, J. McKinn." "52, Silver St., Nenagh, Ireland, Aug. 17.—Sir,—Please send following. The net trap was best I ever saw for the money. I caught 38 Goldfinches with it first day.—Yours, Dennis Hayes." "55, Rockdale Rd., Tunbridge Wells, Aug. 23.—Sir,—Please send 24 yards netting. I had some from you 7 years ago, and am still using it.—Yours, H. England." If you want reliable serviceable appliances, send to the man who makes them; no connection whatever with any other advertiser.

IF YOU OWN CANARIES YOU SHOULD TEST THIS BOOK.

Because it tells you how to make a success of your birds; how to select them; how to feed and treat them; how to breed from them; and—if you go in for owning valuable specimens—how to wash and dress them for Exhibition, and how to care for them while they are at the Shows,

This book tells you when to mate your Canaries; when to breed, when to feed; when to doctor them and when to let them alone; when to strengthen your stock and when to weed out the poorer birds; when to buy and when to sell.

There is an Index of some 600 items in which you can turn up in an instant any point relating to your birds on which you need immediate guidance. At the same time the sections are written by such genuine Bird Lovers and practical Fanciers that they prove interesting reading for everyone who is interested in Cage Birds and who opens the pages at random and reads right on.

The book is admirably planned so as to help the beginner equally with the experienced breeder. Each section begins at the elementary knowledge on the subject treated and all the processes are clearly explained. With this soundly practical work in his possession many an owner of only one or two birds will be led into the delightful hobby of Canary Breeding.

And it gives the results of years of patient experiment on the part of Specialists in this difficult business of Canary Breeding and embodies rules for success that have never before been published. So that "Canaries & Cage Birds" is equally necessary for the man who has been long at Canary Breeding as for the novice. It tells him of the crosses that have never yet been achieved and will help him to excel in those points he is most uncertain about.

"Canaries and Cage Birds" is the newest, the best and the fullest work on the market dealing with this important subject of Canary Breeding. It covers the whole wide field of information concerning British Birds in Cages.

But we do not ask you to take our word for this, WE ASK YOU TO SEND FOR THE WORK FREE OF COST, and to

I have supplied more contest winners than anyone in England; heaps of unsolicited testimonials to prove this; same address 25 years: Woods, Cross-st., Dunstable.

SOFTBILL keepers, take expert advice before proceeding to buy and keep the larger species of Insectivorous birds. You will then have no trouble in keeping your pets in the best of health. This advice is offered in "Nutshell No. 26," by H. J. Fulljames. It is a wonderful little work, dealing with most varieties in a highly interesting and instructive manner. Foods and their preparation, and the various styles of cages also receive full attention. Can you breed Mealworms? This booklet tells you how. Post free, 2½d., from "Cage Birds," 154, Fleet-st., London, E.C. Look at our list of agents; call on the nearest and get it for 2d.

HARRY ALLEN, THE ORIGINAL LINNET KING

Six house-moulted Linnets, finger tame, that have won 50 first prizes between them, will sing anywhere, and will sing face to face with any other bird, 5/-, 7/6; and one a real champion, 10/6; they are all clean moulted; 2 house-moulted Goldfinches, real beauties, singing with full voice, can win at local shows, 7/6 each,; these are toppers; real English Peartree cock Goldfinches, the largest in England, singing hard, 2/-, 3/-; full coloured Goldfinches, for the bench, sure prize winners, 4/6; these birds have swept the deck in all open shows; Linuets, sure prize-winners, the largest in Englaud, without a doubt, fit for exhibition, these are my A1 specials, 2/-, and one a stormer 3/-; the Linnet I sold Mr. King got first prize at Newcastle and Dis. C.B.S., in a class of 34; this Linnet won all before him that year, and was sold to a gentleman at Morecambe for £3; this was one of Harry's A1 specials. Linnets taught by the Champion Linnet of the World will sing anywhere, with new cage and my book of secrets, 2/6, 3/6, and a few right for catching or contest singing, 4/6; Larks, singing daylight and gaslight, as straight as an arrow, 1/-, 1/6, 2/-; a few hand-reared ones, finger tame, can win on the bench, and singing full voice, 3/6 and 4/6; they are very large birds; Chaffinches, Yellowhammers, Greenfinches, splendid specimens for the bench, 1/6 each; Redpolls and Twites, 1/-, 1/6; Rollers, the finest in England; notice to all Roller Clubs, before purchasing Canaries from anyone, try one of mine for a sample, as I know what is wanted; I have supplied contests for years throughout England with these birds, 7/6, 8/6, 10/6, and the best Rollers in England 12/6, all on approval. Please read what others say: 16, Delburn-st., Parkhead, Glasgow.—Dear Sir,—I received Linnet all right, and thank you very much for sending such a nice bird. It is a real stormer, and sings from morning till night. I have paid twice the amount for a bird not half so good. I wish you every success, hoping fellow readers of "Cage Birds" will take my advise and try one.—I remain, your true friend, F. J. Miller, to Harry Allen. Please give me a trial; you will find my judgment above any other; only honest dealing done with me. P.C. before birds, so send to the fountain head, your old friend: Harry Allen, Bird Specialist and Judge, City Aviaries, 40, Beckett-st., Leeds.
